Inquiry Rebukes Police on Delay In Solving 'Leak'

Crime Inquiry Cannot Interfere in Routine, Headley Warned.

Committee Recalls 5th Precinct Aids

Inspector Bean Told to Make Investigation of Raid Mystery.

By J. Bernard McDonnell.

Washington police were upbraided yesterday by members of the House District Crime Investigating Committee for failure to investigate promptly the celebrated "tip-off" case, in which accusations by inference were bandied about among attaches of the department.

A warning was given by Representative William T. Schulte, of Indiana, who presided at a committee hearing, that the inquiry into crime conditions and the police department was no excuse for delay in such cases. A similar warning was voiced during another warm exchange between Inspector Albert J. Headley, Mr. Schulte and John R. Fitzpatrick, committee counsel.

Inspector Headley, Capt. Joseph E. Morgan, commander of the Fifth Precinct, and Precinct Detective Watson Salkeld had been recalled, and Lieut. Lloyd Kelly, of the Fifth Precinct, and Hugh W. Fred, restaurant proprietor, had been summoned by the committee to answer additional questions about the charge that an impending raid on a gambling place at 113 B street southeast had been tipped off in advance.

"This committee can't interfere with your work, inspector," Representative Schulte retorted after Inspector Headley said he had not attempted to ascertain the basis for the "tip-off" charge because he feared he might be interfering with the committee investigation.

Investigation Ordered.

While the committee was continuing its inquiry, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen summoned Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police; Inspector Thaddeus R. Bean, assistant superintendent of police; E. Barrett Prettyman, corporation counsel, and Edward W. Thomas, assistant corporation counsel, to discuss the matter and ordered Inspector Bean to make a thorough investigation. Bean's report, however, was ordered withheld pending completion of the crime committee inquiry.

Changes in the personnel of the precinct were forecast in official circles. Transfer of Capt. Morgan and others was expected.

Inspector Headley has supervision of the district which includes the Fifth Precinct. Ordinarily he would be called on to make the investigation. Designation of Inspector Bean to do so, Commissioner Hazen said, was not a reflection on Inspector Headley.

"We named Bean," the Commissioner said, "because he outranks Headley and because we did not think it would be proper for Headley to inquire into a matter in which he is indirectly involved.

"We are determined to learn who gave the 'tip-off.' When this is done, charges will be brought against the guilty party."

Whether there had been a "tip-off," or who did the tipping was not proved before the committee during its second day of inquiry into the subject.

Mr. Fred, the man from whom Capt. Morgan said he had received

Union Cabinet Rules Belgium

Devaluation of the Belga Forecast as Part of New Program.

By the Associated Press.

Brussels March 25.—After Belgium had gone seven days without a cabinet, Paul Van Zeeland tonight succeeded in forming a new government of national union which he announced is "perfect."

The new cabinet is composed of representatives of all political parties. It supplants the government of former Premier Georges Theunis, which resigned over the economic crisis.

The new ministers will take their oaths before King Leopold at 5 p. m. tomorrow and then pitch into framing a program, which even a number of leading financiers think will include devaluation of the belga.

Although neither Premier Van Zeeland nor his ministers have announced publicly how they stand in this respect, it is known that the premier, who is an ardent admirer of President Roosevelt, has leaned in this direction.

Van Zeeland had found unexpected trouble in forming a cabinet. Former Premier Theunis was not included in the new line-up.

Van Zeeland is known to be less inclined than many to keep Belgium on the gold standard.

Colgate U. Arranges A Washington Course

Hamilton, N. Y., March 25 (AP).—Colgate Univresity's president, George Barton Cutten, announced today the university has completed arrangements for sending a selected group of students to Washington for a full semester for a "laboratory" course in government and politics. Insofar as possible, each student will serve as an "interne" under Government officials in executive positions.

More than 12 students, picked from outstanding men who have completed two years of work at Colgate, will go to the Capital in September and remain until February 1, 1936.

West Virginia Flood Imperils Fifty Patients

Men and Women Moved to Upper Floors as Water Invades Hospital.

By the Associated Press.

Welch, W. Va., March 25.—High waters surrounding the Welch Emergency Hospital in this coal mining community began receding late today after flooding the lower floor and causing the attendants hurriedly to carry about a half-hundred men and women patients to safety on an upper floor.

The building, situated in a hollow at the juncture of Brown's Creek and the Elk river in the southern West Virginia hills, was still encircled by water, but Superintendent L. F. Prade said over the telephone there was no danger.

"We still can't get out of the building and into Welch, but I believe all the danger is past," he said.

Patients Remain Calm.

Most of the patients were miners injured in accidents in the pits which dot this area in the heart of the bituminous coal fields in the Appalachian Mountains.

"There wasn't any excitement and they all took it calmly," said Dr. Prade.

He related that the patients were placed on stretchers and carried upstairs over a darkened stairway—all electric lights were put out of commission by the failure of the town's power plant.

"We moved our patients from the first floor to the second floor, but as it turned out it wasn't necessary," he added.

Flood waters swelled over the streets of Welch and other communities throughout this section.

Buildings Washed Away.

Homes were washed away; six railroad trestles were snapped away by roaring waters; landslides in the mountains imperiled secluded villages.

The coal town of Delbarton was under 4 feet of water and more than 20 families were forced from their homes. A landslide carried away one home at Goodman, near Williamson, crushing it to bits and seriously injuring four of the six occupants.

Near Lewisburg, on the Greenbrier River, the bodies of two of four persons drowned yesterday as their boat capsized were recovered.

J. S. McWoorter, whose wife and daughter were among those drowned, was rescued from an island in the river, where he had been marooned after watching them dashed to their deaths in the torrent. State police and deputy sheriffs reached him aboard a primitive log raft after riding the rapids.

House Votes Air Mail Bill For Rate Rise

Elliott Roosevelt Named as Lobbyist in Debate on Mead Measure.

G.O.P. Members Scolded for Claim; Hoover Son Mentioned.

Republicans injected the name of Elliott Roosevelt, a son of the President, into House debate over lobbying yesterday as the Mead air mail bill was passed.

Chairman Connery, of the Labor Committee, a Massachusetts Democrat, scolded G. O. P. members for referring to young Roosevelt as a lobbyist. He also drew an admission that "the son of President Hoover" formerly figured in ocean mail subsidy hearings.

As amended, the measure would empower the Interstate Commerce Commission to raise air mail rates up to 20 per cent and would authorize the Postmaster General to award contracts.

Debonair Representative Maas (Republican), Minnesota, a wartime aviator, opposed increased pay for companies flying the mail and charged $100,000,000 already had been wasted on air subsidies.

"Salary of $25,000."

The Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce, he said, is "back of" the plan to increase rates. Such action, he added, would cause "scandal" which will "dim into insignificance" the disclosures which caused wholesale cancellation of contracts a year ago.

"Who is the chief representative for the chamber?" asked Representative Taber (Republican), New York.

"Oh, various officers," Maas responded, "but at present the most active is Elliott Roosevelt."

"It is rumored around the Capitol that he draws a salary of $25,000?"

"I believe that it is $10,000 or $12,000, but whatever it is somebody says that it is too much."

Representative Dobbins (Democrat), of Illinois, interposed:

"These slights on the President and his family are wholly unjustified."

Another Democrat, Representative Dockweiler, California, inquired whether sons of a President should "go off and bury themselves in a desert?"

Gardner Is Named.

"Does the gentleman think," Maas flared, "there is no other job for a President's son than lobbying in Washington?"

Representative Culkin (Republican), of New York, said he wondered whether Elliott Roosevelt's "personality and his family connections have any relation to the penitential attitude of Postmaster General Farley and the committee on the other side."

Max Gardner, former Governor of North Carolina, now practicing law in Washington, was named by Representative McFarlane (Democrat), of Texas, as one of the "principal lobbyists" for the air-mail companies.

Maas contended the air-mail companies were "padding" their books to show losses when they actually earned money.

"They are paying attorney fees in exorbitant amounts," he said, "and we ought to find out what they are paying for lobbyists."

Representative Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, contended the operators "can't continue in business at present rates."

Rain, Slightly Warmer, Is Forecast for Today

Occasional rain and slightly warmer temperatures were predicted for Washington today.

A steady, light rain fell most of yesterday. Measurements at the Weather Bureau placed the rainfall at approximately .06 of an inch. Yesterday's maximum temperature was 48 degrees, recorded at 10 a. m., and the minimum, 43, at 6 p. m.

Full Program Of Bills Sped By Roosevelt

President Decides to Press for Passage at This Session.

NRA and Nuisance Tax Legislation Marked as "Musts."

A determination to go ahead with the major measures of his legislative program, now that the works relief log-jam has finally been broken, was reached by President Roosevelt yesterday in conference with Senate Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson.

As enumerated by the Arkansan, the Administration is still hopeful of action at this session on these proposals:

1. Extension of the NRA.
2. Social security, including both old-age pensions and unemployment insurance.
3. Regulation of utility holding companies.
4. Regulation by one agency of all forms of transportation, including aviation, shipping, railroads, buses and trucks.
5. Increasing the capital of the HOLC.
6. Banking legislation to strengthen authority of the Federal Reserve over credit and currency.
7. Tightening up of the pure food and drug laws.
8. Extension of the so-called nuisance taxes, totaling about $420,000,000.

Full Success Doubted.

Senator Robinson emphasized that this is no "hard and fast program" and conceded a doubt whether "we can work it out at this session." He added that all measures on the list are not "must" and frankly volunteered in a statement as he left the White House that "it can not be determined now" whether the transportation program can be put through this year.

At the same time, the program was regarded, in general, as an ambitious one, particularly in view of the difficulties the Administration encountered with the works relief bill.

"It is not felt that any particular measure is in a class requiring action," the Senator declared, "but it is believed a number of subjects are entitled to consideration and as many of them as practicable may be disposed of during the present session."

This statement was hastily amended after the Senator returned to Capitol Hill. He had forgotten the NRA. Legislation to extend that agency "must go through," he declared, as well as reenactment of the nuisance taxes.

Roosevelt Confers With Byrns.

Senator Robinson was summoned to the White House shortly after the President made his decision to take a two weeks' vacation in Florida. Earlier in the day, Mr. Roosevelt conferred with Speaker Byrns, receiving assurances from that leader that the works bill will be speeded toward passage.

Significant omissions from the legislative list were amendments to the AAA, the Wagner labor disputes bill, and a measure to "take the profits out of war." Senator Robinson's statement, however, was not taken to mean that action will not be sought on these proposals, but rather that they are considered as of lesser importance.

The Senator's confession of doubt in regard to the transportation program was received with surprise. All along, Mr. Roosevelt has indi-

Nazi Wins Point For Security Pact

England Will Not Insist on Mutual Assistance Feature in Treaty.

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

Berlin, March 25.—A nine-hour conference between Adolf Hitler, Sir John Simon and Anthony Eden broke up tonight with everybody smiling cordially and with agreement reached on three important points.

1. The British envoys promised Hitler that England will no longer insist upon the mutual assistance feature of the proposed eastern security pact.

[Hitler made it plain he would refuse to join a mutual security pact with military clauses, according to a United Press dispatch from Berlin.—Editor's note.]

2. On Germany's part, Hitler gave solemn assurance that his nation does not have the faintest intention of ever attacking Russia. He said this after insisting that Germany will stand pat on demands for a big army and navy in order to defend Europe from Russian bolshevism.

Treaty With Lithuania.

3. He further stated that Germany is ready to enter a treaty of amity and friendship with Lithuania, providing that country lives up to the terms of the Memel statute which guarantees certain rights to German minorities.

These were the concrete results of the first day of conversations which diplomats agree may mean peace or war to Europe.

Tomorrow the discussions will continue, focusing around the questions of Germany's re-entry into the League of Nations, German rearmament and the European air pact proposed in the Anglo-French agreement reached in London.

Both sides were obviously pleased with the results of the day's work. Hitler was in such good humor that he not only asked the British visitors to have luncheon in the chancellory but invited Lady Phipps, wife of the Sir Eric Phipps, British Ambassador to Berlin, to join them

Six at Conversations.

Six persons were present during the conversations. Besides Hitler and the two men from the English foreign office were Ambassador Phipps, Baron Konstantin von Neurath, the German foreign minister, and Gen. Joachim von Ribbentrop, Hitler's special diplomatic expert.

Instead of going first into the broad general question, both sides agreed to tackle first a problem in which Britain is least interested territorially—the proposed Eastern Locarno pact. This is France's pet project.

It was understood Hitler expounded his views on this regional pact and expressed his aversion to anything that might engage Germany in a military way, even to the extent of involving her with powers that do not touch her borders.

Sir John was obviously pleased

Powers Double War Budgets; League Session Called April 15

Million More Men Ready to Fight Than on Eve of Great Conflict.

Copyright by the United Press.

Geneva, March 25.—Joseph A. Avenol, secretary-general of the League of Nations, today telegraphed members of the league council proposing an extraordinary session be convoked on April 15 to consider the crisis precipitated by Germany's rearmament in violation of the Treaty of Versailles.

Simultaneously, a survey showed the armaments race, gathering momentum daily, already has brought the war budgets of the principal powers to double their previous level.

The heaviest arms expenditures in the world's history are enabling Europe to maintain 1,000,000 more men under arms than on the eve of the World War 21 years ago, as well as providing an ever-increasing number of war planes, tanks and heavy artillery.

Also, although the latest official figures go only up to June, 1934, they show the big powers already had doubled their prewar ependitures before Germany began to rearm in earnest last autumn.

The following table is based on official figures, showing the amounts spent last year compared with the last year before the war. All figures are in United States

Ethiopians, Italians Clash on Frontier

By the Associated Press.

Rome, March 25.—A pitched battle between Ethiopian and Italian troops on the frontier of Eritrea was described today in a government communique.

The action took place during the night of March 23, the announcement said. One Ethiopian was killed and several were wounded.

News of the new incident in the strained Italo-Ethiopian relations was published shortly after Negradas Yesus, Ethiopian minister, gave out a communique from Addis Ababa announcing Ethiopian troops are no longer concentrated along the borders of Italy's colonies in East Africa.

This, he asserted, was proof of "Ethiopia's strong wish for peace now, as always."

White House Strikes Today At Silver Rider

Calls On Representatives for Blow at Works Bill Amendment.

By Douglas Warrenfels.

Strong-arm tactics will be used by the Administration today to set in motion machinery for elimination of the Thomas silver amendment from the works bill.

Two-fisted Chairman O'Connor of the Rules Committee plans to drive through the House a resolution for appointment of managers to negotiate with Senate conferees.

The iron-clad rule submitted to the House late yesterday by O'Connor, when adopted—practically a foregone conclusion—in effect will gag silver inflationists who want to force a vote on a motion to make mandatory House acceptance of the Senate silver amendment.

Once the O'Connor rule has been adopted Speaker Byrns will be empowered to name the House conferees. Then the brunt of the Administration's defense will be borne by Chairman Buchanan, House Appropriations Committee, who will be one of the conferees.

Would Reject Amendment.

Observers believed a majority of the House conferees, yet to be appointed, would insist on rejection of all Senate amendments unsatisfactory to the White House. The Senate tacked 31 amendments to the bill.

Senate changes slated to be killed in conference are:

1. The rider of Senator Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, to provide mandatory issuance of silver certificates at full monetary value of bullion, $1.29 an ounce, and require continual circulation of silver notes.

2. The amendment of Senator McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, to require Senate confirmation of all Federal and State employes under

U. S. Treasury Again Puts Off Stabilization

Issues Not Clear Enough, Is View; Bingham Urges Dollar-Pound Link.

By the Associated Press.

Currency stabilization, constantly demanded by business interests, again was made a thing of the indefinite future yesterday by a Treasury statement that the issues involved were insufficiently clarified.

This assertion followed a suggestion by Robert W. Bingham, Ambassador to Great Britain, that "at the proper time the Washington and London governments should arrive at an understanding" on linking the value of the dollar and pound.

It came at a time which found the Administration striving to defeat inflationary legislation calling for payment of the bonus in new currency and for a sizable increase in silver certificates in circulation.

Further Devaluation Sought.

Meanwhile, the House Banking Committee, studying an Administration bill to increase centralized control of the banking and currency systems, heard a plea for further devaluation of the dollar from Edward A. O'Neal, president of the Farm Bureau Federation.

The White House would say nothing of Bingham's suggestion and the conclusion was that Mr. Roosevelt was standing by his last statement to the effect that prices are still too low to be frozen at present levels.

His viewpoint is that rising prices reduce the Nation's debt burden, much of which was obligated at a time of high prices, and that this process still has some distance to go.

What for months was a general assumption that the 1926 price level was the Administration's goal was shaken considerably by the recent testimony of Gov. Eccles, of Power for President to Restrict Foreign Trade and Travel Drafted.

Senate Soon to Get Proposed Measures

Protection of Ships in Time of War Would Be Withdrawn.

Copyright, 1935, by The Washington Post.

Legislation giving the President sweeping powers to restrict foreign travel and trade by American citizens in the event of war abroad in order to make more rigid and invulnerable this country's neutrality is now being drafted for introduction in the Senate within the next month, it was authoritatively revealed yesterday.

Drafting of the legislation was started after President Roosevelt last week told the Nye munitions committee that he believed the United States should take immediate steps to avoid being swept into another foreign war. The committee expressed general agreement with his views.

Details of the proposed neutrality legislation remain to be worked out, but the plan contemplates empowering the President, on the outbreak of war abroad, to refuse American citizens passports to travel in the zone of conflict, except on urgent business and at their own risk, or to travel on the ships of belligerent nations.

Protection of Ships.

The plan also would authorize the President to withdraw the Government's protection from American ships entering the war zone or engaged in carrying contraband. Such a step would virtually mean abandonment of this country's traditional insistence on freedom of the seas for neutral shipping.

The Nye committee called on Mr. Roosevelt to lay before him a 12-point program for taking the profit out of any war in which this country may be engaged. Mr. Roosevelt indicated to the group that while he approved their take-the-profit-out-of-war program, he was more interested in taking steps to keep this country out of future wars.

This is a subject long close to the President's heart. As assistant secretary of the Navy he was intimately associated with the efforts of the Wilson administration to keep out of the World War, efforts which failed because the country would not abandon its insistence on freedom of the seas for American shipping.

Requested Survey.

Almost a year ago the President asked the State Department to make a survey of the country's neutrality policy, its possible effects under present-day conditions and the laws available for the enforcement of impartial neutrality. This study has been progressing ever since, although the conclusions that have been reached have not been officially revealed.

The day the President spoke his mind to the Nye committee dark war clouds hung heavily over Europe as a result of Adolph Hitler's announcement that Germany would rearm at once, despite the Versailles Treaty. It was the latest of a series of rumbles of threatened war which have come from Europe within the last year.

Senator William E. Borah (Republican), of Idaho, former chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, yesterday scouted fears of an European war in the near future. He suggested that Germany's renunciation of the disarmament section of the Versailles Treaty might result in a clarification of the European situation.

The Idahoan last week discussed the European situation with President Roosevelt. Whether the proposals for maintaining American neutrality in any conflict were discussed was not revealed, but Senator Borah was insistent yesterday that the United States should

Howe Rallies, Asks for Smoke; Roosevelt Off on Fishing Trip

President to Board Vincent Astor Yacht Off the Florida Coast; Secretary Declared Out of Immediate Danger.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

In a sudden shift of plans caused by a favorable report from the bedside of Secretary Louis McHenry Howe, President Roosevelt entrained late last night for his deferred fishing cruise off the coast of Florida.

Before reaching this decision, he received assurances from two quarters where doubt and uncertainty has reigned. Physicians advised him that Mr. Howe has rallied sufficiently to be out of immediate danger and congressional leaders brought word the time is opportune to get away from the legislative grind.

Encouraged by these advices, the President conferred hastily with Administration aids, sketched out a legislative program with Speaker Byrns and Senate Majority Leader Robinson, and then ordered his bags packed for two weeks of cruising among the palm-studded cays of the warm Gulf Stream.

He will arrive this afternoon at Jacksonville, Fla., where a destroyer, the Farragut, awaits him for the first stage of his voyage. After putting to sea in this craft, the President will transfer later to the Nourmahal, the more commodious yacht of Vincent Astor.

It was a sudden turn for the better in the condition of Mr. Howe Sunday night that influenced Mr. Roosevelt to alter his plans. All hope for Mr. Howe's recovery was abandoned last week, but after days of coma the frail secretary awoke yesterday morning and asked for a cigarette—a startling request that was satisfied by allowing him a few puffs.

A strengthening in Mr. Howe's heart action prompted a consultation later in the morning. Four Naval heart and lung specialists, in conference with Dr. Ross T. McIntire, the White House physician, decided that no relapse was immediately in sight, although chances were poor for his ultimate recovery.

Oxygen has been resorted to constantly ever since Mr. Howe's condition became serious, it was revealed. An oxygen tent was successful in prolonging the life of the late Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes and the same device was given credit for the improvement in Mr. Howe's condition.

As described by Dr. McIntire, the President's secretary has been gravely ill of a heart congestion brought on by chronic asthma. Now that his heart has strengthened, the physicians foresaw steady improvement for several weeks, but were doubtful as to the final outcome. Those who took part in the prog-

Plot to Smuggle Quintuplets Into United States Is Rumored

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Callander, Ont., March 25.—An armed constable tonight paced the wire-fenced enclosure around the tiny Dafoe Hospital, home of the Dionne quintuplets, as protection against any attempt to remove them from their guardian-province.

Welfare Commissioner David Croll, who is responsible to the British crown for the care of the five baby girls born nearly ten months ago, ordered policemen to stand guard night and day "for the protection of the babies."

Officials were motivated, in part, by rumors that an attempt would be made to smuggle the entire Dionne family—Mr. and Mrs. Ovila Dionne, their four older children and the quintuplets—beyond the borders of Ontario and outside the jurisdiction of the guardianship bill which Lieut. Gov. Herbert Bruce is to sign tomorrow.

United States promoters reportedly have painted a glowing picture of the golden box-office harvest the quintuplets would bring on exhibition—and unlettered Ovila Dionne, who resents the scientific care lavished on the babies while he and the rest of his family shiver in a ramshackle farmhouse, reportedly has listened to them.

Dionne recently accepted a "manager" in the person of Leo Kervin. Since then he has issued a number of "statements" denouncing the guardianship bill as an invasion of paternal rights. Two weeks ago—the day the bill was passed by the Legislature—he and Mrs. Dionne attempted to move into the model hospital where the babies are growing into rollicking, husky girlhood under the watchful care of science.

The Dionnes are known to feel they should be allowed to "cash in" on the fame of their five little daughters. Welfare officials have been unable to impress them with the danger to the childrens' life should they be taken from the sanitary precincts of the hospital and exhibited before the germ-laden public.

Importance of the quintuplets to science likewise has failed to impress the backwoods couple.

Officials refused to say whether

Court of Mercy Finds Brothers, 11 and 12, Forgotten in Prison

By the Associated Press.

Parchman, Miss., March 25.—An 11-year-old Negro boy was discovered today among the "forgotten men" of Parchman Prison by Gov. Sennett Conner and his "court of mercy."

The lad, Jabo Dean, is serving a sentence for grand larceny with his 12-year-old brother, Pratt, the Governor was told.

"I want to go home and see my mammy," said the child, brought before the informal investigating body.

Word that the "court" was reviewing the cases of 150 convicts who have been all but forgotten outside the prison walls spread rapidly among the 2,700 inmates.

The Governor evidenced astonishment when he dug into the Dean boy's case.

"We got no reports on commitments and these boys could have been here for years and I not know it," he exclaimed.

Jabo unhesitatingly admitted breaking into a house in Philadelphia, Miss., with his brother and stealing a bag containing $90. He said they were "told to do it" by a man who they said gave them 10 cents as a "reward."

"Did you ever hear about God?" the Governor asked.

"Yes, sir, He's a good fellow."

"Did you ever hear about the devil?"

"Yes sir. He burns you up when you is bad."

"Why do you want to get out?"

"I want to go home and see my mammy."

It was disclosed there are 150 convicts who have been here for ten years or more, and in most of their cases not even a letter has been filed interceding in their behalf, nor have they written any governor seeking executive clemency.

The oldest of these is Eugene Manny, committed August 2, 1906, from Madison County to serve a life sentence for a statutory offense.

Many insisted during the review of his case that he was "in for murder," denying he was charged with a statutory offense. However, he added that he was "willing to let it go at that if you say so, just so I can get away."

60-Cent Silver Sold, Breaking 7-Year Record

U. S. Sale of Gold for White Metal Is Factor in Price Rise.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 25.—Sixty-cent silver, just a rosy dream for seven years, became an actuality today and opened a new vista of economic and political possibilities from the Shanghai Bund around the world through Wall street and the City of London.

In Wall street, where the speculative silver market was killed by the silver nationalization act, traders attributed today's rise of 1 cent to 60 cents an ounce to a combination of what they termed "technical factors."

Reduced to simple terms, the technical factors became the sale of $1,000,000 in United States gold to Mexico in exchange for silver, the absence from world markets of a floating supply of the white metal, and the current wide discussion of inflation possibilities in America.

See Further Gold Sales.

A little further in the future the traders place such possibilities as further sales of gold for silver to other nations, the possibility that the two-billion dollar stabilization fund might buy silver, and the talk of a gold-silver standard for the two Americas.

Not since late 1928 has silver been so high as today, and it is within striking distance of the 64½-cent price paid by the Treasury for all newly mined domestic metal.

Silver's trouble goes back to 1873 when Germany adopted the gold standard and led other nations into gradually placing lessened value on the white metal. Up to about 1885 the price averaged $1.12 an ounce, but by 1900 the average slipped to 78 cents, and from there it went to a 53-cent average until the start of the World War.

All-Time High Set.

From 1914 to 1921, the average price was 84 cents, and on November 25, 1919, an all-time high of $1.37½ cents an ounce was reached. But the drop was abrupt to December 29, 1932, when an ounce of silver brought 24¼ cents.

The recent decision of the United States Government to make monetary stocks eventually consist of 25 per cent silver and 75 per cent gold inaugurated a purchase program that has absorbed practically all of the world floating supply.

Silver was squeezed from China. She placed an embargo on it. Then bootlegging started.

Silver interests in Congress are demanding the Treasury fulfill its orders to buy silver, and Wall street quarters are wondering where it will come from, China, India, London, the ancient mines of the Aztecs.

Buying silver with gold stands out as a leading possibility, traders declare, since a reduction in gold stocks will reduce the amount of silver needed to reach the 25-75 ratio.

G. O. P. Merriam Boom Attacked by Sinclair

Los Angeles, March 25 (AP).—It is all very clear now to Upton Sinclair why Gov. Frank F. Merriam of California indorsed the Townsend old-age pension plan.

"I see by the papers that the Junior Republicans are booming Mr. Merriam for President, and Mr. Merriam says he likes to hear it," said Sinclair today. As Democratic candidate for Governor, he was defeated by Gov. Merriam last fall. As for the possibility that former President Herbert Hoover might be a candidate again for the Republican nomination, Sinclair said "everybody knows that Hoover is trying to make a comeback."

Between You and Me

A Letter From Mr. Hoover; On Curbing Free Speech; The Race With Poverty.

By Raymond Clapper

The first direct word from Herbert Hoover regarding the question of being the Republican presidential candidate next year came in a letter to a friend here who had suggested that possibility.

The reaction was negative. But Mr. Hoover made it plain he expected to speak out against the Administration.

Under date of March 4—the second anniversary of his departure from the White House—Mr. Hoover wrote:

"I have no aspirations in the direction you mention, but I intend to take a shot at what is going on when I think the right moments have arrived."

* * * *

Perhaps it is nothing to become excited about yet, but there are signs to indicate that an undermining of the principle of free speech has started.

A Cabinet member says that some men—meaning Huey Long and Coughlin—are using the right of free speech for destructive ends. Senator Carter Glass, fed up on endless talk in the Senate, is trying to have the rules changed to restrict debate in this body which is the only parliamentary chamber in the world where a man can get up on his hind legs and speak to the full extent of his mental and vocal capacities. Various bills to tighten up loose talk have been introduced as a result of the Nazi propaganda investigation.

President Roosevelt in a vehement message, denounced the propaganda of the power companies against holding company legislation. The immigration authorities are trying to deport a British parlor radical just as he is about to sail, his pockets loaded with extra lecture fees, royalties and magazine orders resulting from his recent arrest.

The idea is being planted in newspaper articles that it would be a good thing to suppress those who question that democracy is the best of all possible forms of government. The argument is that we are foolish to let the Communists and Fascists enjoy free speech when, if either of them came into power, they would abolish free speech at once. Hence the thing to do is to beat them to it. Then the next logical step, after suppressing all soap box talk at home, would be not to let the newspapers print anything that Stalin, Mussolini, Hitler, Pilsudski or any other Communist, Fascist or nonbeliever in democracy says. If the stuff is dangerous it is no less so for being printed in a newspaper under a foreign date line.

All such suggestions are based on the unspoken premise that our form of Government is in danger of being toppled over by somebody's idea or by soap-box oratory, and that if we stop the oratory we will be safe.

* * * *

There always has been firm public opinion against advocating the overthrow of the Government by violence. Otherwise a man was free to mount his soap box and argue the merits of socialism, communism, monarchy, anarchy, autarchy, fascism, or as David A. Reed, of Pennsylvania, once did, rise in the Senate and declare that this country needed a Mussolini. From the adoption of the Constitution, except during the early hysteria that resulted in the short-lived alien and sedition laws and during war time, it has been a fundamental idea that the best way to keep the American form of government on an even keel is to keep the safety valve open and let the critics do their worst. Right now the smarter politicians think the best way to kill off Huey Long is to keep him talking. At least the chances in favor of it are 100 per cent better than to try to shut him off in the Senate, on the air, in the press or in hiring a hall.

* * * *

Mayor LaGuardia once said it was hard to get men to sing the Star-Spangled Banner on empty stomachs. He has just received a report from his committee on unemployment relief which indicates that there isn't going to be so much singing around New York.

This report states that breadwinners for 37 per cent of the city's population are unemployed. More than half of the unemployed are between 20 and 40 years old—the most active period in the life span, when men normally are marrying and establishing homes and getting set to educate the children, the most devastating time of life to be out of a job. And 336,000 families have unemployed breadwinners but are not on relief. Those families are living on savings, or on relatives, and very probably growing more desperate in their plight every day. It is demoralizing to have reached bottom and have the Government come to the rescue with relief doles, but it must be more terrifying to see the small bulwark which protects your last vestige of self-respect shrinking with each setting sun. The number of families on relief is increasing most sharply in the middle class residential sections. In six months it has doubled in Richmond borough, Staten Island. It is up 41 per cent in Brooklyn and 64 per cent in Queens. Mostly those are people who in normal times provide the middle-class backbone of industrious, independent, self-respecting citizens who ask no favors and are willing to get out and hustle for what they get.

After five years the depression is cutting more deeply than ever into the vitals of the population.

Alongside this disturbing news is the encouraging news that General Motors sales were up 48 per cent last year, the largest total since 1930, and reports from other large corporations who had increased profits or had turned deficits into profits.

It is a grim race between poverty and profits.

* * * *

And about free speech again. Several States are considering legislation which would make it a felony to file complaint for breach of promise. Mrs. Roosevelt has indorsed this legislation. Mr. Hoover had better watch out what he says about those Roosevelt campaign promises, or they'll have him on the rock pile.

Law Banning Heart-Balm Suits Wins Approval of First Lady

Mrs. Roosevelt Also Dispels Rumors She Is Paid for Speeches.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt cleared up several momentous questions at her weekly press conference at the White House yesterday, taking a definite stand in favor of New York's anti-heart balm law, remarked casually on the rising birth-rate among those on the relief roll and then read some poetry sent her by a Denver scissors-sharpener.

Sherwood A. Munson was taken to task for his article in a New York newspaper, in which he stated that the unemployed would rather accept public relief from a liberal government than work for a living.

Mr. Munson, in his article, explains how he advertised for a young man, 20, who would be willing to work for a good home and $10 a month. He produced 300 letters to prove his contention that the workless would prefer government relief.

Mrs. Roosevelt said the majority of people on relief are those who have to have a job to keep their families.

"There are without doubt many young men who would like such a job as Mr. Munson offered, but young men of 20 are not as a rule on relief but in CCC camps or wandering about," the First Lady said.

Mrs. Roosevelt was asked to discuss whether members of Congress are influenced by their wives in casting votes. She replied it would be a "dull relationship" if Congressmen couldn't talk over what they wanted to do, with their wives. She added that nobody should ever ask anybody else how he was going to vote.

The wife of the President based her stand on the New York anti-heart balm law on the assumption that "I don't think anyone who was really hurt would ever sue."

Mrs. Roosevelt revealed that she gets no pay for her speeches. Her only activities for money are writing and radio speeches, Mrs. Roosevelt said. Rumors that after having accepted an invitation to talk at a charity affair, she later asked and received $500, were thus dispelled.

Sex Motif Is On Wane In Films, Hays Holds

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 25.—The sex motif is on the wane in motion pictures and a new art combining the culture of literature, the opera and the stage with originality of direction is taking its place, Will H. Hays, "the movie czar," asserted tonight.

"It has been easier to underestimate than to overestimate Main Street's intelligent appreciation of quality entertainment," Hays, president of Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., declared in his annual report on the industry.

He cited the success of Dickens' "David Copperfield" and Barrie's "Little Minister" to support his contention the public wants the best of the world's literature presented on the screen.

U. S. Indicts 15 In Kiting Stock By Phone Sales

Sign Painter 'President,' Tolls $30,000, Jury Charges.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 25.—A "high pressure" method of stock selling by telephone, said by the Federal District Attorney's office to have netted its promoters $600,000, resulted today in a 16-count indictment being returned in Federal court against 15 individuals and two corporations.

The indictments charged conspiracy, mail fraud and violation of the securities act.

Named with Philip H. Philbin, jr., of Denver and Pueblo, Colo., were William L. Jarvis, Boston broker; Samuel L. Gaines, Jarvis' associate; McNeel's financial Service, of Boston, said to be owned by Jarvis; William J. Kennedy, Edward F. Barry, Harold B. Hale, Henry Barry, John L. Callahan, Walter F. Dowler, Ralph Moore, B. Shuman and Sidney Pollak, all of Boston; Albert A. Crosby and Charles Vrooman, of Chicago, and Arthur C. Gardiner, of Brooklyn.

Say Painter Was "President."

The indictment, the first in this district to be returned against alleged securities act violators, alleged Philbin acquired 47,000 shares of the 93,000 shares of Atlas Tack Corporation stock, and that after his sales organization got under way prices were boosted from $6 to $34.50 a share, but collapsed December 19, 1933, and dropped to $10.50 in two days.

The stock was quoted today at $6 asked and $4⅜ bid with no sales.

Prospective investors were called on the telephone by salesmen, it was alleged, who gave the name of "Chauncey Day," a house painter who served two hours a day as the "dummy" president of McNeel's financial service, which Philbin had bought.

Hunting Tigers Now.

The salesmen represented that Atlas Tack had obtained a large contract for bottle caps and that dividends of $2.16 per year were to be paid, the Government charges. Later, it is charged, the salesmen told prospects the stock was earning $6 to $8 a share and the stock would jump to $60 or $70 when the public "got wise."

Leo C. Fennelly, assistant United States attorney, said no blame attached to the Atlas Tack Corporation or its directors, among whom are Kermit Roosevelt, Goodhue Livingston, Frank Richenor and George Woodruff, of Chicago.

Philbin was said by Federal officers to be in India hunting tigers and was unaware of the indictment.

$30,000 for Phones.

The second corporation named in the indictment was Philbin, Jr., Inc., organized by Philbin and associates to trade in stocks.

Government investigators said the telephone bill of the McNeel service amounted to $30,000 within a few months after the Atlas Tack campaign got under way.

Maximum penalty under the securities act count is five years imprisonment and $5,000 fine. Under mail fraud and conspiracy counts of the indcitment, maximum penalties are five years and $1,000 fine, and two years and $10,000 fine.

Warrants Out In PWA Charge

Men Accused With 4 Others of Plot to Cheat U. S. Agency on Project.

Bench warrants for the arrest of William A. Harding, Frank P. McElwrath and Perry A. Welty, all of Texas, were issued yesterday by Justice Jesse C. Adkins on request of Assistant United States Attorney John W. Fihelly.

The men were indicted, with four others, for alleged participation in a scheme to defraud the Public Works Administration of several hundred thousand dollars through manipulation of the plans of a Texas irrigation project.

Arrangements have been made to have three others, who are now in California, post $500 bond each in San Francisco. The seventh man charged with conspiracy, Charles R. Olberg, of Washington, already has posted bond in the District Supreme Court and has launched an attack on the legality of the indictment.

The three Californians have made telegraphic arrangements for bond, Mr. Fihelly said. Harding, a member of the Willacy County (Texas) board of directors, has wired Attorney General Cummings protesting his innocence, but along with the two other Texans has failed to make definite arrangements for bond.

Colorado May Call Troops to Bar Aliens

Denver, March 25 (AP).—Gov. Ed C. Johnson today indicated he might call out the National Guard, if necessary, to prevent an influx of aliens from Mexico and nonresidents from neighboring States.

The Governor asserted that hundreds of aliens especially natives of old Mexico, have poured into Colorado because of drought conditions in Southwestern States and Mexico. He said he planned to write to both the relief administration and to the United States Immigration Department immediately in an effort to start rounding up all undesirables.

Curlee Admits Clothing Gains Under the NRA

But Repeats Demand It Be Abolished at Hearing of Senate Group.

While agreeing that wages, profits and production had increased since the beginning of the NRA, Francis M. Curlee, of St. Louis, representing a minority organization of clothing manufacturers, continued yesterday his steadfast insistence that the recovery organization should be abolished. Curlee was appearing before the Senate Finance Committee.

Curlee told the committee that he believed in "free play of economic forces" and that this was being prevented by NRA.

Returning to the witness stand after the week-end, Curlee presented the committee with his recent correspondence, which was subpenaed last week. The contents of the letters were not made public. The correspondence was called for after Senator Barkley (Democrat), Kentucky, had charged Curlee was trying to intimidate him by asking a Kentucky clothing manufacturer to write him a critical letter.

Under questioning by Senator La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin, Curlee said that wages in the Curlee plants at St. Louis and Mayfield, Ky., had been increased from an average of 36 and 21 cents an hour respectively, to 58 and 61 cents. He said profits throughout the industry had been better in 1934 than in 1933.

He said that the Industrial Recovery Association of Clothing Manufacturers, which he represents, was willing to conform to any minimum wage. He added that he had never believed in any regimentation of industry.

Curlee declared that the Clothing Code Authority had refused his organization information on production and pay rolls. He said he wished the information for comparison between union and nonunion shops. Curlee's organization represents a group of concerns whose employes are not members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, of which Sidney Hillman, NRA board member, is president.

The witness protested the makeup of the code authority, declaring the minority which he represents is not adequately represented on the authority. Under questioning, he admitted that he had been offered a place on the authority and had declined to serve. He said he declined because he did not believe in the system as a whole.

Curlee will continue on the stand today and will be followed by M. D. Vincent, deputy NRA administrator in charge of the clothing code.

President Grants Harris New Stay

60 Days' Reprieve Given to Convicted Slayer.

Charles Harris, awaiting sentence of death at the District Jail for the murder of "Milsie" Henry, Washington gambler, was granted another stay of sentence yesterday by President Roosevelt.

Harris, who was to go to the chair on April 11, was given a reprieve of 60 days on recommendation of the Department of Justice, which wishes more time to complete its investigation of the conviction of Harris.

It was the third reprieve granted the condemned man since a prominent group of Washingtonians were enlisted in his aid on the ground that he was convicted by very slim evidence. Under the latest extension the date of execution will be June 10.

Duck Flies Into Plane, Pilot Is 'Knocked Out'

Burlington, Iowa, March 25 (AP).—Art Mills, veteran pilot for the Braniff Air Lines, was "knocked out" by a duck that crashed through the front window of his airplane at midnight last night.

Mills, flying between Sterling and Waterman, Ill., on the Chicago-Kansas City route, said he was unconscious for several minutes. He thought at first his plane had been struck by lightning. He was flying through a thunderstorm. Still a bit groggy, the pilot landed here for fuel, then resumed his trip to Kansas City.

Bachelor Saves School For 3,500,000 Pupils

By the Associated Press.

Senator Cutting (Republican), New Mexico, a bachelor, yesterday was presented with a testimonial crediting him with making it possible for schools with an attendance of 3,500,000 children to remain open for the remainder of the term.

Cutting was author of an amendment to the works relief bill which would enable $40,000,000 to be used for needy schools.

Mrs. Mary Bannernan, legislative chairman of the Parent-Teachers Association, made the presentation. Representatives of a dozen groups attended the ceremony.

Judge Denies U. S. Trade Rule Right

Business Men Are Told to Ignore NRA Queries.

By the Associated Press.

Oklahoma City, March 25.—Congress has no right, Federal Judge Edgar S. Vaught declared today, to decide what business is interstate and what is intrastate.

He advised business men engaged in intrastate commerce to refuse to answer NRA questions about their business.

Judge Vaught's remarks were made from the bench as he refused an injunction against NRA officials on the grounds his court had no jurisdiction.

The Colbert Mill & Feed Co. of Oklahoma City, sought to enjoin John B. Ewing, State compliance officer, and U. S. Attorney W. C. Lewis from enforcing code provisions against it.

FINANCE

Provision was made for maturities during 1935 and the greater part of those occurring in 1936 through the sale of $50,000,000 Fifty-year 4¼% General Mortgage Bonds due July 1, 1984. Thus 4¼% securities will largely replace the 6½% securities coming due.

In accordance with financial arrangements made with the Public Works Administration to enable the Company to complete its electrification program and purchase new freight cars, electric locomotives and steel rails, the Company sold to the Government $23,490,000 Thirty-year Secured 4% Serial Bonds, $15,525,000 Fifteen-year and $6,068,000 Twenty-year 4% Equipment Trust Certificates and $3,648,000 Ten-year Secured 4% Serial Notes. The Company expects to pay off the latter in 1935 out of its own funds.

The net increase in the investment in road and equipment for the entire System was $37,672,536.

IMPROVEMENT PROGRAM

Electrification for passenger service between New York and Washington was completed early in 1935. It is expected that the entire project will be completed and in full operation during 1935. This will include through electrical freight operation from the New York terminals to Potomac Yard, south of Washington, electrification of large freight yards, several branches and connecting freight lines and related improvement work between New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington.

The completed work embracing 1405 miles of track electrified for both passenger and freight service will provide the most modern means of transportation to the populous and steadily growing metropolitan areas in the territory along the middle Atlantic seaboard and for the through traffic between the South and New England. It represents approximately 45,000,000 man hours of employment on the railroad and in the supply industries and the expenditure of many millions of dollars for the products of American industries.

During 1934 progress continued on improvement projects in Philadelphia, Newark, Baltimore and Chicago while important additions and betterments were completed or progressed at other points.

NEW AND IMPROVED EQUIPMENT

Ten electric switching engines and one electric passenger locomotive were received and placed in service, and two experimental electric passenger locomotives were delivered. Eighty-four electric passenger locomotives and four electric switching locomotives were ordered for delivery in 1935. Of these 57 are of a new streamline design for passenger service, the most powerful of their kind ever built, capable of maintaining a regular operating speed of 90 miles per hour with trains of standard size and weight. The Company built 7,000 new freight cars at its own shops and purchased 99,965 tons of steel rail. 45 cars for passenger service were converted for electric operation in multiple unit electric trains in suburban service. Air conditioning was installed in 30 additional dining cars and 79 additional coaches.

BETTER SERVICE

High speed passenger service was still further improved by more convenient schedules and greater comfort and the running time of a number of important trains between Chicago, St. Louis, Detroit, Cleveland and the East. An additional fast train, the "Fort Dearborn," was placed in service between Chicago, Philadelphia and New York. More comfortable service on through trains between the principal cities of East and West was provided during the summer by air-conditioned coaches, dining cars and Pullman cars which supplemented similar equipment in service on all trains between New York, Philadelphia and Washington. The Company operated approximately 700 such cars, the world's largest fleet of air-conditioned equipment.

The Company's regularly scheduled freight trains continued to maintain a record of fast dependable transportation. Collection and delivery service of less-than-carload freight, inaugurated experimentally on December 1, 1933, has proved so satisfactory and increasingly popular, that it has now become a permanent feature of the service.

EMPLOYES WAGES

During the year the railroads of the country, including this Company, entered into an agreement with the employes as the result of procedure provided for in the Railway Labor Act, under which 2½% of the 10% deduction in wages (which had been in effect since February 1, 1932) was restored on July 1, 1934 and 2½% on January 1, 1935. The remaining 5% will be restored on April 1, 1935, so that the basic rates of pay to employes which had been in effect prior to February 1, 1932, will have been fully restored.

STOCKHOLDERS

Capital stock of the Company, at the close of the year, was owned by 232,908 holders, a decrease of 5,878 compared with December 31, 1933. The average number of shares held by each shareholder was 56.5.

The continuing efforts of the employes to operate the railroad successfully under prevailing adverse conditions can be materially aided by the Company's stockholders and bondholders who are in a position to secure additional traffic and thus increase revenue. Their active interest in getting people to travel and ship via the Pennsylvania Railroad and thus promoting the business of their Company is again cordially solicited.

Supreme Court Opposes Move To Rush Tests

Justices Tell Senate Hearing Black Bill Seems to Be Unnecessary.

The United States Supreme Court, speaking through three of its justices, raised its voice yesterday against proposed speeding of Federal law tests to the highest court in the land.

Making one of their rare appearances before a senatorial committee, Chief Justice Hughes and Associate Justices Van Devanter and Brandeis spoke for the court. They opposed the enactment of the Black bill, permitting an immediate appeal directly to the Supreme Court on any court order restraining a Federal agency or employe from carrying out provisions of a Federal law.

Intended to hasten processes whereby New Deal legislation challenged in lower courts may take a short cut to a final decision, the Black bill is before the Senate Judiciary Committee. The Supreme Court was invited to express its views.

The three justices, representing every element in the highest court, conservative, liberal and middle-of-the-road, said they thought the legislation "unnecessary." The testimony was taken in executive session.

Undismayed by their stand, Senator Hugo L. Black (Democrat), Alabama, said he will continue to press for the enactment of his bill. Federal agencies and employes, now under restraint of injunction, should be relieved of the uncertainty surrounding the legality of their actions, he said.

The moderate Chief Justice, the liberal Brandeis and the conservative Van Devanter were represented as considering present rules of court procedure more effective and efficient, according to Senators who heard them.

They felt, it was said, that the Supreme Court under this change might be asked to decide a question not representing the final judgment of lower courts.

If it wishes, the Government now can ask the Supreme Court to act at once on a District Federal Court decision, "by-passing" the intermediate Court of Appeals, they were said to have reasoned. Therefore, they argued, the Black legislation was not needed.

Several Cases Pending.

Several broad phases of the New Deal's program are now tied up in the lower courts, their status uncertain due to a series of legal reverses.

There were early attempts to hasten Supreme Court action, but a fortnight ago the Administration appeared to be bowing to the slow-but-certain procedure of the courts so far as its sweeping power program is concerned.

At that time, officials of the Tennessee Valley Authority, after conferring at the White House, announced that the Alabama decision shutting it out of the competitive power business, would not be appealed directly to the present session of the Supreme Court.

TVA Ruling Sought.

TVA authorities decided it would be unwise to try to by-pass the "responsible and highly respected" Circuit Court of Appeals at New Orleans.

"The granting of a write of certiorari which would by-pass the Circuit Court of Appeals is an extraordinary measure and one that is not expected the Supreme Court will favor for more general use," said James Lawrence Fly, general solicitor of the TVA, at that time.

Several legislative proposals have been made, designed to curtail the power of the courts to restrict operations of New Deal agencies. The Black bill is one of them. It is intended especially to effect a quick Supreme Court decision on questions arising out of the Birmingham Federal District Court ruling on TVA.

Some Democrats Opposed.

Although the measure has yet to come to a vote in the Judiciary Committee, there is known to be strong opposition to the proposed haste from some Democrats, as well as Republicans.

"I don't believe in legislation based on expediency, or in changing the normal processes of law overnight to meet some exigency," Senator William H. King (Democrat), Utah, a member of the committee, commented last night.

Black said he still thinks the bill is necessary, however, and is willing to fight for it, believing immediate action necessary to relieve uncertainty and doubt.

Black Hits Delay.

"Delay is the greatest evil of the law today, both in criminal and civil procedure," Black said.

"Under our present system, we have thousands of Government employes wondering today whether their actions are legal. Others are prevented from carrying out the intentions of Congress by injunctions which may or may not be sustained by the Supreme Court."

The Black bill provides, in part:

"That when any judge or court of the United States issues any restraining order, decree, judgment, or injunction prohibiting any Federal official or employe, or Federal agency or bureau, or any other person or agency from carrying out the provisions of, or acting under the provisions of any Federal law, an appeal by the United States shall lie from such restraining order, decree, judgment, or injunction, directly to the Supreme Court of the United States."

Agency Liquor Plan In Virginia Is Denied

Richmond, Va., March 25 (AP).—The Alcoholic Beverage Control Board today announced that recently published reports that it was considering the placing of liquor in drug stores must have resulted from some misunderstanding.

"Published reports to the effect that the A. B. C. Board would probably adopt the agency system are incorrect," the announcement said.

the Federal Reserve Board, before the House Committee opposing the making of any particular price level a definite goal.

Britain's Step Awaited.

In some quarters, however, economists hold that the United States can do nothing regarding stabilization of the pound and dollar.

The latter has been given a definite gold export value of $35 an ounce, this opinion runs, and it remains for Great Britain to take the stabilizing step by pinning the pound to a certain quantity of the yellow metal.

However, it is considered doubtful Great Britain would do so without consulting the United States. However, dispatches from London are generally to the effect that England has no present intention of resuming the gold standard.

O'Neal Cites Benefits.

O'Neal told the banking committee yesterday that additional devaluation would be "the most effective step" that could be taken to boost employment and purchasing power and consolidate recovery thus far attained.

The farmer spokesman said in general the economic picture is much brighter than it was two years ago, but that farmers are still getting "little more than a subsistence income."

"Today's dollar," he said, "is too dear in terms of goods and services to permit normal business."

He said the Nation has gone as far toward recovery as possible without further devaluation. To stabilize the dollar now would be "ruinous," he asserted.

Archives Building Addition Dropped

Plan for Extra Roof Is Tabled After Objections.

The Treasury Department's plan to put an extra roof on the Archives Building is off, for the time being at least, because of objections raised by the Fine Arts Commission.

John Russell Pope, architect for the $12,000,000 structure at Seventh street and Pennsylvania avenue, which is nearing completion, was asked by the Treasury to design a heightened roof which would increase the building's capacity for state papers, historic documents and other archives.

When Dr. Charles Moore, chairman of the Fine Arts Commission, saw the drawing he registered protest with both the White House and the Treasury. The addition, he argured, would spoil the classic symmetry of the building.

Yesterday it was revealed that the plan has been dropped, at least until it becomes necessary to make provision for more room.

LaFontaine Is Sued For $25,000 in Fall

William Housenflock yesterday in the District Supreme Court filed suit against James A. La Fontaine, jr., for $25,000 damages for injuries he suffered in a fall last December when he visited a gaming place in nearby Maryland.

The plaintiff said that he had engaged in games of chance with the "defendant and others" on the date of his fall. Through his lawyer, William R. Lichtenberg, he claimed that on a second-floor landing he tripped on a piece of loose floor covering and fell. La Fontaine was charged with negligence in not keeping the floor properly covered.

Midnight Curfew Indorsed by Peery

Richmond, Va., March 25 (AP).—Gov. Peery today indorsed the midnight curfew Chief R. B. Jordan, of the Richmond police, invoked against a night club Saturday.

"I am old-fashioned enough to think that whatever your religion it is a good thing to show some respect for some day as the Sabbath," said the Governor. "Of course, moral suasion would be better than invoking ancient blue laws and stirring up resistance natural in people when they are coerced, but I don't suppose moral suasion will always work."

312 Miles Traveled Daily to Get Diploma

By the Associated Press.

Covington, Va., March 25.—Mrs. Irene Graves, of Clifton Forge, is determined to get her bachelor of arts degree from West Virginia State College at Montgomery, W. Va., this June—even if she does have to travel 312 miles each day going to and from classes.

Mrs. Graves, who is a mother and housekeeper, in addition to being a student, leaves Clifton Forge on a Chesapeake & Ohio Railway train shortly after 5 o'clock each morning and arrives in Montgomery only 5 minutes late for a 9 o'clock class. She returns each night, reaching Clifton Forge shortly after 9 p. m.

She prepares her class assignments while traveling. She spends her "spare" time at home in caring for her family, which includes a son in the fourth grade and daughter who will graduate from Clifton Forge High School this school year.

cated an intention to ask for Government regulation of all carriers, and has prepared the groundwork for such legislation by special messages and reports dealing with aviation, shipping and the railroads.

A general message covering the whole subject was looked for early this month, but presumably delays in Congress prompted the President to defer sending it.

Senator Robinson's statement also put pure food and drug legislation in the doubtful category. In this case, he declared, "it is thought" that a food and rug bill "may be brought forward." Mr. Roosevelt, in his last message to Congress, urged new food and drug legislation.

The Senate today will take up the Treasury-Postoffice appropriations bill, after which the measure to repeal the "pink slip" income tax publicity provision probably will be considered. Also on the calendar is the Black 30-hour-week bill, which the Administration opposes.

Another measure to which Mr. Roosevelt takes exception — the bonus—is not expected to be reached for several weeks. The President indicated, Senator Robinson said, that he would like this question put off until after his Florida cruise. The Senator would venture no prediction on an adjournment date for Congress.

the works program receiving $5,000 or more a year.

3. The amendment of Senator George (Democrat), Georgia, to clothe the President with discretionary authority to allocate works funds to the AAA for disbursement in place of processing taxes.

CCC Threatened.

When the measure reaches the conferees, probably today, speed will be essential as the President must sign the bill in some form before March 31 or the hundreds of thousands of men in the Civilian Conservation Corps will have to be sent home.

If the New Deal high command succeeds in knocking out the three undesirable amendments the works fight, which began nearly three months ago, will be far from over, because opponents will object in both Senate and House on acceptance of the conference report. Senator Huey Long probably will stage another Senate show to block approval of the conference report before the end of the week. A similar fight will be led in the House by Representatives Dies (Democrat), Texas, and other inflationists.

Buchanan sought unanimous consent yesterday to send the bill to conference. Representative Johnson (Democrat), Texas, reputedly at Buchanan's behest, objected. That stroke of strategy forestalled an immediate vote on an expected motion to require approval of the Thomas amendment.

Byrns and Buchanan discussed the situation with President Roosevelt. They later said efforts would be made to dispose finally of the legislation this week.

Rain Counters Dust Storms' Effects in West

Region Heartened Also by Prospect of U. S. Aid to Offset Menace.

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, March 25.—The plains country dug out of the dust tonight, grimly bent on rehabilitation and heartened by prospects of further government aid to halt the copper-hued plague.

New dust storms rolled over Oklahoma, southeastern Colorado and parts of Kansas and Missouri for a time today. Nowhere did they compare to those which blanketed middle America last week.

Rain for which farmers have prayed descended upon Oklahoma, but in such torrents it brought a new hardship—flooded roads and fields. A few drops fell in Kansas. Nebraska also had rain over the week-end with balmy weather today. Texas was bright and clear.

Federal Relief Assured.

Following the Oklahoma downpour, the worst dust clouds of the day cruised over that State. At Oklahoma City, visibility was cut to a mile.

While most of the affected regions enjoyed some relief, Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas was assured in Washington that the Government is ready to start an emergency "anti-dust storm" program.

The plan considered involves a system of "strip listing," the plowing up of virtual earthern barricades in fields at regular intervals to keep the soil from blowing.

Meanwhile, in southeastern Colorado, Baca County farmers hung on grimly as fairly clear skies gave them fresh hope of rehabilitation for the first time in two weeks.

Few, however, believed the respite was more than temporary. One authority predicted thousands of acres would be useless in farming and grazing for a century or more.

Bank Forced to Close.

R. J. Holt, cashier of the First State Bank of Pritchett, Colo., drew a poignant picture of years of hardship. The bank is liquidating and preparing to close because live stock loans are no longer possible in the heart of a once important cattle and sheep area.

With the pioneer spirit typical of the sector, however, Holt said the bank would retain its charter so that it might reopen if and when conditions improved.

Baca County's last real rain fell nearly two years ago, in June, 1933. It came in a sudden, heavy storm, however, and did little to break a drought which was then nearly two years old.

Northwestern Oklahoma, also hit hard, was promised relief by E. G. Jeffrey, managing director of the Oklahoma Rural Rehabilitation Corporation.

Plan of Huge Project For Farm Aid Offered

A proposal to enlist an army of men on work relief in a battle against dust storms was discussed with Relief Administration and Agriculture Department officials yesterday by Gov. Alfred M. Landon of Kansas.

The plan would call for throwing up earthern barricades at frequent intervals over the affected land to retard the movement of dust. While Gov. Landon represents only Kansas, the program is being discussed as it would apply to all the States affected by the storms.

The loss of millions of cubic feet of fertile land, blown into the air and carried eastward as far as the Atlantic Ocean, has become serious in the States affected, of which Kansas is the center.

Lawrence Westbrook, deputy relief administrator, told Landon that he would recommend allocation of relief funds for the project. The plan has been approved by Agriculture Department officials.

It is estimated the project would require the services of 20,000 men working with tractors.

The question of financing the project also was discussed with the Farm Credit Administration, where it was suggested that loans at the rate of $1 an acre be made to farmers. There is a question of whether FERA funds will be available until the works bill becomes a law.

Gov. Landon also saw Secretary Ickes and discussed with him the allocation of money under the works bill. Ickes told him that until President Roosevelt announces details of his works program it will be impossible to say how money will be allocated.

This Citizen Taxed Everything But Brain

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, March 25.—The absent-minded professor moved over today to make room for a new wool-gathering champion—an income tax payer.

John W. Terwilliger, acting collector of internal revenue, opened his mail and found a check for $2,304.07 as payment of income tax on a net income of $2,304.07. Terwilliger said the taxpayer actualy was entitled to $2,500 exemption. He returned the check.

Cooling Plant Assured For Interior Building

It promises to be a cool summer, no matter how high the mercury out of doors, for the 3,800 employes in the Interior Building.

Bids will be opened today and soon thereafter the contract will be awarded for air-conditioning the entire structure. "Fresh filtered air, cooled or heated, moistened or dehumidified, dependent upon the season, will be introduced into every room and the used air taken back to the fans and air washers," announced the department's National Park Service, which is supervising the project.

Maryland Saw Harder Times, Says Radcliffe

Yet State Should Not Under-Estimate Dangers, Senator Holds.

Declaring that "these are not the worst times that Maryland has known," Senator George L. Radcliffe (Democrat), of that State, yesterday told an audience of more than 1,000 persons at the University of Maryland that citizens of the State "are too practical to be over-optimistic."

In his address at the exercises commemorating Maryland Day, held at Ritchie Coliseum, he said he believed a sense of fairness and a clearness of vision will prevent the people of the State from underestimating the economic dangers which still threaten them.

"On the other hand," he declared, "I believe that they will weigh carefully and gauge quite accurately the factors which have made for recovery and they will continue to utilize them successfully."

Says State Won't Falter.

"They know that the results of their efforts during the last few years to work out of the depression have still left many big problems. Surely the people of Maryland realize that a spirit of confidence and optimism in their ability to handle in a resourceful and practical manner those problems that remain is justifiable."

He pointed out that as severe as some problems are, they are not more dangerous than Maryland has faced in the past.

"Surely, in this day, in view of the success already obtained, the people of our State are not going to falter in their movements, nor will they fail to do the wise and practical things which are necessary to carry them along much further on the road to recovery."

Articles Not Workable.

Senator Radcliffe said Maryland was founded on principles of religious toleration. He added that he "always believed that one of the principal reasons why the practical-minded men of Maryland delayed in agreeing to the Articles of Confederation (at the time of the Revolutionary War) was not because they were unwilling to cooperate on some basis, but merely because the plan originally suggested was not a good workable one."

"But the practical-minded men of Maryland," he added, also realized that no stable general government could be set up as long as various States continued to hold enormous areas of land in the West. Maryland insisted that States such as Massachusetts, New York and Virginia, surrender these lands to a common government to be created.

"Too little credit has been given to Maryland for its highly constructive vision in this matter and the remarkable success obtained by it in impressing its views. The result was that these lands were ceded and the supervision of them required the existence of a national government."

Senator Radcliffe was introduced by Dr. Raymond A. Pearson, president of the university. The exercises were opened with a march by the cadet band, invocation by the Rev. B. P. Robertson, pastor of the Hyattsville Baptist Church, and the singing of "Maryland, My Maryland." A chorus of 40 voices directed by Harlan Randall, head of the university's music department, also sang. Prof. Charles S. Richardson, chairman of the committee on nonresident lectures of the university, acted as master of ceremonies.

Plea of Catholic Church for Liberalism In Mexico Is Called Paradox by Official Reform Laws Amplified by Constitution of 1917.

By Dr. Luis Quintanilla, of the Mexican Foreign Service.

Victims of the Holy Inquisition of Mexico were held in dark dungeons in the basement of this imposing building in Mexico City, according to those who attack the religious regime. The building is now used by the Mexico National Museum of Medicine.

This is the fifth of a series of seven articles in reply to a series written for The Post by Frederick Vincent Williams. The Williams articles gave a Catholic viewpoint of conditions in Mexico. The article below and others in the present series reflect the official Mexican viewpoint. Where expressions appear in blacker type, the emphasis was indicated by the author. Dr. Quintanilla has been in the employ of the Mexican government for 15 years.

There is little room left for facts in Mr. Williams' atrocity serial. Fireworks of deliberate falsities will never succeed, however, in blinding the people to reality and historical truths.

When the reform movement of 1857 was in the making, the church had 1,073 parishes with some 22,300 ecclesiastics, 264 convents and monasteries with more than 8,000 nuns and monks.

The construction alone of the Cathedral of Mexico, the largest in the Western Hemisphere, cost $2,000,000; the Cathedral of Oaxaca, even more. The Cathedral of Puebla necessitated a construction outlay of $1,500,000; those of Aguascalientes and Chihuahua over $800,000 each; Zacatecas, $600,000.

In the Cathedral of Mexico, the railings and balustrades alloyed from copper, silver and gold, were imported from China at a cost of $1,500,000. In the Church of Tepotzotlan, each of the altars alone is said to have cost $1,000,000. In the Cathedral of Morelia, the woodwork of the choir, including its candlesticks, ornamentations and sacred vessels, originally cost more than $3,500,000.

The robe of the Virgin "de los Remedios" was valued at $300,000; and that of the Virgin of the "Soledad" in Oaxaca, into which was woven 397,920 pearls, at $150,000.

Difficult to Exact Obedience, Gil Declared.

Dr. Portes Gil in his essay on the conflict between the church and state, says:

"It was hard for the Mexican government to exact obedience from so powerful a class, when its annual federal budget amounted to 24,000,000 pesos and its presidents or chief magistrates had never earned more than 36,000 pesos."

During the period extending from the independence to the reform movement which crystallized in the constitution of 1857, the Catholic hierachy became the stanchest supporters of all reactionary and clerical administrations so long as they stood against religious freedom and openly for Catholic exclusivism.

The constitution of 1824 provided: "Article III.—The religion of the Mexican nation is and will perpetually be the Roman Catholic Apostolic. The nation will protect it by wise and just laws and prohibit the exercise of any other whatsoever."

The next constitution, also adopted during clerical supported administrations, in 1842 reaffirmed religious intolerance of the former by providing in its Article II that "The nation professes the Roman Catholic Apostolic religion and will not tolerate the public exercise of any other."

Nothing sounds more paradoxical than the present claim of the Catholic hierarchy, in Mexico, for tolerance and liberalism. Without a single exception, as history conclusively shows, the liberal governments striving to change the shameful state of affairs, had to fight relentlessly official anathemas of Rome and attempts of clerical armed rebellion. I even venture to say that the traditional hatred of the Catholic Church for tolerance and liberalism in Mexico is the only reasonable explanation of its century-old conflict with the state.

This and this only seems to explain the fact that in a country whose inhabitants are in their majority nominal Catholics, the hierarchy has always been and is now attacked by a great percentage of its own flock.

Peculiarity of Situation Noted By Peace Foundation.

The "World Peace Foundation" in a short chapter on the "Development of Religious Policy, Volume IX, No. 5, 1926," has rightly pointed out the striking peculiarity of this Mexican situation in the following paragraph: "The uncommon spectacle of the adherents of a religion ill-treating the leaders of that religion, was one of the phenomena of the Mexican Revolution. The explanation is to be found in history."

"Mexico is 90 per cent Catholic and is ruled by 10 per cent who are not." The statement quoted above is to be found not only in Mr. Williams' articles but also in every article written by Catholic propagandists. What neither the former nor the latter can reasonably explain is how such an anomalous long-aged situation is possible.

"Through fear," states Mr. Williams in his hair-raising tales.

I have pointed out in my three first articles the falsity of all this atrocity campaign. I have now before me the first article written by S. L. A. Marshall in the New York Times of March 18, 1935. It is by no means an article written by a Mexican Government propagandist. On the contrary, it stands against the policy followed by Mexico on religion and education; but I am glad to quote from this very first article of Mr. Marshall the following paragraph concerning the foolish atrocity campaign of which Mr. Williams is an outstanding exponent. Said Mr. Marshall:

"Mexico is not terrorized by its religious conflict and stories to that effect are 95 per cent bunk."

Rule by Tyrannical Minority Is Denied.

The Mexican government's policy is not that of a tyrannical minority against a defenseless majority. It is a fight of the great majority of the Mexican people, Catholics and non-Catholics, against the unconceivable pretention of a church which has lost its national prestige. The so-called Mexican "conflict" is nothing but the legitimate contention of a revolutionary majority to wipe out what is left of a clerical party supported by only a minority of fanatics.

The attitude assumed by the church in 1935 is exactly the same as that taken in 1810, 1822, 1833, 1865, or, to speak of the twentieth century only, 1913, 1917, 1926 and 1934. These dates do not mean much to the foreign reader, but they do have a meaning for Mexican citizens, because they remind them of past attacks against liberal governments of their country.

It must be added that even in spite of foreign support accorded to clerical parties—as was the case of the ill-fated Emperor Maximilian—the Mexican "Liberals," who are the "Revolucionarios" backing the present administration, have always come out as victors in this century-old controversy.

Church Plea for Liberalism Is Declared a Paradox.

When the hierarchy, in 1935, dares to speak against persecution and in favor of liberalism, there is not a conscious Mexican citizen who will fail to consider this claim as an historical paradox.

The Archbishop of Michoacan, Clemente de Jesus Munguia, wrote on November 15, 1854, a pastoral letter in which he said: "Liberty of cults, liberty of conscience are two programs as impious as they are disastrous."

The nemesis of the church hierarchy in Mexico was Benito Juarez. As Hidalgo was the hero of the independence; Juarez was the hero of reform.

Coming into power right after the promulgation of the liberal constitution of 1857—which for the first time gave Mexico religious freedom—Juarez remained president up to the time of his death in 1872.

He proclaimed in 1859 the famous law of reform, whose liberal provisions are still at the bottom of the present controversy. These laws nationalized ecclesiastical property to the extent of approximately 45,000,000 pesos, suppressed the religious orders, established civil marriage and birth registration and transferred the cemeteries to civil control. They furthermore decreed total independence between the affairs of the state and those of the church, adding that the government would limit itself to protect all religions, the Catholic, as well as others.

The promulgation of the laws of reform increased the wrath of the clergy.

Ill-Fated Expedition Of Maximilian Recalled.

A delegation of the Catholic hierarchy presided over by the Archbishop of Mexico went to Europe in order to get in touch with the Catholic monarchs of the continent. Napoleon III, Emperor of France, selected the Austrian archduke, Maximilian to become Mexican Emperor, with the help of the French army. Three years afterward the Mexican patriots, led by Juarez, succeeded in defeating the foreign invaders. Maximilian was court-martialed and executed. Thus, once more, clerical intrigues against liberalism had failed.

Upon the death of Juarez, and during the presidency of Lerdo de Tejada, reform laws were decreed in a more definite form. Religious freedom was reaffirmed and so was the independence between church and state.

Moreover, religious instruction and practices of any creed were forbidden in public establishments, and it was ordered that the principles of morality be taught in the school without any reference to any particular religion.

Both the constitution and laws of reform, which had put an end to Catholic despotism by the inauguration of religious freedom, were bitterly opposed by the Catholic Church. Pope Pius IX issued a mandate against the constitution of the republic—an act without parallel in the nineteenth century. I quote from the Pope's condemnation the following paragraphs:

Papal Mandate Condemned Proposed Constitution.

"Among other things, this proposed constitution proscribes the privilege of ecclesiastical immunity . . . and more easily to corrupt customs . . . admits the free exercise of all cults and gives permission to emit publicly any kind of opinion and thought . . . Thus we make known to the faith in Mexico, and to the Catholic universe, that we energetically condemn every decree that the Mexican government has enacted against the Catholic religion, against the church, and her sacred ministers and pastors, against her laws, rights and property, and also against the authority of this Holy See. We raise our pontifical voice with apostolic freedom before you to condemn, reprove and declare null, void and without any value, the said decree, and all other which have been enacted by the civil authorities in such contempt of the ecclesiastical authority of this Holy See."

How could the heirarchy be satisfied? Even Maximilian, a most Catholic prince, was attacked for his policy of religious tolerance. He felt obliged to utter the following rebuke: "You say that the Mexican Church has never taken part in politics. Would to God it were true; but unfortunately, we have unimpeachable witnesses who can testify to the sad but evident truth that the very dignitaries of the church have thrown themselves into revolutions, and that a considerable portion of the clergy has maintained an obstinate and active resistance against the legitimate authority of the state."

Those words seem to come from the lips of an Obregon, of a Calles, or today of Cardenas. Yet they were said by a Catholic prince belonging to one of the greatest Catholic reigning houses of his time.

Constitution of 1917 Amplified Reform Laws.

The provisions of the constitution of 1917 are in some respects mere amplifications of those embodied in the reform laws. Obregon and Calles were scandalously attacked by the Catholic propagandists of 1926-28, just like Cardenas and his cabinet are being attacked today, because they all have been firm in their determination to strictly enforce the spirit of the constitution of 1917 concerning religious freedom and secular education. Those men have not been and are not bloody and arbitrary despots. The laws they swore to enforce upon taking their oath are well rooted in the history of the country. The present situation is not a whimsical nightmare, but simply a logical stage in Mexican history; something that had to be done sooner or later, and which will continue to develop, in spite of the traditional clerical and reactionary hostility.

What is the constitution of 1917? What has the Mexican revolution done for the masses of Mexico? This could have been told to the readers; but instead, abuse has been poured on the persons of the revolutionary movement, who were and are trying to bring to realization in the lives of all the Mexican people, the principles proclaimed in your Declaration of Independence in 1776: "Life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

Missourian Goes on Rampage Which Is Ended by Tear Gas

Attacks Policemen, Then Wrecks Jail Property in Charles Town, W.Va.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charles Town, W. Va., March 25. Ben Johnson, of Unionville, Mo., caused quite a furor in this community tonight when he went on a rampage, swearing at a preacher, breaking up a cell in the city jail, and hitting a policeman with a cup and saucer. He was finally subdued with tear gas and placed in the county jail here.

The man first appeared at the home of the Rev. J. W. Rosenberger, local Methodist minister, and asked for something to eat. The minister, seeing that the man had imbided of spirits too freely, refused the request and Johnson proceeded to push the door of the parsonage open and swear at the preacher. Policeman Dewey Ambrose was called and placed the man in the city jail. There the trouble started again.

Johnson broke up furniture and then proceeded to tear two steel cots from the wall. When Ambrose and Constable T. W. Allen attempted to pacify the prisoner, he proceeded to hit Allen in the head with a cup and saucer. The officers then decided to take Johnson to the county jail and were forced to use tear gas to subdue him.

Finally, he was placed in a cell in the jail, where he proceeded to tear his clothes to shreds. This completed, he started to knock out windows. Jailer R. J. Madison then placed the man in a padded cell, where he was finally quieted.

Democrats Save Republican Dogs

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., March 25.—Republican politicians are held to be on rather friendly terms, but that bond of good cheer apparently does not extend to their pets.

Every time State's Attorney Roscoe C. Rowe, of Anne Arundel County, walks into the Executive Mansion Grounds, Buddy, the Governor's bull dog, and the State's attorney's pup, tangle.

It took two Democrats yesterday to save the dogs from each other when they went into a clinch. Then they found that Rowe was an undisturbed spectator.

Mine Walkout Call Is Blamed On Union Foes

Action Unauthorized, Says Murray in Attack on Oppositionist.

By the Associated Press.

Philip Murray, vice president of the United Mine Workers, maintained last night that interests unfriendly to the union were responsible for an unauthorized western Pennsylvania soft coal strike call.

Martin Ryan, at odds with mine union chiefs for nearly two years, called the strike yesterday for April 1. Ryan has had a following in the steel company-owned mines of Fayette County.

"Ryan doesn't represent any one, but is defying the laws and policies of the United Mine Workers," Murray said.

"He is a self-constituted leader, wholly irresponsible, and is obviously attempting to create division within the ranks of the organization which is undoubtedly inspired by people whose interests are inimical to the United Mine Workers of America."

William Hynes, president of the district in which Ryan lives, joined Murray in the statement.

Meantime, Appalachian soft-coal operators and the United Mine Workers continued their dickering on new wage-and-hour contracts without substantial progress toward agreement.

The miners demand a 50-cent increase in their basic daily wage, now $5 in the North and $4.60 in the South, and a cut in their work week from 35 to 30 hours under new contracts to take effect April 1.

The operators offer renewal of present wages and hours for one year.

Unless new contracts are signed by next Sunday night, John L. Lewis, mine union president, asserted the miners would strike.

Failure to reach an agreement at this stage of a wage and hour conference is not unusual, however. Contracts have been signed in the past on the last night before old ones expired.

Officers have been seeking Loomis since early in January.

Assets of Firm Cited in Action On Mellon Tax

250 Worked on Appraisal of McClintic-Marshall, Testimony Shows.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, March 25.—Approximately 250 persons were engaged in a 1924 retrospective valuation of the McClintic-Marshall Corporation which increased the concern's tangible assets as of March 1, 1913, by $20,000 to approximately $3,000,000, it was testified today in the Andrew W. Mellon income tax case.

Counsel for Mellon, who owned 30 per cent of the stock, contend the company's actual market value as of that date was approximately $15,000,000. The Government, trying to show Mellon made more profit than he reported in his 1931 income in the merger of the company with Bethlehem Steel, asserts the actual value was about $5,000,000.

Many Work on Appraisal.

A. B. Hossack, assistant vice president of the American Appraisals Co., of Milwaukee, which made the retrospective appraisal, said approximately 25 men were kept in the field for eight or nine months and that more than 200 were employed in the office to compile the data.

In earlier testimony, witnesses have related that this appraisal was accepted for a period of 14 years by the Government for certain tax purposes and was first questioned in this case, being heard by the Tax Appeals Board.

Five volumes of reports on the appraisal were introduced in evidence and Hossack said he had four steamer trunks filled with other documents covering details.

Grew to Giant Concern.

McClintic-Marshall rose from a $250,000 concern in 1900 to a $65,000,000 giant in 1930 that had paid more than $8,000,000 to its stockholders in cash dividends, witnesses have testified.

Hossack was scheduled to be the final witness dealing with establishment of a "base figure" for the company.

Mellon was not in court for the start of the sixth week of his case in which the Government is trying to collect $3,089,000 on his 1931 income. More than $1,000,000 of this is involved in McClintic-Marshall transactions.

Probation Post Given Reeves; Steele Retired

District Justices Name Successor to Official Ill Many Months.

In a general term session of the District Supreme Court, the nine justices yesterday retired Amos A. Steele, veteran probation officer, and appointed in his stead Joseph Y. Reeves, now secretary to Associate Justice William Hitz, of the United States Court of Appeals. The appointment is effective April 1.

Steele's retirement was forecast several months ago when he suffered a nervous breakdown in court. At that time, he was sent home under the care of his family physician in the hope a long rest would restore his health.

His failure to improve and the press of work at the probation office, yesterday led to selection of Reeves. During Steele's absence, his wife, for many years his assistant, has been carrying on the work.

The probation office in the District Supreme Court is one of the busiest in the city. Often, 30 or 40 cases a week are assigned to the office. In addition, those placed on probation must report regularly to the office.

Reeves is married and has several children. He lives at 2006 Columbia road. He has been Justice Hitz's secretary a number of years. The probation post carries $3,600 annual salary.

Courtney Rifle Squad Ready To Blaze at Chicago Gangs

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 25.—Rifle squads of the detective bureau were on the mark tonight awaiting orders for what may be Chicago's greatest round-up of underworld hoodlums—a hunt for the would-be assassins of State's Attorney Thomas J. Courtney.

Going about under convoy of two sharpshooting detectives, the young prosecutor who narrowly escaped death Sunday morning was tight-lipped about his detailed plan of action, but Chief of Detectives John Sullivan asserted:

"We have a program. There's going to be heat, and plenty of it, in this investigation."

The eight bullets pumped into the rear seat of Courtney's automobile were fired by a gunman less than 2 feet away, and the prosecutor's chauffeur, Policeman John Cronin, examined files of the bureau of identification today, certain he could point out the attacker.

Courtney promised swift reprisal. "We have already gone into action," he said, "and we'll hit a vital spot soon. We know who they are."

But he would not mention names, nor suggest a motive. Theories generally expressed have been that the gunmen either meant to warn the prosecutor to "lay off" or to rid gamblers or labor racketeers of opposition from Courtney.

A hint of a sudden series of raids throughout the city came from the State's attorney.

"We're going to line up the people who might have a motive for it," he said. "Then, by a process of elimination, we will select those we think most likely to be guilty. We'll bring them in by a series of raids and get to the bottom of this thing."

He scouted a theory that Capone gang remnants had any connection with the assault, and Chief Sullivan said he was convinced the men were not hired killers, who would have used machine guns to make sure of their work. The bullets were fired from a pistol.

Brothers Hunted As Girl's Slayer

Escort Identifies Pair in Oklahoma Shooting.

By the Associated Press.

Pawhuska, Okla., March 25.—Sheriff's officers beat the hilly scrub-oak thickets of Eastern Osage County tonight in search of Theodore and Everett Tucker, brothers, charged with murder after the slaying of Miss Betty Stewart, of Cleveland, Okla., on a country highway.

Hugh Jones, assistant Osage County prosecutor, filed the charges. He said Jobe Callison, 40, the woman's escort, had identified the Tucker brothers as Miss Stewart's slayers.

Callison, the Tuckers and Miss Stewart were traveling to Sand Springs, Okla., in the same motor car. Jones quoted Callison as saying the brothers had made improper advances to Miss Stewart, and that the men obtained a shotgun and ordered Callison to surrender a pistol. Callison said he escaped by leaping from the car.

Howe Rallies, Roosevelt Off On Fishing Trip

Secretary's Plea for Smoke Causes President to Begin 2-Week Rest.

nosis were Drs. G. C. Thomas, Luther Sheldon, W. H. Hargrave and Robert G. Duncan.

Mr. Roosevelt has visited the sick room of his friend and secretary daily, but the interludes of consciousness have been few, it was learned. Because of the illness, the President put off his scheduled departure Saturday, and Mrs. Roosevelt likewise canceled all social engagements at the White House.

In announcing plans for the cruise, the White House said the President would keep within one hour's sailing distance from the shore and would be ready at all times to hasten back to Washington.

Other members of "the Nourmahal gang" are already aboard the yacht. They include Vincent Astor and Kermit Roosevelt—both distant relatives of the President—Judge Frederic Kernochan, Rhinelander Stewart, Lytle Hull and George St. George, all of New York, and Dr. Leslie Heiter, of Mobile, Ala. The President's eldest son, James Roosevelt, also is in Florida and will join the party.

Mr. Roosevelt took with him only one secretary, Marvin H. McIntyre, who was to proceed with others of the White House staff to Miami, where temporary headquarters will be set up at the Miami-Biltmore Hotel.

Members of Mr. Howe's family, who came here when his condition became critical, meantime planned to return home. Mrs. Howe is to leave tonight for their home at Fall River, Mass., accompanied by her son, Hartley Howe, a Boston newspaperman. Mr. Howe's daughter, Mrs. Mary Baker, will remain until Mrs. Howe returns, after which she will go to her home at Champaign, Ill.

Rosa Ponselle Admits Plan to Go Hollywood

Kansas City, March 25 (AP).—Rosa Ponselle, opera singer, is "flirting with the idea" of going Hollywood.

She said she'd lost 10 pounds recently—riding a bike.

Speeches, Dinner and Dances Mark Maryland's Birthday

Many Get Holiday as State Marks 301st Anniversary of Founding.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, March 25.—Maryland celebrated her 301st birthday today. It was on this day in the year 1634 that the State's founders landed from the Ark and the Dove in what is now St. Mary's County.

The anniversary was commemorated by speeches, dinners and dances. Senator George L. Radcliffe addressed the student body of the University of Maryland on the State's colonial and modern history.

President Amos W. W. Woodcock, of St. John's College, spoke at the annual meeting of the Eastern Shore Society in Baltimore. The Maryland Colonial Society held its yearly dinner, and a charity ball was arranged in Baltimore.

Senator Millard E. Tydings was scheduled to deliver an address before the Maryland Society of the District of Columbia, but was forced to cancel his appointment in order to make a radio address concerning the soldiers' bonus.

Banks were closed in the State, and many commercial organizations gave employes half-holidays.

Appendicitis Strikes Just Before Nuptial

By the Associated Press.

South Boston, Va., March 25.—Appendicitis delayed a wedding here yesterday—30 minutes before the strains of the wedding march from "Lohengrin" were due to start.

The ceremony, which was to unite Michael Priolo, of New Bransford, N. J., and Miss Margaret New, of South Boston, was set for 1 o'clock. At 12:30, however, Miss New was rushed to Halycon Hospital for an emergency appendectomy. She was reported to be recovering.

The wedding will be held as soon as she recovers fully, it was said.

Two Girl Friends Of Karpis Jailed

Plead Guilty to Harboring Bremer Suspects.

By the Associated Press.

Miami, Fla., March 25.—Two "girl friends" of fugitive Alvin Karpis, wanted in the Edward G. Bremer kidnaping case, today were sentenced to five years in Federal prison.

Wynona Burdette and Delores Delaney, brought before Federal Judge H. L. Ritter, pleaded guilty to five indictments charging them with harboring and concealing Karpis.

Karpis and his pal, Harry Campbell, abandoned the women last January in Atlantic City, N. J., after police routed them out of their hotel with gunfire.

District Attorney John E. Holland said they would be assigned to some Federal women's institution by Attorney General Homer S. Cummings.

Girl Stabber Arkansan, She Admits to Police

New Orleans, March 25 (AP).—Mystery surrounding the 23-year-old girl accused of fatally stabbing John Irving Pierce, scion of a prominent Mississippi family, at a night club, was partially lifted today with her asserted statement to Policeman Harry Gregson that she was born Bonnie Hill, in rural Arkansas.

When arrested she told officers she was Marion King, had worked for newspapers in New York, Detroit and Chicago, and had succumbed to the use of narcotics when "down and out" in New Orleans. A check failed to show any record of her having worked for newspapers in any of the cities.

Mexican Kidnapers Release Americans

Fowler and Vremsak Held for 10 Days.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Mexico City, March 25.—Mark Fowler and Louis F. Vremsak, Americans, who were kidnaped ten days ago by Mexican bandits, were released last night, the military commander of Aguascalientes district stated tonight.

Vremsak, whose home is in Santa Barbara, Calif., was released in the mountains last night and arrived safe this afternoon at Aguascalientes.

The Aguascalientes army commander said that Fowler, a long-time resident of Mexico, had been released last night and was expected to arrive at Aguascalientes later tonight. Mexican troops are in pursuit of the kidnapers.

Cowley Killer, Pal of Nelson, Gets Life Term

Chase, Slayer of U.S. Agent, Is Spared Noose by Federal Jury.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 25.—A Federal court jury tonight convicted John Paul Chase of the slaying of Inspector Samuel P. Cowley, of the Department of Justice, and fixed his punishment at life imprisonment.

The verdict of guilty carried a recommendation of mercy, which made life imprisonment mandatory. The Government had demanded the death penalty to punish the companion of the late George ("Baby Face") Nelson, Dillinger mobsman, in the slaying of two Federal officers.

Out since 4:17 p. m., the jury shortly before 8 p. m. asked Judge Philip L. Sullivan for further instructions, wanting to know specifically if the jury found the defendant guilty without capital punishment, would he be kept in prison for the rest of his natural life.

The judge answered that after the convicted prisoner was turned over to the United States marshal, the court had no further jurisdiction in the matter and parole was up to the Federal parole board and the President.

The jury again retired and about 30 minutes later reached its verdict.

Inspector Cowley and Herman E. Hollis met death before the blazing guns of the two desperadoes as the Government's war against the Dillinger gang was drawing to an end last November. Nelson died the next day, a victim of the officers' bullets.

Chase, an obscure California bootlegger until his partnership with Nelson brought notoriety, fled across country and was captured near Mount Shasta, Calif., in December.

Self-defense against unrecognized "enemies" was Chase's plea in mitigation of the admitted shooting.

Chase's trial was the first under a new law making the assault or killing of a Federal officer a Federal crime.

Funeral Service Held For Lucy Minnigerode

Funeral services for Miss Lucy Minnigerode, chief of the nursing corps of the Public Health Service who died Sunday, were conducted yesterday at "Vauxcleuse," the home of Mrs. Eliphalet F. Andrews, on Seminary Hill, Alexandria, by the Rev. Dr. Mayer, of Leesburg.

The body was later taken to Leesburg, the early home of Miss Minnigerode, for burial.

Hitler Invited To Peace Talks With Ex-Allies

Britons Urge Presence in Italy April 11; Soviet, Poland to Be Asked.

By the United Press.

Paris, March 25.—The British Mission in Berlin today urged Adolf Hitler to participate with the former allied powers in a peace conference in northern Italy next month, advices reaching Paris said tonight.

Italy, France and Britain, also will invite Poland and Russia to join the conference, together with representatives from Central European and Balkan nations, in a move to make it a general gathering for a "new deal" in Europe, as predicted last week.

The conference is to be held in Stresa on April 11, and at France's suggestion the extraordinary session of the League of Nations' council on German rearmament has been postponed until April 15, at the earliest, to permit the Reich's participation in this new peace move.

Britain Causes Change.

Change in the plans to permit Germany's position to come before the world at a general parley away from Geneva—which she has deserted—resulted from British pressure, it was learned.

The mission to Berlin thus develops into an "exploratory voyage," to use Sir John's own words, during which a compromise will be sought between the German and French viewpoints.

Meanwhile, the chamber of deputies continued speeding its approval of government preparedness bills, including one appropriating 785,000,000 francs (about $50,450,000) for additional warships.

Another bill calling on the government to take measures for protection of the civil population from air attacks was passed.

Naval Building Bill.

Under the naval building bill, two 35,000-ton warships are to be constructed, one to be laid down this year and the other probably in 1937. Despite all these plans, a certain section of the press feels France is falling behind in the international arms race.

Premier Pierre-Etienne Flandin, in a radio speech tonight warned that international difficulties led to the German invasion in 1870, and recalled that Premier Benito Mussolini, of Italy, predicted the most trying years following the World War would be 1935-36.

Laval May Go to Moscow.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, March 25.—Pierre Laval, French foreign minister, will go to Moscow immediately after a session of the League of Nations Council, April 15, to hear France's appeal against German rearmament, it was said today in official circles.

On the Russian visit, Laval is expected to push the proposed eastern mutual assistance pact.

Although France is closely following Anglo-German negotiations in progress in Berlin, she is expected to go through with the eastern pact regardless of the Berlin results.

Political Holiday Set on Philippines

Parties Agree to Coalition on New Home Rule.

By the Associated Press.

A Filipino "political holiday" in order to present a united front in launching the island's home-rule government this fall was announced here yesterday by Manuel L. Quezon.

Quezon said important political leaders had agreed to temporary coalition of the two dominant parties and that only one candidate for president and one candidate for vice president would be presented at the first elections in November. Quezon is expected to be the first president and Senator Sergio Osmena, Quezon's bitterest political opponent only a year ago, is reported to have been chosen as the vice president.

Filipinos said Manuel Roxas, a member of the present coalition mission to Washington, will either be speaker of the new unicameral national assembly or commissioner to Washington.

May Empower President to Restrict Foreign Trade and Travel.

stay at home regardless of what happened abroad.

The members of the Nye committee who conferred with the President were Senator Gerald P. Nye (Republican), North Dakota, chairman of the group; Senators Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan; James P. Pope (Democrat), of Idaho; Warren W. Barbour (Republican), of New Jersey; Bennett C. Clark (Democrat) of Missouri; Walter F. George (Democrat), of Georgia, and Homer T. Bone (Democrat), of Washington.

The President found in the Nye committee, it was asserted yesterday, a disposition to go just as far as possible to prevent situations which might become sources of friction in the event the dreaded war abroad comes. Members of the group immediately set about the preparation of legislation.

Theory Underlying Plan.

The theory underlying the plan to give the President discretion to restrict foreign travel and trade by Americans in war time is that this country can not become involved in an European conflict unless American lives and property are destroyed. The question of national honor and prestige becomes an issue when American lives are lost.

If Americans are forbidden to enter war zones or to travel on ships of belligerents, there will be no possibility that they will come to harm and thus arouse the country, as happened during the first years of the World War, especially after the sinking of the Lusitania.

The proposal to withdraw the government's protection from American shipping venturing into the war zone was inspired by like reasoning. The United States twice has gone to war in defense of its right to freedom of the seas. But the major maritime powers have yet to recognize such a right and it is believed by experts on the subject that almost certainly this right will be denied by belligerents in any future war of magnitude.

Warren Leader in Move.

Charles Warren, former Assistant Attorney General and a leader in the movement for immediate determination of a neutrality policy, has proposed that this country abandon its insistence on freedom of the seas and seek international agreements whereby belligerents seizing American cargoes destined for a neutral country but suspected of being contraband should compensate the owners for all goods requisitioned and the cost of the delay of the ship and cargo.

In the event the belligerents in a conflict refuse to agree to pay for seized cargoes, Mr. Warren would have the United States restrict the exportation to such countries of articles marked down by them as contraband. He would have the President empowered either to prohibit all such exports or put into effect an export quota equal to the amount of such articles exported to that country annually over a five-year peace period.

"That would be real neutrality and not mere technical neutrality such as prevailed in the World war," he recently asserted.

Would Hit Contraband List.

This plan would have the benefit of penalizing the extension of contraband lists, he believes, "for any article added to its contraband list by a belligerent would be at once placed on the quota list by the United States, and its export not only to neutral countries but to the belligerents themselves would be restricted to a pre-war export amount."

Mr. Warren insists that "neutrality will not keep us out of war unless the American people are willing to make sacrifices" and we must be prepared "to relinquish to some extent private trade and private commercial profit for the sake of better safeguarding the neutrality of our country."

In an article in Foreign Affairs a year ago, which has been seriously considered at the State Department, Mr. Warren proposed that legislation be passed now empowering the President in case of conflicts abroad to forbid the making of loans to the belligerents, to close American ports to ships of the belligerents, embargo munitions shipments into the war zone, as well as to restrict foreign trade and travel by Americans as now proposed.

Proposals Are Studied.

Some members of the Nye committee, it is understood, have carefully studied the Warren proposals and favor adopting them. Whether the legislation now being prepared will go as far as Mr. Warren has proposed has not yet been decided. If it does American business interests are expected to object strenuously and the legislation may become the center of the sharpest fight on Capitol Hill in years.

Even though the program is limited, it is expected that the proposal virtually to abandon insistence on freedom of the seas will bring a storm of controversy on the Senate floor.

Bill Raises Pay Scale In Vocational Schools

Washington's vocational schools would be given a rating equal to the District Junior High schools under the terms of a bill introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Reuben Wood (Democrat), Missouri, veteran labor spokesman.

The bill, which is sponsored by the Central Labor Union, would amend the teachers' salary act so as to pay teachers in vocational schools on the same scale as that applied to junior high schools.

A similar measure is pending before the Budget Bureau, having been offered by the Board of Education. School officials estimate that the change would cost the District about $6,700 annually.

PRIME MINISTER MacDONALD.

Berlin Mission May Save Rule Of MacDonald

Conferences' Success Might Check Waning Popularity, Prevent Overthrow.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

London, March 25.—Success of the British peace mission to Germany may go far toward saving the government of Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald from downfall.

The visits of Sir John Simon, foreign secretary, to Berlin and of Capt. Anthony Eden, lord privy seal, to Germany and Moscow, mean much to the present national government. Success could check its waning popularity, political experts agreed tonight and save Britain from the added danger of a government overthrow.

The MacDonald ministry has attempted to play the role of "honest broker" in world diplomacy on four notable occasions of late with varying success:

1. In November, when the United States and Japanese naval delegations in London were at loggerheads regarding Japan's demand for naval equality, Britain stepped forward with a compromise proposal. The move failed.

Budapest-Belgrade Mediation.

2. Britain mediated to practically everyone's satisfaction when, after King Alexander's assassination and the explusion of hundreds of Hungarians from Yugoslavia, she persuaded Budapest and Belgrade to bury their hatchets.

3. London's surprise decision to send an expeditionary force to the Saar as part of the small international army of occupation assigned to maintain peace during the January plebiscite was generally hailed as wise and effective.

4. Although its ultimate outcome is still in suspense, Britain has been credited with exercising a moderating influence in the Italo-Abyssinian dispute.

Defense of Army Increase.

Unfortunately for the government, however, the white paper it presented to the Parliament on March 4, defending the $50,000,000 increase in army, navy and air force appropriations, tended to destroy much of the popularity won at home by previous ventures in foreign affairs. Anti-government forces convinced many British voters that the white paper signified Britain's entry into the new world arms race and a weakening, if not abandonment, of faith in the League of Nations.

This loss of support now renders it all the more urgent for Sir John and Capt. Eden to extract the concessions needed from Adolf Hitler and Josef Stalin, in Moscow, for the reorganizatibn of Europe on a basis of collective security.

Opponents' Accusations.

Political factions opposing the government, especially the Labor Party, are trying to discredit the MacDonald coalition cabinet by accusing it of sacrificing a policy of peace, disarmament and collective safety in favor of rearmament and jingoism. Hence, the Simon-Eden mission is of signal importance not only to the general peace of Europe, but to the life of the British government at home.

Members of the government privately are admittedly doubtful as to the prospects of success in these new peace gestures. However, they argue with conviction that they at least will have done everything possible for peace, thus blocking charges of failure to try to subdue the suspicions, hatreds and warlike preparations disturbing Europe.

Jacob, German Writer And Anti-Nazi, Jailed

Berne, Switzerland, March 25 (AP). The German foreign office today informed the Swiss government that Bethold Jacob, German journalist who disappeared from Basel March 9, had been arrested on German soil and jailed.

(Jacob is known in Switzerland as an anti-Nazi, and a refugee from Germany. He is credited with having predicted last October that Germany would restore compulsory military training.)

at Hitler's assurance of peaceful intentions toward Russia. Earlier he had insisted, it was understood, on a big army and navy for Germany in order to defend Europe from communism.

The British foreign minister unexpectedly asked the question:

"Are you expecting to take Memel?"

Memel is the mandated territory in Lithuania which was placed under the League of Nations' control after the World War.

In answer to Sir John Hitler frankly stated Germany's readiness to enter into a treaty with Lithuania.

Der Fuehrer was said to have insisted upon a German navy capable of controlling the Baltic Sea, with a good-sized air fleet as well, talking as if his regenerated army was an accomplished fact, not to be changed by the present negotiations.

The meeting was held behind closed doors and the reaction of Sir John and Eden to the German attitude was not immediately disclosed.

Pact Reported Discussed.

The proposed pact for eastern European security, a cardinal point in the recent Anglo-French accord to which it was hoped Germany would subscribe, was understood to have been discussed at length.

A brief communique issued at 7:15 p. m. at the close of the first day's conversations, said:

"Conversations took place this morning and this afternoon on some points mentioned in the Anglo-French communique of February 3. These conversations will be resumed tomorrow."

Two hundred newspaper correspondents who had gathered at the British Embassy in the expectation of a vitally important announcement burst into laughter at the meagerness of the communique.

A warning that "it can be assumed that no surprising results will come from the Berlin discussions" had appeared in the Deutsche Diplomatism Politische Korrespondenz, the mouthpiece of the German foreign office. The paper added significantly "the conversations are an important link in a chain which it is hoped will not be broken off early, as has happened often before."

Eden in Major Role.

Upon the youthful shoulders of Capt. Anthony Eden rested largely, it was understood, the responsibility of persuading Hitler to agree to Germany's return to the League of Nations.

It was generally agreed in Wilhelmstrasse circles that if there is anyone who can overcome the German Fuehrer's aversion to multilateral and international parleys characteristic of the league and even of the league's council, it is Britain's nimble and adaptable lord keeper of the privy seal.

Men close to Hitler recalled that the German chief was very favorably impressed by Eden when he came to Berlin on February 20, 1934, to study the German situation.

Attitude Toward League.

If the British delegation should succeed in obtaining Hitler's promise to rejoin the league it will have carried its point even against the German foreign office. Officials from Von Neurath down make no secret of the fact that they do not relish the idea of going back to Geneva.

"Why should we go there and see how time is wasted on commissions and debates when we, who represent an authoritary state, can arrive at decisions so much faster by direct conference with another nation?" they ask.

Diametrically opposed to this viewpoint is another body of public opinion in Germany, inarticulate in the regimented press, but audible in cafes frequented by politically minded Germans and in private conversations.

This view holds that Hitler can well afford to make the gesture of returning to the league now that Germany has seized for herself the military equality denied her by the other signers of the Versailles Treaty.

Advantage in Bargaining.

While attaching little importance to the actual decisions of the league these Germans see on the one hand the political advantage of bargaining for re-entry into the league in return for British acquiescence in the program of rearmament on land, sea and in the air. On the other they see the propaganda value of a world forum or platform from which to announce German aims.

One argument which Hitler was said to have used liberally during today's discussions is that Nazi Germany claims for herself the credit of having saved Europe from bolshevism. He is supported in the argument by the nation's editorial writers who, in the evident hope that the British visitors will see or at least receive reports on the tenor of the German press, keep emphasizing the work for civilization performed by Germany in stemming the tide of bolshevism.

Hitler was reliably reported to have insisted on an adequate army and a navy capable of controlling the Baltic to continue in that defense role. Whether in that connection he also brought in the question of German minorities, especially the Memel region, and his belief that these minorities would be better treated if Germany could shake the big stick at states in which these minorities figure, was not revealed.

Officials Study Plan to Expand Naval Academy

Move to Provide Officers for Growing Fleet Is Considered.

By the Associated Press.

An expansion of the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis to provide officers for the rapidly growing fleet was revealed yesterday to be under consideration as part of the program to bring the Nation's sea forces to treaty strength.

With some Administration leaders placing strong Navy legislation on the "must" list and with three such bills scheduled for House passage this week, it was learned that the House Appropriations sub-committee for the Navy had studied the proposal to provide more future Navy officers.

Plan of Expansion.

By 1942, under present plans, 102 new vessels will be added to the fleet. A bill for an immediate increase of 1,000 in officer personnel is one of the three slated to go through this week. The others would spend $38,000,000 for improved shore stations and provide a system of air cadets to supply the aviation branch with personnel.

House leaders contend there is no connection between the present moves to strengthen the national defense and the crisis brought about by Germany's avowal of her intention to rearm.

The present strength of the Annopolis regiment of midshipmen is 1,000. One proposal is that it be increased by giving each member of Congress four or even five annual appointments instead of the present three. Until a few years ago the number stood at four, so that present facilities are for the most part sufficient to carry the projected increase.

Urge Building Program.

However, the Academy's board of visitors has recommended a $1,500,000 building program at the Academy, mostly for new officers quarters, but with a small amount for increased recitation room and barrack facilities.

The 1,000 increase in officer personnel is already an accomplished fact for the most part. While the present limit is 5,500 the Navy was authorized several years ago to disregard this figure in commissioning Academy graduates. The result is that the Navy now has approximately 6,100 officers.

Japan	58,626,664	424,769,158
Russia	466,113,370	806,000,000

Since June, 1934, all of these nations have intensified their military preparations even more than the above startling increases indicate.

Germany's Program.

Germany launched her rearmament program secretly last October in a move reportedly designed to make her huge army ready for war by March of next year. Reliable reports received by military sources in Geneva indicate German factories are working day and night to overcome Germany's deficiences in bombing war planes, heavy artillery and modern tanks.

Great Britain, whose preparations hitherto have lagged, is increasing her 1935 expenditures on her army by $19,750,000; her navy, $17,500,000, and the royal air force, $15,445,000.

The United States is increasing her army and greatly augmenting expenditures on the Navy air force.

Japan's Expenditure.

Japan's military expenditures this year are expected to exceed 50 per cent of her entire national budget. France shortly will have appropriated $100,000,000 for new air force equipment and is planning to construct two 35,000-ton super-battleships to counterbalance two similar ships Italy has ordered.

Russia also is augmenting her air force, artillery, tanks and navy in Europe and Asia. Military experts point out the striking power of modern equipment would make "the next war" far more terrible and destructive than the 1914-18 holocaust.

Culbertsons Lead Simses 890 After First Rubber of Bridge

Rivals Enter 'Ring' for Test After Speeches and Ceremonies.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 25.—Mr. and Mrs. Ely C. Culbertson won the first rubber tonight in their 150-rubber match at contract bridge with Mr. and Mrs. P. Hal Sims.

The rubber, requiring six hands, gave the Culbertsons a lead of 890 points. Each of the Culbertsons made a game, Sims made one game, Culbertson was set once and Mrs. Sims once. Mrs. Sims made one part score contract.

The agile, daring Culbertson and Simes, the heavyweight, with their wives as partners, opened the match tonight at Crockford's Club after a stag dinner and other minor preliminaries.

Aside from the heavy dining, other preliminaries were much like those for a "battle of the century" in the squared circle.

These included construction of a raised dias with two levels surrounding the arena for kibitzers, a 13-page "contract" govrening fines and "fouls," ironclad division of the 'take," and provisions as to what will happen should either contestant lose his temper—an eventually considered by many not at all unlikely.

There also are arangements for alternates should either of the contestants or their partners become ill during the 21-day match, and for numerous seconds, referees, etc.

Actually, the match is between Mr. and Mrs. Culbertson and Mr. and Mrs. Sims, but the wives—by terms of the contract—are 'silent" partners. Any protest they want to make must be registered through the official captain of the team, the husband.

A tardy player will be fined $25 for the first 15 minutes, $5 for ecah minute thereafter.. A walkout on the match will cost $5,000.

A doctor's certificate is required as proof of illness.

Among the bridge fraternity in New York betting on the outcome has ben heavy. Culbertson, it was said, has been favored slightly.

Textile Tax, Likened To Dog Fees, Is Upheld

New York, March 25 (AP).—Supreme Court Justice Charles B. McLaughlin today ruled that if the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animal can collect fees from dog owners the textile processing code authority can collect assessments against industry members.

The court made the decision in denying a motion by the defendant, the Up-To-Date Silk Yarn Dyeing Co., Inc., to dismiss a suit brought by the code authority to collect a $431 assessment.

$109,000,000 Bonds Of U. S. Are Missing

By the Associated Press.

Missing—$109,000,000 in Government bonds.

Normally, there are $52,000,000 of bonds which have been called for redemption and on which the interest has ceased, but which have never been turned in by their owners.

To these have been added $17,000,000 arising from the first call on the Fourth Liberty 4¼'s on October 15, 1933, and an additional $40,000,000 from the second call of the same issue, on October 15, 1934.

These bonds are still carried as a part of the national debt, under the caption "debt on which interest has ceased."

Danton Boy's Fate Up in Court Today

Father, in Custody Here, to Explain His Situation.

The Juvenile Court today will be called upon to decide what will become of 2½-year-old George Danton, whose mother is in New York, unable to care for him, and whose father is in the District Jail.

Since his father was arrested on a charge of using the mails to defraud, George has been under the care of Miss Vada Ritter, a Takoma Park nurse. But Miss Ritter has to go to work, so yesterday she turned the child over to the child welfare division of the Board of Public Welfare.

Last night George went to the receiving home to await appearance in court today. His father is due to appear, too, to say what, if anything, he can contribute to the child's support.

Hitlerites Pay Tribute to Race, Jews Are Told

Attacks of Nazis React to Benefit of Victims, Says Judge Lehman.

The "badge of shame" which the Nazis have tried to pin upon Jews has become a "badge of honor," Judge Irving Lehman, of the New York Court of Appeals, said at the banquet closing the thirty-fourth council of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations at the Hotel Willard last night.

"In unconscious tribute to the beauty and eternal truth of Judaism, and to the spirit of the Jews of Germany," he said, "the Nazi leaders have recognized that against doctrines such as these, against a system of government such as they imposed, true Jews would protest forever and the more dearly a Jew loved his country, the more intense and courageous such protest would be.

"I do not fear the spread of such doctrines in this country," Judge Lehman said. "This nation was formed in a spirit of love, freedom, equal justice. The truest service which its citizens can give this country is through the preservation of this spirit. There lies the future of Judaism in this country."

"Validity of Judaism."

Mrs. Max Schloss, of San Francisco, told the gathering that Jewish girls must train themselves Jewishly so that they may prepare their children to grow up as integrated Jews.

"The only chance for future happiness," she said, "is to know why we are Jews and to know the validity of Judaism."

"The future is not divorced from the past," said Rabbi Louis Wolsey, of Philadelphia. "As all time was wedded to religious motivations in the past, so in the future Jewish salvation shall come not by a folk culture in a democratic society, but through the total idealism of this historic people which we call Judaism."

Rabbi Wolsey said this is an age which "is reaping in tears and in madness the logical results of a despiritualized humanity."

"Everywhere we see moral deterioration, demagogery, bigotry, the preaching of social justice by fomenters of class hatred, the pious cant of 'Father, forgive them' by those who vomit venom upon their fellow men, the alienation of religious leaders from religion, religious defeatism by those whose responsibility is to the teaching of religion, and a secularization of life by those who are consecrated to give it a hallowed interpretation.

Bishop Freeman Speaks.

"It is no wonder," he said, "that such a confused civilization should defame the one group that has made religious steadfastness a career and a consecration. The future of Judaism is not in the hands of those who bring pressure upon our liberty or our livelihood. It is entirely our own responsibility. Judaism may live in spite of its oppressors. But Judaism can not live without Jews."

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Protestant Episcopal Bishop of Washington, spoke briefly, stressing the good will existing between Jews and Christians. In the absence of Dr. Abram Simon, rabbi of the Washington Hebrew Congregation, who is confined to his home by illness, the invocation was given by Dr. William Rosenau, of Baltimore. Music was provided by the Baltimore & Ohio Glee Club of 65 voices and an orchestra.

Four Resolutions Passed.

During the day, four resolutions were passed. One provides for the placement of German-Jewish refugees in self-supporting positions outside of New York and other metropolitan areas. Three others called for a revival of traditional ceremonies which "without conflicting with reform policies of Judaism may add warmth to the service," a "return to the synagogue" and increased cooperation with the orthodox and conservative branches of Jewish faith.

The banquet last evening marked the formal closing of the council. Today reports of committees will be read, and election of executive board members will take place. Mrs. Abram Simon, Washington founder of the National Federation of Temple Sisterhoods, will preside at the session, which will open at 9:30 in the grand ballroom of the Willard Hotel.

Compensation Case Award Reversed

Court Upsets Decision in Fatal Bank Accident.

A decision by the United States Employes Compensation Commission allowing benefits for the accidental death of Adolph C. Lurig while he was working at the Munsey Trust Co. was upset by the United States Court of Appeals yesterday in an opinion that held Lurig to be a casual worker and therefore not subject to the compensation act.

Testimony developed through Cornelius Doherty, counsel for the insurance company, showed Lurig was working on a grill in the trust company's banking room when an iron door fell on him.

Robert J. Hoage, deputy commissioner of the commission, held that the death was that of an employe of the bank and directed that the bank's ensurer pay the claim. In reversing the award, the Appellate Court upheld the contention the act expressly provided that casual employes were not subject to insurance.

District Supply Bill Hearings Postponed

Resumption of Senate hearings on the 1936 District appropriations bill yesterday was postponed until Wednesday because of work on the agricultural bill.

About 25 civic spokesmen remain to be heard, according to the clerk of the Senate sub-committee, but committee members hope to be ready to report the bill by the end of the week.

Inventor Wins Suit on Patent For Saving Fuel

Court Upholds Rights of Hans Wach; Cut Costs of Ship Operation.

Although holding that Hans Wach's invention was "as simple as it was efficient," the United States Court of Appeals, in an opinion returned yesterday, held that the inventor was entitled to a patent that enabled 225 ocean-going vessels to save $3,600,000 a year in fuel bills with an accompanying increase of 20 per cent in power.

Wach, it was shown, perfected an "obvious" device for enabling exhaust steam to be utilized after it had escaped from the primary engine. The United States Patent Office had rejected his patent claim because, that office said, his device was obvious.

In approving Wach's claim, the Appellate Court pointed out that the obvious was apparent to all after it had been done. Nevertheless, while the patent was still missing, the most expert marine engineers in the country had failed to develop Wach's idea.

The device had been patented in seven foreign countries, and Wach, after having his idea rejected here, sold it for $380,000. He is now in Germany, it was said, and having sold his rights is not a beneficiary of the reversal yesterday.

Wach's idea contemplated a reduction gear, a hydraulic coupling and a second reduction gear. Since 1926, when he perfected the apparatus, it is estimated ship lines have saved more than $15,000,000 in fuel bills.

Owens Forgets Girl's Slaying, He Tells Jury

Gifts to Sweetheart, 14, Related by River Character, 74.

Protesting ignorance of events leading up to the shooting of Elsie Louise Bryant, 14, for whose murder he is standing trial, "Captain" William Owens, 74-year-old riverfront character, yesterday told a jury in the District Supreme Court he had no recollection of the shooting.

Owens, a stocky, somewhat confused witness, repeatedly asserted he had no intention of harming the girl, to whom he had given an automobile and for whom, he testified, he had bought clothes.

"I gave her money so often she just got in the habit of reaching into my pockets for it," he said in answer to a question by his attorney, John P. Mullen, as to why the girl wrote letters to him demanding money.

The defendant, who was adjudged to be of unsound mind shortly after Miss Bryant was slain, was later found to be sane. Due to confusion in the order for his freedom, he was again sent to a hospital for care. Later he was ruled sane by a jury. Attorney Mullen said yesterday he would base his defense on temporary insanity.

Samuel F. Beach, prosecuting attorney, was unable to shake Owens' story that he knew none of the details preceding the shooting of Miss Bryant. The defendant insisted he had purchased no revolver and had not knowingly gone to her Southwest home to kill her.

Prosecution testimony said Owens went to Miss Bryant's home, and after exchanging a few words with her, shot four bullets into her body. The Government contends that the girl was shot because she failed to return Owens' affection.

The case is expected to reach the jury late today.

City's Cherry Trees May Bloom Sunday

In spite of the bleak, chilly weather which followed Sunday's warmth, park officials yesterday predicted that the single Japanese cherry blossoms not only will be out next Sunday, but that they will be at their best then.

Immediately the announcement was made, railroads and bus lines began making arrangements for special excursions to Washington over this week-end. The American Automobile Association and Keystone Automobile Club are planning for the expected arrival of several thousand out-of-town motorists attracted by the annual display.

The single-blossomed Japanese cherry trees around the Tidal Basin remain in bloom from one week to ten days, depending upon the weather. About one week after this display, the double blossoms make their appearance on the cherry trees in East Potomac Park.

Rep. Hoeppel Posts Bond in Case Here

Representative John T. Hoeppel (Democrat), California, yesterday posted two $500 bonds in the District Supreme Court to insure his appearance to face a charge that he and his son, Charles J. Hoeppel, conspired to sell an appointment to West Point.

Indictments against the Representative and his son allege they took a $1,000 promissory note from James W. Ives, of Baltimore, to give him an appointment to the Military Academy.

The son, now employed in the Far West, has not yet entered his appearance in the local courts. United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett said yesterday he would wait several days for the son to come here. If he shows an inclination not to voluntary return, he will be brought back by the Government, Mr. Garnett said.

Representative Hoeppel had nothing to say when he appeared and posted bond. He is scheduled to be arraigned after his son comes back.

Macguire Dies; Was Accused In Fascist Plot

Brother Blames Death on 'Unjust Attack,' Doctor Disagrees.

By the Associated Press.

New Haven, Conn., March 25.—Gerald C. Macguire, 37, who was catapulted into prominence recently in connection with a "Fascist plot" to seize the Government, died early today.

A short time later, a brother, William J. Macguire, differed from a physician as to the events leading to the death.

In a formal statement "to clear the name of Mr. Macguire and his family," William J Macguire quoted Dr. Lawrence A. Renehan, of Stamford, as saying that Gerald's "last illness can be directly attributed to the unjust charges launched by Congressman McCormack's committee, which were apparently based on Gen. Butler's charges which he afterward denied making."

The statement issued from the Grace Hospital, where Macguire died, was branded by Dr. Renehan as "false and without authority."

Named in Plot Charges.

Dr. Frank Toole, the family physician, in his official report, said Macguire's death was due to penumonia and complications.

The death of Macguire, who was the central figure in a congressional investigation into an alleged conspiracy to seize the Government, came as a surprise to many of his friends, some of whom said they had been unaware he had been seriously ill.

Only after the announcement of MacGuire's death was it disclosed he had been a patient at the hospital for three weeks.

MacGuire was a native of this city. He had been employed as a salesman for a New York securities firm.

He became a headline name last November when Gen. Smedley D. Butler, U. S. Marines, retired, involved him in an alleged plot to seize the United States Government as head of a Fascist group comprising 500,000 World War veterans.

Held Publicity Stunt.

Butler was reported to have told the Congressional Committee on Un-American Activities, headed by Representative John W. McCormack (Democrat), Massachusetts, that he had been approached by a group of Wall Street brokers through MacGuire, to assume a dictatorship over the United States.

Col. Grayson M. P. Murphy and Thomas W. Lamont replied that Butler's charges were a "publicity stunt" and MacGuire's denial was of a similar nature.

Last month the McCormack committee reported that MacGuire categorically denied Butler's testimony and added, however, "Your committee was able to verify all the pertinent statements made by Gen. Butler with the exception of the direct statement suggesting the creation of the organization."

A short time ago the Department of Justice was said to be investigating MacGuire's alleged request to Gen. Butler, but nothing concerning its findings in the matter has been made public.

W. B. Hadley's Funeral Today; Edison's Friend

Former District Engineer Was Co-Inventor of Power Generator.

Funeral services for Warren Bernard Hadley, 75, one of the early leaders in the development of electrical utility, a former associate of Thomas A. Edison, and for 18 years electrical engineer for the District, will be held at his residence, 2332 First street northwest, today at 2:30 p. m.

Mr. Hadley died Sunday at his home. As a young man he experimented on the arc lamp, and was an associate of J. Frank Sprague in laying the Boston electric street car system, one of the first in the country. He also did work on early telephones.

With Edison he made the first electric generator. While working with the New York Edison Illuminating Co. he was placed in charge of installing the first electric lights in Madison Square Garden.

About 25 years ago Mr. Hadley came to Washington to do work on the War College, and stayed on to supervise work at the Government Printing Office. For a time he was chief engineer at Soldiers' Home, where he built the present power plant.

He entered the District service in 1913 as assistant engineer. A short while later he was put in charge, and remained in this capacity until 1931.

A native of Providence, R. I., Mr. Hadley leaves his wife and a stepson, Harry E. Edwards.

Enlarging The CCC.

The Civilian Conservation Corps has received more praise and less blame than almost any other of the experimental undertakings launched by the Administration to relieve unemployment. It has not only provided work under healthful conditions for many thousands of young men, but it has given them an opportunity to secure valuable vocational training. That fact is attested by the large number of CCC boys who are being discharged monthly to enter private employment. According to Director Fechner 9,000 on the average find jobs each month—a remarkably good record under existing conditions.

One of the chief reasons for the success of the CCC lies in the fact that the Government has not tried to cover too large a group of applicants. The limited numbers assembled in the camps, the age restrictions, the freedom from politics and the assurances that needy families of the youths selected will receive most of their wages have provided the basis for successful experimentation with a picked and responsible group. Even under such favorable conditions the disciplinary problems that arose in the beginning called for firm, expert and sympathetic handling.

Now there is real danger that the success of the CCC may prove to be its undoing. Plans are under way for enlarging the organization, probably by transferring men from transient camps. The Senate work-relief bill carries an earmarked appropriation of $600,000,000 for that purpose—a sum equal to the entire amount that has been spent on the CCC since its inception. Doubtless some enlargement can be safely accomplished. But beyond a certain point recruiting will severely jeopardize the success of the organization.

While there are unquestionably many unemployed youths who would profit by the opportunities afforded for training, it seems most unwise to authorize any expansion of the organization which might demoralize the existing service. Any attempt to shift men from transient camps into the CCC, for instance, should be most carefully considered in advance.

In spite of the arguments that can be urged against confining the CCC to a relatively small and picked group, it seems much wiser to retain the benefits that have been achieved, in large part because of such limitations, instead of risking their forfeiture by a sudden and undiscriminating extension of the program.

Protecting The Gullible.

The Securities and Exchange Commission has completed plans for a Nation-wide campaign to "round up" stock swindlers who prey upon the ignorant and credulous people willing to risk their small savings for the promise of fabulous returns. The method of procedure designed to rid the country of men who indulge in criminal practices in this field is naturally different from that followed in seeking to eliminate abuses incidental to legitimate trading in securities, and in setting standards of fair practice for brokers operating on organized exchanges.

In dealing with men who deliberately seek to defraud the public, governmental action must be swift and ruthless, in view of the ease with which swindlers can pocket their ill-gotten gains and decamp. Consequently, the enforcement agencies established by the SEC are expected to strike in the manner of police officials on the trail of criminals. The individuals in charge of this work should be highly trained—experts, who as Chairman Kennedy says, "know the securities business inside and out."

It is equally important that they should be men of integrity, immune to the temptations that unscrupulous promoters are certain to put in their way. The constructive value of this laudable effort on the part of the SEC to protect the public against a particularly contemptible and injurious type of fraud will indeed depend mainly upon the character of the people who are engaged to investigate the activities of suspects.

The SEC has already established seven regional offices said to be staffed with experts who are instructed to cooperate with State commissions and local chambers of commerce in the discovery and suppression of stock swindlers. For obvious reasons, State blue-sky laws and Federal legislation against use of the mails to defraud have failed to provide protection to small investors. As the SEC tightens its control over dealers in over-the-counter securities, in addition to providing for protection to investors through registration of securities dealt in on organized exchanges, it will be much better able to discover fraudulent activities practiced by unlicensed dealers.

The proposed publicity campaign through newspapers and radio is likewise a commendable method of warning the gullible against fraudulent schemes. Main reliance, however, has to be placed upon the attempts that are being made to extirpate the evil at its source. After all, swindling flourishes primarily because it is easy to ensnare a section of the public that is always ready to be victimized.

The Passing Opportunity.

It is not surprising that the work-relief bill enters the conference stage amid confusion as to the fate of the silver-inflation plan attached to it at the eleventh hour on the insistence of Senator Thomas. Confusion has throughout been the identification mark of this very dubious legislation. It was a bungling measure as introduced. It remains a bungling measure as it staggers through the last stages prior to its adoption as the law of the land.

Important in itself, the work-relief bill assumes additional importance as a clear warning of governmental uncertainty. Out of a mist of talk about planned economy; on the heels of assurances that there is a coordinated recovery program, came this proposal for the Government "to give employment to all of these 3,500,000 employable people now on relief." When the President announced this appealing objective, in his message to Congress on January 4, it was naturally assumed that a clear-cut and comprehensive program to attain this end had been, or was being, drafted.

In the eleven weeks since the delivery of that message there has been ample opportunity to give the nation at least an intelligible outline of the systematic lines along which such an objective must be sought. None at the outset imagined, and most as time went on were reluctant to believe, that a blanket approval to spend at pure discretion was expected by the Administration.

Such, however, has proved to be the case. Out of the bill presented to it some members of the Senate really tried to create something like the basis of a policy. The task was too great. A few important improvements were made, and some highly dubious riders have been added. But no parliamentary body can convert inchoate administration requests into workmanlike legislation. So, in essentials, the work-relief bill was passed in the unacceptable form in which it was first presented.

The responsibility of the Administration to spend this four billions wisely on public works is intensified by its dereliction of duty in refusing to submit any definite program to Congress in advance. All experience, both in this country and abroad, is hostile to the easy anticipation that even this huge sum, expended under a "make-work" psychology, will take 3,500,000 unemployed, or even half that number, off the relief rolls. All experience, particularly in this country, leads to the conviction that on the contrary waste, fraud, and continued business uncertainty are to be anticipated. The failure to present any outline of administrative procedure has inevitably intensified these undesirable expectations.

The country knows that we can not much longer continue to toss away uncovered billions on the Micawber-like assumption that "something will turn up." And it is also certain that the opportunity to make good, so freely granted to Mr. Roosevelt, will not be indefinitely extended by a disillusioned public. The Administration is said to be convinced that this appropriation will break the back of the depression. If it does not, the strain on the backs of those who sponsor this experiment will certainly not be lessened.

Common Denominator.

Barbara Hutton Mdvani, the girl who has so much money that "she doesn't know what to do," is homeward bound again. It is reported that her departure from Southampton was marked with even more secrecy than is accorded the King and Queen of England. Presumably this precaution was to protect her from the four horsemen who invariably follow in the wake of $40,000,000—the beggar, the blackmailer, the kidnaper and the fortune hunter.

The princess seems to think there is more to her unhappiness than can be dismissed by the stock phrase "poor little rich girl." Not only is she harassed by personal grievances, which are resulting in a divorce, but she feels that the entire United States is taking a special delight in tormenting her. She is suffering on a grand scale and threatens to become a voluntary exile from America if the press and the public do not let her alone. As nearly as can be gathered, all that she wants is to be like other girls.

It is doubtful if Barbara will get much sympathy on that score from the millions of American girls whom she longs to emulate. They will even be a little bewildered as to why she should express such a wish. To all appearances, her life has been the personification of flapper dreams—she was born to millions, she married a prince, she had 40 trunks of wedding clothes, and her husband still declares that she is the most marvelous person he ever met, in spite of their separation. Why, they will wonder, does she feel that she is persecuted?

The answer to that lies in the one contingency on which no bride ever counts and one which she can not combat, whether she be princess or typist. And that is her husband's addiction to sports—baseball, poker, polo, or what have you. In this respect, at least, Barbara attains her ambition to be like other girls. When the unhappy "polo widow" arrives in this country, it would be a beau geste if all golf widows would send her a collective telegram: "Welcome home, Barbara, we understand."

Future Of The Philippines.

The announcement that President Roosevelt had signed the proposed Philippine constitution was the signal for universal celebration among the islands. It is significant, however, to note that the cables report enthusiasm running highest outside the city of Manila. Not a higher sophistication prompted the city populace to hold back, it may be assumed, but rather a more enlightened appreciation of the full significance of the event.

Assuming that the constitution will be ratified in a forthcoming plebiscite, the Filipinos will embark on a ten-year career under a commonwealth government permitting them, with a few important exceptions, full management of their own affairs. The United States will be represented by a high commissioner. It is important to remark, however, the point stressed by President Roosevelt as he signed the document: "There will remain with the Government of the United States authority commensurate with and necessary for or appropriate to the ultimate responsibilities of sovereignty."

While the jubilant but orderly demonstrations of last week indicate that the islanders are ready and eager for political liberty, there is serious question as to their ability to conduct their own affairs under a regime of economic independence. For the Tydings-McDuffie independence act provides that as American authority is curtailed, the special privileges now enjoyed by Philippine products in American markets will also be withdrawn. At the end of ten years, coincident with the proclamation of complete independence, the new republic will find itself altogether outside the American tariff walls.

When it is remembered that Philippine commerce is particularly geared to American markets with between 70 and 80 per cent of the islands' wealth deriving from American export trade, high-flown discussions of the virtues of liberty must yield to more sober-minded bookkeeping in plotting the future course of the islands. As Senator Tydings pointed out last summer, when speaking in Manila, during the years of 1931, 1932 and 1933 the Philippines received for exports to America the sum of 522,000,000 pesos and if those shipments had been subject to regular tariff duties the income would have been reduced by 440,000,000 pesos.

Weighing, then, the advantages of complete autonomy against the concomitant loss of American markets together with an increased public budget, the result is not as overwhelmingly on the side of independence as first impulses might suggest. President McKinley is said to have gone down on his knees to beg for Divine guidance in his decision as to the disposition of the Philippines. He got up to promise them eventual independence. He could not then have conceived of the vast economic implications of his plighted altruism. But today in Manila they have no illusions on this score. And that is why, behind the torchlights and oratory of last week, there stood a far-seeing group that even now is talking earnestly of the future of the Philippines in terms of "dominion government," "perpetual commonwealth status" or "economic partnership with the United States."

Syncopated Wordsworth?

One of our men yesterday walked in with a piece he had done after talking with a Mr. Conn, whom he described as "a Washington poet." It seems that Mr. Conn is a man in a million: he goes around reading the inscriptions on buildings. Right now he is all worked up over the inanities of most of them. For instance, he had jotted down the legend on the Department of Justice building which reads "Justice is the great interest of man on earth." That, Mr. Conn submits, is by way of being somewhat of an exaggeration. Says that the Constitution itself mentions at least six other major concerns of humanity.

Well versed in the tricks of his trade, our man then went on to ask him what his ideas were for suitable inscriptions. They should be, answered Mr. Conn (and here we quote and only hope that the quotation was accurate: if it wasn't, the joke's on us), "like rainbows which, he (Mr. Conn) recalls, moved Wordsworth to write: 'My heart leaps up when I see a rainbow in the sky.'"

Come, come, Mr. Conn. And you a poet? Whatever else may be said about him, at least Wordsworth scanned. Without even bothering to look it up, that line should read, "My heart leaps up when I behold a rainbow in the sky."

It's all right to abbreviate "Connecticut," Mr. Conn, but it's a different matter when you come to Wordsworth.

Early Decision Best.

From the San Francisco Chronicle.

It is a showdown.

Britain and America, doubtless to be joined by France, insist that any loan to China shall be, as previous loans have been, international. Japan warns them that any such action on their part would be "inimical to the peace of eastern Asia," which means, if words mean anything, that if Britain and America persist in their announced policy Japan will use force, in China, to prevent it. Thus one side or the other must back down.

If Europe and America back down, it means reversing their whole historic policy, giving up the doctrine of equal opportunities in a developing China, and making China the prey of Japan, with all the consequences which that exploitation would have, to Europe and America.

If Japan backs down, it means reversing a policy for which its present ruling faction has been prepared, if necessary, to risk national suicide.

If neither backs down, until the clash, Japan announces that it will meet that clash by breaking the peace. Then, again, we may have to decide whether to stay in or back out. It might be more intelligent to decide now.

"I'll Be Seeing You!"

Reactions To Europe's Crisis.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Being a German by birth, race and education, I was intensely interested in the recent move by that nation; and read all the papers available, especially as to the editorial reactions. The facts reported were hardly news to me and long expected. The reaction in the United States was what interested me.

I can safely say that I perused all leading papers of the national press, and without any doubt I feel that you deserve the distinction of having written by far the sanest and fairest editorial on this controversial and beclouded issue. The effect of your editorial, allow me to express in a word, which I am not sure exists in Webster's Dictionary, but which I might call "depoisoning."

In these days where the power of the press and its real or imaginary abuse is so widely discussed, it is a comfort indeed to find an attitude of sportsmanlike self-criticism. I wish only that many of your colleagues in the Nation would deserve the same praise and the slogan, "freedom for the press," would never be in danger of being changed into the popular demand, which seems to be growing, however, "freedom from the press."

I am a private citizen of no political affiliation, and only those professional, cultural and social interests befitting good citizenship. My early experiences with the press were through the Frankfurter Zeitung, the leading liberal paper of Germany which survived criticism of Bismarck and Hitler. Perhaps I am spoiled, but I never found an equivalent paper in the United States, where I have been residing for the last 12 years. For a while I enjoyed the New York World, a great Pulitzer paper, and later the New York Post, the mouthpiece of Carl Schurz.

I am glad to feel more and more encouraged in reading The Washing Post, which is gradually filling, deservedly, the surprisingly vacant position of a worthy and leading newspaper in the Nation's Capital.

ERIC F. MENKE.

Washington, March 18.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: All this talk of war, and the impending danger of conflict amongst our European neighbors, has the youth of our country "on the spot," so to speak. The barbarous morons who are responsible for any armed conflict should realize that it is the youth of our Nation who are sacrificed, not on an altar, but like droves of trapped rats.

It is our careers that must be abandoned to go out and fight to end war. It is our loved ones who must suffer in the vigil that they all keep. It is our money and comforts of life that must be impounded to build up massive heaps of mandestroying machines. It is our morale that must be gutted by filth, fire, chemicals, gasses, disease and thousands of attendant evils. It is our eyes that must see the slaughter of fellow human beings, the downfall of social progress.

If the munitions maker, the political despots, the older men who should know better and those who feel a sense of security, could put themselves in our places and in the places of thousands of lads from other lands and look as we do toward the blighted future, they would see that nothing more antisocial, nothing more barbaric, nothing more degrading and useless could impede the growth of cultured man than war.

International relations have been sorely bruised these past few months and bleeding seems imminent from some of the vulnerable spots. Diplomats have played their aces in superficial attempts to iron out the differences and to cauterize the wounds with their rebukes. And still the international scene goes on from one boiling pot to another.

JOHN D. ARMSTRONG, JR.

Washington, March 23.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In my opinion the press of the country should go slowly in taking the side of the opponents of Germany in that country's repudiation of the Versailles Treaty.

I have talked to lots of representative citizens, many of whom are former soldiers, and without exception they approve the stand Germany is now taking.

Why should Germany remain an outcast nation in the affairs of the world? For more than 15 years now her military and other policies have been dictated by the Allies and she has paid plenty for her hand in the World War.

France and other Allied nations have not shown to Americans any particular friendship for the great help we gave them, but they are the ones that took from Germany her colonies and crippled her in every way conceivable. These same Allied nations have turned their backs on the United States, repudiating debts and stigmatizing our country in lots of ways not necessary to itemize.

These allied countries don't want peace in Europe. France has developed her military forces and fortifications to the zenith and Italy is going around with a chip on her shoulder, abusing small nations. Why should the United States give any further thought to the welfare of such nations?

Germany is initiating a movement for her own protection — a movement to put herself back on the plane of prewar days, but it will not be the military dictatorship this time. She has been taught her lesson and the world need not fear any repetition of kaiserism. She is entitled to her place in the sun again and to assert it she must have military strength comparable with the other great nations of Europe. This she has commenced to rebuild, and as an American and World War veteran I say "More power to her." FRANK R. ENGLISH.

Washington, March 20.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is to be hoped the United States will mind its own business and keep out of the European mess. Germany is doing exactly what we would do if we had been forced to sign a peace treaty enslaving our people for generations to come. Talk of our joining a pack of debt-dodgers against Germany is pure nonsense.

In returning from Saint Nazaire, at the close of the World War, a high American engineering officer, speaking to me in French so that all around him could hear, said, "We licked the wrong nation." That is a truism which is being proved day in and day out.

EUGENE HUDGINS.

Brooklyn, N. Y., March 18.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your recent editorial entitled "Germany Breaks Her Fetters" strikes one of the few sensible notes which has been sounded by the American press in regard to the Reich armament situation.

The victorious European Allies have been backed by 9 out of 10 American newspapers and by 10 out of 10 of our various "patriotic" organizations in the attitude that Germany was licked in the war, so let her take her medicine now. Few have gone to the trouble to point out that Germany got the very dirty end of the stick passed out at Versailles. Few have done anything to dispel the idea, conceived in World War propaganda, that the kaiser was the sole cause of the war. Few papers have done anything to enlighten their readers to the fact that Germany was not alone to blame for the war, but that the imperialistic designs of every European nation contributed.

When the war ended the victorious Allied European nations, despite the protests of Woodrow Wilson, pounced on the Teutonic corpse like so many vultures and emerged with bloody chops and bellies gorged with former German possessions. In order to keep the corpse dead they imposed the Versailles Treaty on it and, incidentally, agreed to cut their own arms. The result was inevitable—a new generation economically and politically fettered saw its savior in Adolph Hitler and rallied to his cause.

If Hitler is not to be a menace to world tranquillity the smudge of Versailles must be erased and the Allies must cease to regard Germany as a wayward child who will cause trouble unless perpetually chastised. H. E. F.

Washington, March 18.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Hitler's conduct recalls another violent denunciation of a war-treaty by the defeated party, smarting under the pain of humiliation inflicted by superior military force.

By the Treaty of Paris, 1856, Russia was compelled to neutralize the waters of the Black Sea and to dismantle all naval stations on the shores thereof. To achieve this was one of the reasons why England went into the Crimean War, which cost her the lives of 50,000 men and about half a billion dollars.

Gortchakoff, Russian Prime Minister, bided his time and when the Franco-Prussian War was on, he sent his famous note, in October, 1870, declaring that Russia would no longer be bound by the Treaty of Paris and would at once proceed to build naval stations and ships and fortify the Black Sea. Consols dropped heavily as war seemed imminent. England had for several years denied all liability on the Alabama claims and refused to discuss the matter of any payment as damages.

Immediately that notice of the denouncement of the Black Sea treaty was received in London, a British commission was appointed to hurry to Washington, to adjust the Alabama claims and all other matters in dispute between the two countries.

Now that Germany means business, France will no doubt expect England to take up her position on the Rhine with men and airships to provide the first line of defense. Both countries will inquire of the United States the best and quickest methods of paying up those annoying war-debts. Hitherto some question has arisen as to how payments should be made—in goods or in gold. The opportunity is now at hand. The soldiers' bonus is up for discussion. If this bonus is to be paid in cash, there is an open avenue for the immediate receipt and distribution of $2,000,000,000 in gold. JOSEPH A. CONRY.

The Post Impressionist

Arts and Letters.

Post Office, Tuesday.

THIS Column has published a lot of veracious column-length communications from distinguished contributors; we need here cite no further instance than that recently provided by former Solicitor General James M. Beck. Unfortunately, however, we have also contracted a pernicious habit of publishing, periodically, collections of brief letters that were unreceived. So we are sometimes at a loss how to dispose of the short letters of commendation which we actually do get.

These the jealous editor who edits the "Letters to the Editor" refuses to use in his department. Yet the Post-Impressionist is loath to have them lost to the world.

"Believe it or not," then, here are a few recent True Confessions.

Dear Post-Impressionist: Just a line to let you know that, like you, I am 100 per cent for Franklin Roosevelt first, last and all the time. He has been wonderful and still is. Just as you say, he is bringing us out of depression safely and surely. N. L.

Hyattsville, Md.

P. S.—We have a police dog and a pretty car. I am not married.

Dear Post Impressionist: Where did you get hold of that manuscript of mine about the kind of man I'd try to be if I had a chance to be a man? Ever since its publication, the spouse has been asking awkward questions of me. As: "Do I gulp my food?" And as: "Do I carry a pen in my pocket visibly?" You are the kind of the person that is not always kind!

SADIE BLAKE.

Washington.

P. S.: When I do send you any junk, please return it, if you can't use it, for I am contributing to the death of several small mags., and they will rear their hind legs and howl with misery to get whatever I send 'em.

Dear Post-Impressionist:

I laughed over the clever way in which you used the Aristophanes material, and you handled the "Hecuba" quotations splendidly, as usual.

Your correspondent, Sadie, is so sparklingly modern that she takes my breath away. However, I like her—that is (hush!), all but her name. And I fancy it isn't her real name. LOUISE K. SPARROW.

Dear Post-Impressionist:

Is it too late for me to add my congratulations to those of your other readers on the occasion of the Column's first birthday? If not, here's health and long life to the gentleman who adds the word "women" to the word "men"—in parenthesis! May you grow out of even the parenthesis.

To The Post-Impressionist: Your interesting gossip about Eva Tanguay—"The Wild Woman," you called her—brings to my memory an episode in which she played a not uninteresting role about a third of a century ago at the Columbia Theater, in F street.

David Belasco had billed his "Madame Du Barry" to open on a Monday night at the National Theater. The theater-going public was all agog. As you will remember, Belasco was exasperatingly meticulous about details. Well, Monday night came—and, because of that meticulousness, the opening was delayed. Tuesday night: no play. Wednesday night: still no play.

The newspapers were howling. Belasco replied that he did not want to present "Madame Du Barry" until the production was perfect.

Over at the Columbia, Digby Bell, Marie Cahill and Eva Tanguay were playing to S. R. O. in "The Chaperon." The scene of this piece was in Cairo, if I remember correctly: certainly somewhere in Egypt. Bell appeared as a past-middle-aged English tourist. Marie Cahill was chaperoning two American girls, Miss Tanguay, as I recall it, was an added attraction—and probably "the whole show." Anyway, she was everywhere in it, causing more trouble than either the Sphinx or Cleopatra did in their heyday. The climax of the piece was reached when the English tourist and the chaperon fell in love with each other—to the neglect of the chaperoned young ladies. The lovers pursued each other, but fate opposed them.

Comes Thursday matinee at the Columbia, the house crowded. Act III: Englishman and chaperon meet by accident in the hotel lobby, Bell entering from the left, Cahill from the right. Tanguay, quite naturally, is at center, seated on a table edge. Bell shouts to Cahill:

"Ah, ha, Madame Du Barry, where hast thou been for the past few days?"

That gag was of course introduced of set purpose. But Tanguay's "business" in connection with it was the result of her own immediate inspiration: carefully, yet with vast precipitation and complete abandonment, she fell off the table.

The house roared.

That night Belasco had to put on "Du Barry." GROVER AYERS.

Canada Still Bound To Stand By Britain

European War Would Probably Draw In Dominion, Despite Isolationist Sentiment.

By T. W. L. MacDermot.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Ottawa, March 25.

MANY Canadians have suddenly awakened to the fact that they may soon have to consider what is to be done about another European war, whose causes they do not understand, and whose outcome for them can not be foreseen. They are asking themselves if or how they should go in or stay out. But it is impossible to be at all sure how opinion has changed, if at all, since 1914, or how far, as one experienced public man has said, the preliminary barrage of propaganda in favor of going in—if Britain was involved, of course—would obliterate any serious opposition.

The legal position of members of the British Commonwealth remains what it was. If Britain goes to war, Canada automatically is also at war. What might be called the technical strategic position is not so clear because it gets no publicity. There is close cooperation between the Canadian militia and the British War Office and Staff College.

In a more hearsay way there is some dim outline of a plan of imperial defense in the background which is closely associated with the perambulating figure of Sir Maurice Hankey, secretary of the British cabinet, who recently called on Canada on his way home from New Zealand. But Mr. Bennett, the prime minister, said very clearly that so far as he knew Sir Maurice had had no official discussion on defense matters with any one in Canada.

• • • •

THESE are what might be called the traditional factors in determining Canada's part in the next war. They are very strong and efficient: they have the organization and power of government behind them, and all they stand for is deeply imbedded in the Canadian mentality. One feels that from that point of view there is no questioning whatever of what Canada would do or should do. She would enlist her contingents and send them across.

As a leading Dominion statesman said recently to Sir Austen Chamberlain, "Be sure of this, that when Great Britain is in peril, we shall all be behind her."

But other if newer sentiments and ideas have developed in recent years. Perhaps the strongest is the isolationist feeling that holds that Canada had best keep out of any more European wars if she can. As Senator Lewis said the other day in the Senate: "I think our experience of the last war and its consequences ought to make us very careful about going into another." And last year Senator McRee stated without any compromise that he could conceive of no reason whatever for losing a single Canadian soldier's life on the battlefields of Europe. And this is an increasingly popular feeling.

Bodies like the Congress Against War and Fascism, the Native Sons of Canada, etc., have shown very vigorously what certain sections of Canada feel about a European war of any kind. There are increasingly persistent reminders in the press of the cost and waste and futility to Canada of the last war. There is vivid memory of the grave schisms caused by the conscription act, and the bitter disillusionment which broke directly after the war has by no means disappeared.

• • • •

THE large and important French population of Canada is also probably more inclined than ever to look upon European war as a foreign adventure, not their responsibility and not their concern. They who are the most substantial body of native sons of Canada have the same outlook in this respect, though from a different angle, as the organization known as the Native Sons of Canada. Any political party therefore that has to decide about entering a war would have to reckon carefully the effects of its policy on French Canada.

It need hardly be added that there is no body of "pacifism" in Canada. Nearly every statement of policy on war ends up with the reservation that "if Canada was threatened, Canadians would at once rise in her defense." The only thing to be said about this is that no one can tell when a country is threatened and when not threatened.

Recently Senator Meigen put it quite bluntly—"We can not defend ourselves within our own boundaries."

There is no doubt that the instinct to withdraw from European adventures is strong and growing stronger. It is found amongst veterans of the war and young people born during the war. A good deal of education in the industrial and selfishly economic realities of war has gone on and there is skepticism which will not be altogether destroyed by the call to arms if it comes.

Lesser considerations in some minds are that the next war will probably be quick and fought in the air before Canadian contingents could get across, and that as there is as yet no German navy, our shores would be safe from that kind of attack. Such speculations, however, apply only to a war this summer, not presumably to the war predicted by Mr. H. G. Wells in 1910.

ON the other hand, it would probably be very easy to gather a formidable propaganda in favor of participation in British war, and along the old familiar and somewhat simple lines. Editorial comment on the present European imbroglio has been filled with the easy contrast of a villanous and treacherous Germany against the honest and righteous Allies. Many who remember 1914 well, and even the 1922 Chanak incident, say that the marching of troops, the roll of drums and the summons to join up and defend Canada overseas would meet with the same initial response.

There is no change in official action to be detected. The minister of defense said recently that "the policy of the government with regard to the department of national defense is identical, so far as I know, with the policies adopted by governments in the past." It is not contemplated, he said, that our forces should be mobilized and thrown into the war zone in Europe, and there are no representatives of the department on the imperial council in London. Officers are exchanged, for liaison work, but there is no definite arrangement under which the Canadian air force would become a unit of the imperial air force.

It is an even more interesting fact that the dominions, Canada amongst them, did not sign or indorse the Locarno Treaty in 1925, nor were any steps taken to do so at the Imperial Conference in the following year, and the principles of Locarno in a highly developed form are the basis of the latest stages of British European policy.

• • • •

IN short, we are officially where we were in 1914. It is understood that the people and the government should decide somehow what is to be done in given circumstances. If the people have changed their minds enough, and they have done it to some extent, then the action will be different. But what one takes for the most experienced opinion—not always right by any means—is that the frontier of Canada is almost as much on the Rhine as Britain's is, or can be adequately shown to be so if it is wanted.

The fact is, thought in Canada on external affairs is developing, but not as rapidly as actual conditions are. And while there is no new, no fully articulated, and no definite policy to be found in any public document beyond the general terms of the League Covenant, we can only guess that old habits will reassert themselves when similar stimuli to those in the past are applied. On the other hand there is no sounding board for this kind of opinion and few would speak with any great confidence on what would happen.

Ruffled Feelings.

MR. ROOSEVELT, who gets a great kick out of human nature, must have certainly knitted his brows, if he didn't laugh outright, upon the occasion of the visitor from the House to protest against the President's compromising with the Senate on the bonus. The gentleman doesn't want his identity to become known but he has nevertheless given his views to reporters. He purports to reflect a wave of indignation that has followed in the House in the wake of its passage of the bonus bill. His call upon the President was not to urge him to let the bonus go through but to plead that if any compromising was done it not be done alone with the Senate, that the House also be called in. It is just about the height of naivete and plaintiveness.

BARGERON.

The House would, of course, have to agree to any compromise effected between the President and the Senate. This is not the point. It is not a case of denying the House expression. The House leader's grievance is that the House suffers in dignity after it passes a measure and then a compromise is worked out in the Senate. It puts the Senate in the light of being a great deliberative body at the expense of the House.

We have here, ladies and gentlemen, such a struggle on the part of the House to maintain its dignity as we have not witnessed since the Alice Longworth-Dolly Gann seating row.

• • • •

All during the House consideration of the bonus, the leader complains, efforts were made to get Mr. Roosevelt to express himself on this and that proposed compromise. He wouldn't do it and the House went ahead and passed the inflationary Patman bill. Now that the bill is in the Senate the House just knows the President and that body will get together, effect a compromise and the House will be left holding the bag.

In the first place, the House's apprehensions that a compromise may be effected are not altogther justified. The general impression is that Mr. Roosevelt would like very much to bring one about, but there is no assurance an acceptable one can be worked out.

But it would certainly have been foolish for the President to begin compromising when the bill was in the House. As a matter of fact, Senate proponents of various compromise plans appeared before House committees and sought to have their plans adopted. They were treated with impatience. Senator Tydings, for one, was quite confident the President would accept his plan. Under the situation it is not unlikely the President would. If the House had been looking for dignity instead of votes it could have at least given the Tydings proposal a better hearing.

If the House spokesman really is reflecting that body's view, a strange mental attitude has come over that body. It has in the past made several excursions after dignity. Long ago it passed rules against members putting their feet on their desks and against spitting on the floor. But it has always made these forays after dignity when votes were not involved. The latter have always been its primary concern.

Heretofore, it has passed bills deliberately in the hope the Senate would check them so it would get the votes that were supposed to go with passage. In these instances the Senators could have the dignity because they had only to run every six years. The House members come up every two years and what they wanted most was votes.

So help me goodness, if it doesn't appear now that they want both the votes and the dignity. Of course, there would have been no occasion for their injured air had they not passed the bonus. But having passed it they now want their dignity restored by being invited to any compromise conferences that are held. The gentlemen are going through a mental disturbance of some kind.

No End of Books

'Pylon,' William Faulkner's Powerful, Hypnotic Novel About Stunt And Racing Fliers.

By Theodore Hall.

A MILD-SPOKEN, gentle-looking little man, who still lives in his home-town of Oxford, Miss., works in a bare room on a sawhorse table, likes to make his own beer, paint the side of a barn and talk long with any neighbor who comes by, has sent out in the world a series of books which hold the shock of a dum-dum bullet.

William Faulkner's obvious, most talked-of, and I think really unimportant kind of shocking power lies in his habitual use of some brand of abnormal sexual behavior. Some months back the Saturday Review of Literature printed a study of Mr. Faulkner's novels they appeared to a psychiatrist, and the involutions which the savant found would have made Herr Freud himself blush. Pet theories were worked out therein almost too patly—it is good to remember that the author of these psychiatric charts owns so simple a taste as a liking for beer. But willy-nilly Mr. Faulkner does drag in his grotesqueries, stark enough to curl a wooden Indian's hair. Sometimes they're worlds too grotesque, so that all we do is give an astonished and incredulous snort and half-chuckle.

But that spectacular and really rather easy kind of shocking belongs to parlor-game literature. Far more important, running through every page that Mr. Faulkner writes, is the total impact of Mr. Faulkner's mind upon ours. We have a feeling from it, I think—and please allow my simile to remain quite impersonal — as of a bird fascinated and hypnotized by the eye of a snake. There are the same cold hypnotics, the same numbing shock and suspended feeling, the same utter attraction and repulsion at once. Asked flat out, you would reply that you do not like Mr. Faulkner's novels—and you read them, as do I, with a breathless and immovable grip.

• • • •

HIS latest novel, "Pylon" (Smith & Haas, $2.50), is an especially good example of Mr. Faulkner's hypnotics. A thin, skeleton-like reporter, who could be blown away on a puff of wind, goes out to the great airport of "New Valois, Franciana"—recognizably an airport in New Orleans—to cover the barnstorming aviators in their air meet. Among them one group stands out—a woman named Laverne; her titular husband, the racing pilot Roger Shumann; a parachute jumper; her child, who might be either's, and a mechanic, Jiggs. The reporter follows them around, falls in love with Laverne, becomes fascinated with them all. Hear the reporter, trying to impress his city editor with this feeling:

"They aint human like us; they couldn't turn those pylons like they do if they had human blood and senses and they wouldn't want to or dare to if they just had human brains. Burn them like this one tonight and they don't even holler in the fire; crash one and it aint even blood when you haul him out; it's cylinder oil the same as in the crankcase . . . They don't need money; it aint money they are after any more than it's glory because the glory can only last until the next race and so maybe it aint even until tomorrow. And they don't need money except only now and then when they come in contact with the human race like in a hotel to sleep or eat now and then. Because money aint that hard to make; it aint up there, 14½ feet off the ground in a vertical bank around a steel post at 200 or 300 miles an hour in a damn gnat built like a Swiss watch that the top speed of aint just a number on a little dial but where you burn the engine up or fly out from between the wings and the undercarriage."

EATING, sleeping, drinking, the reporter has these strange flying creatures in his blood. The group takes up quarters in his rooms when the prize money doesn't come through, robs his pocket coolly when he comes home drunk, pushes him back from of their lives as he tries to come forward.

When Roger, who cuts incredible corners at the pylons to make up for an outmoded plane, cracks up this sole support of the group, the reporter has a scheme ready. He inveigles the pilot into kidnaping, with a worthless note, a plane some miles off which is thought too highly powered and dangerous to fly. But back to the meet Roger flies it, with the reporter stretched out in the fuselage in a willing martyr attempt to give it the right balance. Racing for the big prize with a sand bag aboard, Roger takes it tearing around the pylons. Then "a whole basket of light trash blew out of the aeroplane" and flotsam and Roger come down in the lake. Blaming the reporter for it, Laverne goes off with the parachute-jumper, takes the child to Roger's parents, and disappears on the homeless, barnstorming trail. The reporter is left to write his city editor that he is going down to Amrose street—"if you don't know what drunk is come down there and look at me."

All this violence and tenseness and almost nameless yearning is narrated in laconic speech, in descriptive passages which are sometimes over-lush and joycean, always closely and beautifully constructed. Mr. Faulkner's technical virtuosity does not fail him. And in that strange and moving figure of the reporter he shows us how rapt and over-powering can be a fascination which we ourselves feel with the Faulkner world.

Installment Plan On Taxes Sought

Delegation From Frederick Favors Amending Bill.

By the Associated Press.

Frederick, Md., March 25.—Frederick County Legislators may attempt to make things a bit easier for taxpayers by permitting them to pay county and State taxes in two installments.

King Of Kings

By

Wm. Lyon Phelps

AMONG the greatest religious poets of England is Francis Thompson, who died in 1907. His best-known poem is "The Hound of Heaven," which is based on the 139th Psalm. After his death, they found among his manuscripts a short poem which needs no explanation, but which is as imaginative and thrilling a poem of religious feeling, as has ever been written in modern times. For if there is an eternal life, we are living it now; and if there is authentic communication between a human being and God, it is going on now. Seeing celestial visions and hearing heavenly music perhaps depend on our own eyes and ears.

The Veteran of Heaven.

O Captain of the wars, whence won
Ye so great scars?
In what fight did Ye smite, and what manner was the foe?
Was it on a day of rout they compassed Thee about,
Or gat Ye these adornings when Ye wrought their overthrow?

"'Twas on a day of rout they girded me about,
They wounded all My brow, and they smote Me through the side;
My hand held no sword when I met their armed horde,
And the conqueror fell down, and the conquered bruised his pride."

What is this, unheard before, that the unarmed make war,
And the slain hath the gain, and the victor hath the rout?
What wars, then, are these, and what the enemies,
Strange Chief, with the scars of the conquest trenched about?

"The Prince I drove forth held the Mount of the North,
Girt with the guards of flame that roll round the pole.
I drave him with My wars from all his fortress-stars,
And the sea of death divided that My march might strike its goal.

"In the keep of Northern Guard, many a great daemonian sword
Burns as it turns round the Mount occult, apart;
There is given him power and place still for some certain days,
And his Name would turn the Sun's blood back upon its heart."

What is THY Name? O show!—
"My Name ye may not know;
'Tis a going forth with banners, and a baring of much swords:
But my titles that are high, are they not upon my thigh? 'King of Kings!' are the words, 'Lord of Lords';

Is Japan Fortifying Her Mandate Islands?

She Offers Contrary Evidence; U. S. Plans To Stay Out Of Controversy.

By Elliott Thurston.

JAPAN'S withdrawal from the League of Nations, which will be officially completed tomorrow, again projects the question of whether she is to retain her mandate over those 1,400 islands and coral reefs which are scattered over a vast expanse of the western Pacific some 5,000 miles from San Francisco. Numerous as the islands and reefs are their combined land area is but 836 square miles, one-seventh the area of the Hawaiian Islands. They are known in the aggregate as the islands of Micronesia, and comprise the Marianas, the Carolines and the Marshalls.

So far as the United States Government is concerned, no question will be raised, in all probability, to challenge the continuity of the mandate because of Japan's exodus from the league. The State Department has no desire to add to the friction in the Pacific which would result from questioning Japan's tenure. Moreover, when a vast to-do was stirred up in the diplomatic world back in 1921 because the United States contested the validity of the league's mandate of the Island of Yap to Japan, this Government took the position that the mandate authority resided in the "Allied and Associated Powers," of which we were one, and not in the league of which we were not a member. Hence on the score of precedent, we are not in a position to argue that Japan's withdrawal from the league affects her title to the mandate.

Whether the Navy Department would view the situation in the same light is a different matter, for from time to time rumor has been busy with tales of how Japanese were fortifying the islands, contrary to the mandate, and making them of strategic value for naval, airplane and especially submarine operations. Questioned on this matter before the league's mandates commission, Japanese spokesmen have always denied that the islands were being groomed for uses in the event of war.

• • • •

SUSPICIONS have nevertheless persisted, particularly because of occasional statements attributed to Japanese naval authorities suggesting that they consider the islands of strategic impertance and defiantly giving notice that Japan would never give them up. At one time the idea was advanced at Geneva that the islands might be restored to Germany, and that idea may be revived again in connection with present efforts to induce the Germans to come back to the league.

In any case, this Government evidently means to keep out of what has long been and is now more than ever, an area of delicate and acute controversy that might easily lend itself to dangerous jingoism. Nor does anybody else seem disposed to question Japan's mandate, whether she is in or out of the league. Authorities on international law are divided over the juristic niceties involved, but expediency appears to dispose the interested nations against attempting to make out a case for termination of the mandate upon Japan's final withdrawal from the league.

The fact that our island of Guam is the largest of the Mariana group and that the Philippines are hard by gives rise to questions of naval strategy which is the only ostensible reason for American concern about the mandated islands. If Japan in fact is not fortifying the islands, if they are not of strategic value our interest would disappear.

On these points some fresh light is now shed by a current book written by Paul H. Clyde, professor of history at the University of Kentucky, who spent several months last year visiting the mandated islands at the invitation of the Japanese government. The Japanese embassy has distributed copies of the book. Hence it is open to the objection that it is not as unpartial as a study or report made under less interested auspices.

• • • •

HOWEVER, with these reservations, it is worth noting that Prof. Clyde finds no support for the recurrent charges that naval bases or fortifications are being established in the islands by the Japanese. On the contrary he presents an impressive array of evidence to show that outside of the island of Truk, one of the Carolines, which he calls a "natural" fortification, and two more of this group, none of the many islands and atolls lends itself to mounting of heavy guns. He notes that the coral atolls of Marsall group would "in some cases serve as excellent points of refuge for submarines and light craft."

He cites naval authorities to show that, not only have no bases or fortifications been attempted, but that the islands would be most valuable to Japan in case of war as storage depots for fuel, but only in case her navy had control of the western Pacific. "Once that control is lost to Japan," he states, "the islands become strategically not only valueless, but a source of weakness—potential bases from which she may be attacked."

"Until substantial evidence of fortification is produced," he concludes, "no useful purpose is served by the continuation in the western press of unofficial and unauthoritative charges. Should Japan at some future time become engaged in naval warfare in the western Pacific, she would in all probability annex and fortify the islands. Such a development, however, from the naval point of view, would be of secondary importance. Fortifications in the islands can have no value to Japan unless her navy can control the sea in which they lie. So long as she does control that sea, fortifications are in large measure unnecessary."

• • • •

THE question is thus left largely for the future, assuming as Prof. Clyde seems to have demonstrated conclusively that Japan has not in fact moved as yet to fortify or establish bases on such few of the islands as offer the opportunity. For the present, the State Department at least, as well as other foreign offices, appear content to let matters alone. The Navy will keep a sharp eye on future developments, now that Japan is completing her exit from the league and consolidating her commanding position in the Far East.

It is too much to hope that jingoism will subside in the face of any evidence offered of Japan's abstention from adapting the manadated islands to strategic purposes, but impartial opinion will await more "substantial evidence" than is now available.

Public Favor Decides February Screen Champions of the Box-Office Month

Selections Are Alien to Local Point of View

Standard Is a Bit Lowered; Celebration on Tonight; Amusement Jottings.

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

By Nelson B. Bell.

The so-called "Box-Office Champions for February"—those pictures which by actual key-city receipts have demonstrated themselves to the editorial staff of the Motion Picture Herald to have been the most popular nationally, of all the film releases—seem to this column to have receded slightly from the high standard of excellence that has characterized earlier public choices.

Only the first and second of the seven film plays scoring in the tabulations were undisputed for the positions of preeminence they occupied. Three tied for third place in gross intake and two for fourth.

The winners for the month were "David Copperfield," worthy of being an uncontested first on any authentic list; "Lives of a Bengal Lancer," an especially effective study of male reactions to frontier hardships; "The Woman in Red," "The Scarlet Pimpernel" and "Sweet Music," in the deadlock for third place, and "The Gilded Lily" and "The Good Fairy" in the stalemate for fourth.

A Few Surprises.

It is a little surprising, it seems to me, that Barbara Stanwyck's "Woman in Red," Leslie Howard's "Scarlet Pimpernel" and Rudy Vallee's "Sweet Music" should have run so close in the race for national regard. A similar catholicity of mass preference is betrayed by the tie between Claudette Colbert's "Gilded Lily" and Margaret Sullavan's "Good Fairy." Evidently Ferenc Molnar has a lesser following among the picture addicts than among those who confine their theatergoing to the traditional living drama, else "The Good Fairy" would have been far down the list.

It lost tremendously in its transition to the screen, descending from an imaginative and charming bit of whimsy to a rip-roaring, top-of-the-lungs farce in which the main idea seemed to be to outshout the other fellow.

The February verdict gives a definite "edge," as we say from behind the eight ball, to certain of the producing firms. Paramount, for example, has two among the winners in "Lives of a Bengal Lancer" and "The Gilded Lily"; the Warner Brothers-First National combination also have two in "The Woman in Red" and "Sweet Music." The others distribute themselves equally among Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, United Artists and Universal.

For the first time since Grace Moore was singing her glorious arias in "One Night of Love," the Earle Theater has laid down the rule that no patron will be seated during Charles Laughton's reading of Lincoln's Gettysburg Address in "Ruggles of Red Gap," the screen feature which currently is giving every promise of smashing attendance records at the Warners' Thirteenth street house.

Laughton's reading of the immortal words of the Great Emancipator is marked by the greatest restraint. While it constitutes the high point of the film's amazing effectiveness, it at no time approaches the picture's apex of audibility. It requires a bit of listening, as a matter of fact, to apprehend the complete power of the speech.

For this reason, Manager Harry E. Lohmeyer of the Earl ruled last Friday night that no one would be seated during its recitation—an edict that will arouse the enthusiasm of all those who already are in their seats when it begins.

A Word of Gratitude.

We have been trying for weeks now to get around to a word or two concerning the new issue of the Year Book of the Motion Picture, issued annually by the Film Daily, presided over by that estimable gentleman of printer's ink and blue pencils, Jack Alicoate, a former attache of this flourishing family journal.

This Film Year Book is one of the marvels of the industry in the matter of condensed information, bdeadth of scope and recitation of titles, players and other information that has sprawled itself out since the inception of the cinema as a major factor in entertainment a third of a century ago.

As against last year's 13,905 picture titles, this year's book catalogues 14,573. That, I submit, is a considerable array of celluloid items of full feature length. The consideration of the executive personnel of all the major and minor producers is no less comprehensively handled.

It is, in short, a great book—invaluable to the dramatic desk and much treasured by your present reporter. This last is especially true because Mr. Alicoate has gone to the trouble of having my name splashed across the front cover in blue ink, an inconsequential deviation from last year's gold!

One learns at a matutinal soiree that carried on into the outrageously wee, sma' hours of the mornin' over in the charming Alexandria home of Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Gilmore, that the gorgeous creature who lends a pulchritudinous touch — and what a touch—to Herb Williams' topline act at Loew's Fox this week, is his daughter, Doris Ewing, whose mother was Hilda Wolfuss, for years the partner of the theater's greatest yearner for the "spo-o-tlight!"

Doris has been around before with her dad, but only now at the age of 23 is assuming those mature talents that entitle her to a logical successorship to the post so long occupied by her eccentrically talented mother.

Our last year's Knox is off to both father and daughter and to a fragrant memory of Hilda, one of the most agile of the stage's feminine funsters. Incidentally, Herb will tell you that his present 100 per cent lunatic turn, like Topsy, in Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe's charade, "just growed." He doesn't know precisely where it came from, nor why, and has never given the thing a title—which would be just as easy as squaring the circle. By the way, how are you doing with your circle squaring?

"Happy Birthday to You."

There will be goings-on tonight in the Ambassador Hotel from then practically up to here.

I mean to say the frolic arranged for the celebration of the third anniversary of Phil Lampkin's incumbency of the musical directorship of the Loew organization in Washington and the first birthday of the Hi-Hat Club will be done ample justice by Manager Russell A. Conn of the Ambassador—where the Hi-Hat is situate—and divers and sundry others (to coin a phrase).

With Prof. Lampkin at the head table will be seated as other honor guests the following distinguished brother band leaders: Pete Macias, Heigh-Ho Club; Freddie Clark, orchestra conductor Warner Bros. Earle Theater; Moe Baer, Club Habana; Leon Brusiloff, Madrillon; Sidney, Mayflower Hotel; Matt Windsor, Russian Troika; Emory Daugherty, La Paree; Dave MacWilliams, Meyer Davis leader; John Slaughter, Willard Hotel; Harold Veo, Hamilton Hotel; Rudy Schramm, radio band leader; Phil O'Brien, Swanee; Harry Blum, Army and Navy Country Club; Bill Strickland, Lotus; Jimmy Santmyer, Gingham Club; Walter Salb, Raleigh Hotel; Raoul DaCosta, Madrillon; Barnee, Shoreham Hotel; Emil Smith, Wardman Park Hotel, and Arthur Godfrey, WJSV.

The National Theater Players will positively open their season on Easter Monday, April 22. All doubt was dispelled when Panjandrum Stephen E. Cochran returned from New York Saturday with the tidings that he had closed for his first three plays, all classed as "hits" and now running on the "main stem."

They will open with Samuel Raphaelson's "Accent on Youth," the play that Crosby Gaige has just sold to the movies for $60,000. This will be followed by "Petticoat Fever," in which Dennis King is appearing at the Ritz Theater, New York. Then will come that delightful comedy, "The Bishop Misbehaves," in which Walter Connolly is charming audiences at the Cort Theater.

This will probably set a record for stock offerings in Washington—the presentation of three definite successes while they are still current on Broadway.

Order Yours Now.

The tickets for the four performances to be given in the Maryland Theater, Baltimore, of John Van Druten's new drama, "Flowers of the Forest," by Katharine Cornell and her company, beginning Thursday night, April 4, will be put on sale today. Advance mail order demands indicate capacity houses for Miss Cornell's new production, which is to be given in Baltimore for the first time in America and is to be presented in New York the following Monday.

Three scene, light and dress rehearsals of "Flowers of the Forest" will be held on the Maryland Theater stage beginning a week from today. These rehearsals will be strictly private. Miss Cornell accompanied by John Van Druten, the author, Auriol Lee, the stage director, and Guthrie McClintic, the producer, will arrive in Baltimore on next Monday morning.

Gay Life Note.

So another screening at something-or-other a. m., this time the newest edition of George White's "Scandals."

What, will daylight never come?

Gayety

"SILK STOCKING REVUE," Independent Burlesque Association production in two acts and 26 scenes, with Frank X. Silk, Sam Micals, Jim Bennett, Tom Bundy, Lou Denny, Pearl Niles, the Gray Brothers, Rita Zane, Eva Osborne, Ella Sears, Edna Dee, and the Dancing Bryanettes. Book by Gus Flagg; dances routined by Frank Bryant. Staged by James J. Lake. Reviewed Sunday matinee by W. A. Whitney.

Continuing in the same tenor as last week, when the comedians held forth almost to the exclusion of the distaff side of the company, the "Silk Stocking Revue" this week leans almost precariously toward the farcical in burlesque.

Frank X. Silk, one of the funnier and better comics of the business, sets and maintains the fast comic pace for the show.

Assisting Comic Silk are Tom Bundy and Lou Denny, straight men, who know their way about. Sam Micals and Jim Bennett, "Joosh" comics, have charge of many of the other skits and work acceptably.

Gray Brothers Are Asset.

The Gray Brothers—Sid and Eddie—appear twice in fast tap routines which aid in elevating the quality of the whole show. In Paul Niles, the wheel has one of its finest barytone voices.

Edna Dee, the so-called "original hot-cha-cha girl," heads the feminine contingent, doing two revelatory routines that further increase her appeal to Gayety audiences. Perhaps not quite as "sizzling" as she has been on some of her previous appearances, Miss Dee, nevertheless, received spontaneous response from the stalls.

Other charmers are Rita Zane, Eva Osborne and Ella Sears, with Sunny Nash stepping out on occasion for a little extra bit for the delectation of the assembled customers.

Star and Piano Are Inseparable

This, however, is a unique camera study of Helen Morgan and her piano, because she is seated at it, instead of upon it. The trademark of this gifted singer for long has been the engaging spectacle of her attractive person perched upon the upper deck of an upright—rather in the nature of a holdover from the old days of night club intimacy. Now Miss Morgan is soon to be seen on the screen in the Warner Brothers production of "Go Into Your Dance," the first joint starring vehicle for those singing and dancing not-so-newlyweds, Al Jolson and Ruby Keeler. It will be coming along soon.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown

The Burney Club, in cooperation with the Y. W. C. A. music department, observes Johann Sebastian Bach's 250th natal anniversary, in Barker Hall, Sunday afternoon. Program: Introductory talk by Sade C. Styron; Partita in C minor, played by Margaret Tolson; Concerto in the Italian style (Harold Bauer's arrangement for two pianos), played by Sade C. Styron and LaSalle Spier.

When the Burney Club presents its annual public concert, one is certain that the program will be rewarding, because for the members of the group music is as much an avocation as it is a vocation. They are interested not in the exploitation of the art, but in the exploration of its endless ramifications; their concern is more with the essence of music than with its superficial attributes. Their guests therefore confidently expect that only worthy music will be disclosed.

On this occasion the work of paramount importance was Bach's Concerto in the Italian style, presented for the first time in Washington in the two-piano version by Harold Bauer. One of the finest examples of sonata-form in the early stage of development, the concerto was written for the harpsichord with double keyboard. The skill with which Mr. Bauer has distributed the voices between two instruments, while retaining on the more percussive pianoforte the effect of harpsichord style, is a proof of his sound musicianship.

One aspect of Bach's genius was the adaptability with which he applied foreign fashions to his music without losing one whit of his originality. The Italian character of the concerto resides entirely in its graces and embellishments, but its ideas could have come from no one save Bach. His conception of the Latin temperament appears in the animation and verve of the first and last movements and even colors the gravity of the central adagio. The reading by Miss Styron and Mr. Spier was sympathetic and thoroughly enjoyable.

Of the seven Partitas contained in the "Clavieruebung," the one in C minor is not so engaging to modern ears as some of the others, but it is rich in thematic invention and packed with interesting material. Miss Tolson played it with musicianly intelligence on the interpretative side and with the crisp and clear phrasing of good technique.

Miss Styron's introductory talk on Bach's keyboard music covered the ground with brevity and touched upon the various influences which his compositions reveal. Behind her pleasant resume was no small amount of research well dissembled by an informal presentation.

Igor Stravinski, composer-pianist, and Samuel Dushkin, violinist, in a recital of compositions by Stravinski; National Theater, Sunday night. Program: "Suite Italienne;" "Divertimento;" "Aria" and "Capriccio" from the Violin Concerto; airs from "Le Rossignol;" "Marche Chinoise;" "Berceuse;" "Scherzo;" "Danse Russe."

One's previous impression that Igor Stravinski's potency as a composer manifests itself through the sensuous appeal of rhythm and instrumental color combinations was almost settled into a conviction by this recital. Certainly, the music presented in terms of piano and violin stirred in one no such response of admiration as is aroused by his orchestral palette and the principal satisfaction derived from the occasion was that of encountering in the flesh the creator of "Petrushka" and "Le Sacre du Printemps."

If one excepts the transcription of the magical "Berceuse" from "Zhar Ptitza," and the two movements from the violin concerto, the program was on the plane of cleverness alone. Since that plane is not the only one traversed by Stravinski's talent, the effect of the evening's performance was disappointing. While one was not given stones for bread, the aesthetic hunger was not satisfied with the lightness of the fare.

The Italian suite, so adroit in pastiches of an entire school of musicians, sparkles with the same wit and humor that enliven the "Pulcinella" ballet. Each of the six pieces is ingeniously wrought with scintillant facets and one's attention is continually alert to catch the allusive gleams. This is entertainment of the sharpest sophistication.

The Divertimento, sub-titled "inspired by the muse of Chaikovski," left one somewhat bewildered about its meaning. The references to Chaikovski's style are so vague as to be practically esoteric to the uninitiated and the harmonies are equally unilluminating.

Violin concertos with piano accompaniment are but shadows of their real selves, even when one is able to supply from memory the missing instrumental timbres. In the case of an unfamiliar work, the imagination tries in vain to supply the colors behind the solo voice. Consequently, the selections which Mr. Dushkin so expertly set forth left one with the sole impression of the virtuosity required.

True, the "Aria" has a melodic line of genuine lyricism, but how that line will glow as a thread in a tonal tapestry one does not know. The "Capriccio" is purely Stravinskian in its unexpected intervals and technically beyond the reach of any save masterly players. Mr. Dushkin met every demand with admirable surety and skill.

Women's Body Hears Cellist In D. C. Recital

Performance by Parronchi, Formerly With National Group, at City Club.

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

Members who gathered at the Women's City Club last night heard a cello recital by Bernard Parronchi, formerly with the National Symphony and at present first cellist of Radio City Music Hall orchestra. Mr. Parronchi was accompanied by Mary Izant Couch, of the Women's City Club.

Due to many mechanical difficulties the concert was an apathetic performance on the part of both players.

Mr. Parronchi's program opened with Corelli's "Preludio," followed by Gaelotti's Gavotte and Minuett and Mary Howe's "Patria." The "Preludio" displayed the cellist's even tone and capacity for good melodic outline. "Patria" contains the elements of an interesting composition, but was presented with little understanding.

Haydn's "Concerto in D Major," which made up the second group, was far from a finished performance. Difficult from a technical point of view and equally so from a musical one, it appeared to be too much for Mr. Parronchi to handle. The strict attention to detail that is so essential to the performance of classics was lacking; though Mr. Parronchi has a creditable technique under his fingers it was not entirely evident in his playing.

Three compositions of Latin flavor—Albeniz's "Malaguena," Ravel's "Habanera" and Nin's "Grenadinas"—formed the next group. The program concluded with Boccherini's A major Sonata. K. S.

Mann, of near Tiffin, Ohio, for nine months of each year.

The case came before Judge Willard on habeas corpus proceedings. There were 12 witnesses for the Rudys and seven for the Manns. The testimony showed that Glenn Rudy and his wife, formerly Miss Evelyn Mann, parents of the child, were divorced in Tiffin some time ago and that the Seneca County Court awarded the custody of the child to the paternal grandparents for June, July and August and to the maternal grandparents the remainder of each year.

At the end of the boy's vacation last year at the Lawrence Rudy home Mr. and Mrs. Rudy refused to deliver the child to Mr. and Mrs. Mann, claiming his health did not warrant taking him to Ohio. Mr. and Mrs. Mann then brought proceedings to compel Mr. and Mrs. Rudy to obey the injunction of the Ohio court.

Rudy owns two large farms west of Middletown. Mann is a large land owner in Seneca County.

One of the worst stretches of road reported was on Route 55, between Gainesville and Front Royal. Other stretches under repair were Route 5, between Fernclife and Shadwell; Route 15, between Culpeper and Brandy; Route 16, for 6 miles south of Sperryville; Route 28, between Manassas and Centerville; Route 17, between Fredericksburg and Bealeton, and Route 20, between Orange and Chancellorsville.

Hollywood

Hollywood, March 25.

GRETA GARBO is still quietly interested in George Brent, and she not only visits him at Toluca Lake, but has also been house hunting in that sector. . . . Al Jolson's new radio program will be modeled after the Rudy Vallee feature, and will have noted guest stars. Jolson's first guest star will be Shirley Temple, making her radio debut. . . . The Anita Louise-Kelly Anthony engagement is off, and Miss Louise handed him back the ring because his family insisted that she must desert the screen if they were to be Mr. and Mrs. . . . Robert Taylor, the latest movie hero, gets long distance phone calls from Tamara Geva. . . . At Metro they are about ready to make a musical flicker of the career of Johann Strauss. One of the producers approved the script, but said that he was disappointed with the music. He requested that some hit tunes be substituted for the Strauss music.

Cecil B. DeMille, who insists upon getting his history correct for his historical flickers, is ready to shoot a sequence for "The Crusades." The set represents Windsor Castle . . . DeMille looks it over and bellows: "This castle looks too new. We've got to have things right. Make it look older." The stage hands swing into action to make the famous Windsor Castle appear older . . . Shooting is postponed for several hours . . . Then one of the technicians manages to get to Director DeMille and he says to him: "If I'm not mistaken, Mr. DeMille, the aged Windsor Castle was new at the time of 'The Crusades'" . . . So to be historically correct, DeMille now had to give the order to make the castle appear new and fresh again . . . Later, the same Director DeMille dictated a personal message to his secretary over the public address system.

GEORGE RAFT trains it for New York after finishing in "The Glass Key," and is trying to persuade Virginia Pine to look the big town over also . . . Alice Brady annoys Virginia Bruce a trifle, when, before the entire cast of "Legion of Valor," Miss Brady said to Miss Bruce: "What long eyelashes you have. Do you get them cheaper by buying them by the yard?" . . . Mrs. Bottom, the character written into the screen version of Shakespeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream," is now out of the flicker. Max Reinhardt having won his battle . . . Don Cook and Irene Hervery is one of the new romances, if you're interested . . . All Hollywood seems to be busy writing novels; the latest is Director Tay Garnett, and it is a thrilling yarn he relates in "Man Laughs Back" . . . Charles Bickford has been signed for "The Farmer Takes a Wife" as a threat to Spencer Tracy—just in case Tracy should misbehave . . . A cute combination: Elizabeth Arden, the beautician being escorted places by Adrian, the costumer.

The latest fad in town is the betting lounge. It is a place frequented by the bookmakers and the lads who like to play the ponies. Here cocktails are served as you place your bets . . . It's a great idea, for a fellow enters, has a mild cocktail and bets $5 on a horse to show . . . At about the time of the fifth race the same fellow is ordering brandy and is betting $100 on a horse to win . . . James Cunningham relays a conversation in which a person asked Sam Goldwyn about his promised musical revue, to be called "The Goldwyn Follies." "Are you sure," he was asked, "it won't be Goldwyn's Folly's?" "I'm certain," answered Goldwyn. "The title will positively be registered."

Mack Gray has given Lucille Bell an engagement ring, just to show that his intentions are strictly honorable . . . And to insure the fact that the stock would go down so he could make money, he was interested in making bad pictures . . . There's a medal waiting for the person who can see the Countess Di Frasso these nights without Rowland Brown . . . Jack Kirkland's play, "Tobacco Road," is a big hit here . . . All the office departments, now housed in the Chrysler Building, will be installed in the office building at the local plant within the next two weeks, excepting the export office. This department may be transferred here later.

Just how many new workers will be brought here is not known. Included in the transfer will be the accounting, sales and advertising forces. Some of the routine work done by clerks, secretaries and stenographers will be absorbed by the local force.

Parts of the office buildings are now being remodeled to accommodate the added workers. Floor coverings, desks, files and other forms of equipment are being put it.

The plant here is the main one of the company. It cost several million dollars and employs several thousand persons.

VirginiaBoard Gets Spelman Fund Aid

$33,500 Grant Announced by Planning Group.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., March 25.—The Virginia State Planning Board today received a grant of $33,500 from the Spelman fund of New York for use in its work in the next year and a half. Announcement was made by Morton L. Wallerstein, chairman of the board authorized by the General Assembly and reappointed by Gov. Peery after it was originated by Gov. Pollard in September, 1933.

"The fact that the Spelman fund, a philanthropic foundation, whose funds are expended for the improvement of government, has selected the State planning boards in three States—Virginia, New York and Kansas—constitutes a fine tribute to the administrative government of Virginia in general and particularly is a compliment to the administration of Gov. Peery," said Mr. Wallerstein.

He explained that previously the board has "had to operate through a consultant furnished by the Federal Government and an associated consultant with clerical assistance and stationery furnished it by the Governor and various State departments and with the assistance of VERA draftsmen."

Greif Challenges Removal of Eagle

Will Use Label Pending Ruling on 7(a).

By the Associated Press.

Staunton, Va., March 25.—The authority of the regional labor board and the National Labor Relations Board to deprive it of the Blue Eagle today was challenged by L. Greif & Brothers, Inc., operating clothing mills.

The company announced it will continue to use NRA labels until the Supreme Court of the United States passed upon the constitutionality of section 7(a).

The announcement was made after the company was cited before the regional labor board to answer charges that it "failed to protect union workers" in disturbances in which the company asserted it took a neutral position. The regional board recommended that the national board deprive the company of the right to use Blue Eagle labels.

The company operates in Maryland, Pennsylvania and Virginia.

Mrs. Grove first became anxious when her son did not return after nightfall, then frantic as midnight approached. Relatives and friends were queried, but none had seen the child. Police were notified and began a systematic search of the city.

Then some one wandered into the summer kitchen. There was Frank, curled up, fast asleep.

"I was playing and got sleepy," Frank explained between yawns.

Time Extended For Orchestra FundCampaign

City Drive, Half-Way to Goal, to End Next Tuesday; Program Chosen.

The campaign to raise a $100,000 sustaining fund for the National Symphony Orchestra, which is already more than half-way to its goal, has been extended to next Tuesday, it was announced yesterday.

At the same time, the season's final program for the orchestra, music selected by the patrons themselves, was made public. More than twice as many persons voted for their favorite music this year as did last season, it was said.

Mrs. Tracy Dows, co-chairman of the general committee of the campaign for funds, said many subcommittee chairmen had asked for more time to communicate with possible subscribers. More than $50,000 already has been given or pledged.

"Unfinished" Favorite.

For the symphony on the request program, Schubert's B minor ("Unfinished") won first place, with 960 votes. Its closest rival was Dvorak's E minor symphony ("From the New World"), the choice of 450 persons. Competition between "Finlandia," by Sibelius, and "The Pines of Rome," by Respighi, was keen, there being 800 votes for "Finlandia" and 740 for the Respighi work.

Among the overtures, Mozart's "Die Zauberfloete" led with 620 votes. Strauss' "Die Fledermaus" received 360 ballots, and Beethoven's "Lenore" No. 3 was third with 150. As a result of the balloting, the following program has been arranged:

Overture to "Die Zauberfloete," Mozart
"Symphony No. 8 in B Minor," Schubert
"Ride of the Valkyries" ..... Wagner
"Largo," from "Symphony in E Minor." Dvorak
"Hungarian Dance No. 1" ..... Brahms
"Pizzicato Polka" ..... Strauss
"Finlandia" ..... Sibelius

Among the gifts to the fund announced yesterday was that of 6-year-old Billie Hendrickson, who promised a dollar to be raised by saving a penny a day until June 1. The metropolitan committee announced a new gift of $2,000, and the $1,000 gift of Mr. and Mrs. Christian Heurich has been made final, as the four similar gifts to match it have been received.

The Junior League has pledged $1,000 if three similar gifts will be made. An anonymous donation of $500 has been promised if nine others of the same amount can be obtained.

Youthful Violinist

Milton Schwartz, 26-year-old violinist of the National Symphony Orchestra, is turning out just as his parents wanted. He is a violinist and a good one.

National Symphony Violinist Realizes Childhood Ambition

Milton Schwartz Wanted to Be a Musician Even as a Boy.

Milton Schwartz, who has more years ahead of him than almost any other player in the National Symphony Orchestra, lives with at least one satisfaction. He has turned out to be a violinist, and one who is getting along pretty well.

"Maybe I'm the exceptional child," Milton commented at rehearsal the other day, "but I guess my parents ought to be satisfied with me. In the first place they wanted a boy. Then they wanted a boy who would learn to play the violin. Well, I turned out to be a boy, and strangely enough I wanted to become a violinist, and not a fireman or a sailor."

Milton remembers the first time his parents, eager to see their child get along, fitted a violin under his chin. He was 3 years old. And he has been playing ever since.

"Playing a violin is about all I've ever done, and I'll keep on playing now as long as I live, I guess," he said.

Milton studied to be a violin soloist. But he likes to play in a symphony orchestra because there is so much musical color there. And he likes string quartets, too. When he isn't playing with the National orchestra, he is rehearsing or playing with the Washington String Quartet, in which he is first violinist.

He also is a composer, having written a concerto for two violins, and a suite for violin and piano.

He doesn't play all the time. He dances, and declares it a hobby.

Centipedes Are Recommended For Job of 'Kitchen Police'

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., March 25.—If you have a little "thousand-legs" in your home, leave him alone, and he'll police your kitchen for you, said Henry M. Taylor, the Federal-State crop statistician for Virginia, today.

Mr. Taylor had just received a Federal Department of Agriculture bulletin on centipedes sent to him by special request. He said it vindicated his contention of many years' standing.

The great value of the thousand-legs is its predatory nature, which leads it to feed upon roaches and other common house pests, the bulletin said. It charges swiftly upon its victim at the speed of about 300 strokes a minute, clasps it in its multiple claws and stings it to death.

Although possessing a poisonous sting, the thousand-legs will not usuall bite human beings, except in self-defense, the bulletin said.

"Just leave him severely alone, and he will keep your kitchen clear of roaches," added Mr. Taylor.

The official said he had found an older bulletin about centipedes which said women were terrified by them.

Inquiry Scores Police on Delay In Tip-Off Case

Headley InterferenceClaim Draws Sharp Retort of Rep. Schulte.

information that the fruitless, warrantless 2 p. m. raid had been known to him at 10 a. m. that day, did not testify.

Mr. Fred conducts the Ugly Duckling Tea Room at 115 B street southeast. He had refused the invitation of Mr. Fitzpatrick to appear before the committee and was there under protest in answer to a subpena signed by Speaker Joseph W. Bryns and served on him by a deputy sergeant-at-arms of the House. He was the first witness subpenaed.

Late in the afternoon he was brought before the committee and sworn and told to return at 10:30 a. m. today. He protested. He didn't know whether he could be there at that time or not, he said. He had to be at market at that hour. Representative Schulte gave him the 15 minutes grace he asked for and Mr. Fitzpatrick warned him he was under subpena which must be obeyed.

"I don't know a thing about municipal affairs," Mr. Fred protested. "I haven't anything to say to this committee."

"You return not later than 10:45 tomorrow morning," the acting chairman warned.

Inspector Headley fell into difficulties when he was asked about a conversation in the Fifth Precinct station at 5 p. m. last Saturday. Capt. Morgan, Lieut. Kelly, Mr. Fox, assistant director of the boys' club of the precinct, and himself participated, he said. He couldn't recall parts of the conversation about which the committee asked, and said he "just couldn't put it together."

"Well," snapped Mr. Fitzpatrick finally, "what were you doing in the station?"

"It was part of my territory."

Headley Is Warned.

"After all, inspector, a serious accusation has been made," interjected Representative Schulte. "A man's job's at stake. This may mean his dismissal, trial. These men are under your supervision. One of the men is in a jam, I'll say, and some one may go to jail. You'd surely be interested in this matter?"

"Yes, but it was just a conversation."

"Have you called for a report?"

"I have not, but a report has been called for by Maj. Brown."

"Did you ask Capt. Morgan who was the citizen who had told him Mike Sesso, a gambler, had said all the police in the precinct were crooked? Why didn't you ask who the citizen was?"

"Because he told me the citizen was a responsible man and could be found if anything developed."

"You didn't make any effort to find out who the man was who told Capt. Morgan?"

"I didn't believe the story."

"The captain thought it important enough to take up with the entire precinct," interjected Representative Schulte.

"Wasn't it John O'Neill, the policeman supposed to be 'too damn dumb to be crooked,' who told Capt. Morgan?" asked Mr. Fitzpatrick.

"Fats" Cornell, whose mother owns the raided premises at 113 B street, had called on Capt. Morgan, accompanied by Denny Hughes, a lawyer, and demanded the police repair the door broken to gain entrance for the "hit and run," warrantless raid, it was developed. He had not been informed "officially" about the demand for payment, but Capt. Morgan had told him Cornell had made a complaint and the captain had had the door repaired. Inspector Headley said.

"Did Salkeld do anything improper going down there on that raid without a warrant?" asked Mr. Fitzpatrick.

"If he went in without a warrant he did something improper; yes, sir."

"Do you think the captain was wrong?"

"As a legal proposition he was wrong," Inspector Headley said, adding that Capt. Morgan shared responsibility with Salkeld.

Salkeld Questioned Again.

Testimony of Capt. Morgan and Detective Salkeld was flatly contradictory on one major point. Capt. Morgan said he had talked about the raid only with Salkeld between 9 a. m. and 10 a. m., and between 11 a. m. and 12 noon, and had talked with no other person. He had said if there was a "tipoff," Salkeld was the only man who could have given the tip. He insisted yesterday he had not charged Salkeld with giving a "tipoff," but made the statement in reply to a hypothetical question.

Salkeld again took the witness stand carrying the stub of a cigar, which he frequently stuck in his mouth but as quickly yanked out to give freedom to his emphatic rush of positive words.

"Did Capt. Morgan talk with you around 9 o'clock about 113 B street?" he was asked by Mr. Fitzpatrick.

"No, sir. Might have been on some other subject, but wasn't about No. 113 B street. The first time he talked to me—I know it wasn't before 1. I waited around for Sergt. Bohrer, but didn't go near any telephone and didn't go near a damn soul till I left there with Sergt. Bohrer and went up there."

Denies Being in Jam.

"Did you tell Capt. Morgan you had got in a jam once for a hit-and-run raid and had been off for six months?"

"No, sir. No, sir," cried the fat detective, and asked indignanitly: "Why'd I want to tell him such a damn lie like that?"

"Have you ever been in a jam?"

"No! Never! I'm telling you, never," he said, frowning. "This here is the only jam I've ever been in," he added, with a chuckle.

All he knew about Mr. Fred, he said, was what he read in the newspaper. "I picked it up and it nearly scared me to death," he added.

"Did you tell anybody about the raid?"

"I'm certain I didn't even tell the policemen who went with me. I just told them to follow me down."

Lieut. Kelly testified he had given Capt. Morgan four reasons why Salkeld "couldn't have tipped off the raid." Capt. Morgain had said he talked with Salkeld at 11 a. m. and Mr. Fred had said he had been told of it at 10 a. m., the lieutenant enumerated. Second, the place was vacant, and Salkeld knew it was. Third, if Salkeld had been on such friendly terms with the proprietors he need not have given a "tip-off," but merely had to say he had no warrant.

"In other words, he had an alibi?" asked Mr. Fitzpatrick.

"Not necessarily an alibi. I would not have made the raid myself without a warrant."

Fourth, he continued, it wasn't a "tip-off," but a "leak" at most. Mr. Fred was a reputable citizen; was known as a man who wouldn't condone gambling and a man who would not be expected to pass word along to gamblers.

More Police Demanded.

Capt. Hugh H. Groves, commander of the Twelfth Precinct, told the committee he should have 18 more patrolmen and 12 motorcycle men for traffic duty. He approved of civil service, but said the rating board should consult with captains before changing efficiency ratings; that the United States Park Police should be consolidated with the Metropolitan police; that the trial board should not be changed and appeal should be left with the Commissioners; that the six-hour limit within which police must furnish copy of charges against prisoners should be extended; that there was no prostitution and no gambling in his precinct. He urged jail sentence for prostitutes.

The hearing will be resumed today with Mr. Fred before the committee.

Court Refuses Plea to Break $150,000 Trust

But Finds Evidence Tends to Show Dear Children's Purpose Is Selfish.

The United States Court of Appeals refused to break an "irrevocable trust" fund amounting to $150,000 which Mrs. Ridie L. Dear established for her two children in 1933 although the court pointed out that after having read all of the evidence "so far as it relates to the family history of the three principals after the death of the father, it tends, we think, to show on the part of the children a consistent and selfish purpose to enrich themselves at the expense of their mother."

The opinion pointed out that the children, Richard Dear, and Mrs. Lillian Dear LeClaire, had both been "importunate" and had been paid more than $200,000 each from the $500,000 estate left by their father.

With her estate dwindling, the mother established a trust fund of $150,000 in 1931, with her son and his two children named as beneficiaries of the income, and any income in excess of their needs to be paid to her. There has never been such an excess.

Mrs. Dear sought cancellation of the trust because, she contended, she was induced to create the trust through the false representations of her daughter and the daughter's attorney.

After reviewing the case and expressing the hope that the mother would be cared for through a provision of the trust that enabled the trustees to draw upon the principal for her needs, the Appellate Court held that there was "no such urging, constraint, or persuasion as to subvert the sound judgment or real purpose of appellant (the mother) and equally no act of omission or concealment tending to mislead her in the execution of the deed.

The law firm of Peelle, Lesh & Drain, and attorneys J. F. Barnard, F. B. Warder, T. H. King, and H. L. McCormick, a trustee of the fund, represented the son and daughter, and the trust fund.

Two Hurt in Strike At Crosley Radio

Police Escort Workers to Cincinnati Plant.

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, March 25.—Police and the "military police" of strikers pushed in and pulled their way through seething crowds late today to provide safe conduct for workers of the Crosley Radio Corporation.

A strike began at the plant this morning. By nightfall two persons had been reported injured, a striker had been arrested, and scuffles had become numerous as workers sought to get home through throngs of strikers and symphathizers.

R. A. Hoff, leader of the Radio and Refrigerator Workers' Union, estimated the strikers at 3,000. Lewis Crosley, vice president and general manager, said 1,040 of the plant's normal force of 3,400 remained at their jobs. Hoff asserted the strike call followed failure of the union and the corporation to agree on working conditions. Crosley said there was "no dispute whatsoever" between the two.

the rumored "quintuplets abduction plot" had reached concrete form. They pointed out, however, that no automobile could make a dash for the border with northern Ontario roads in their present condition.

One version of the rumor was that after the babies had been "kidnaped" and removed to the United States, the rest of the family would follow. Then, outside the province, Dionne would be free to make any contracts concerning the children he might care to sign.

Another version said an "airplane and an automobile" were to have been used in the abduction.

The quintuplets' father was quoted as saying recently when the government offered to improve his farm home:

"Croll can keep his help. We'll get all the help we want from the United States. We'll be out of here by spring anyway."

Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, the babies' doctor, when asked about the reports, would only say:

"The babies are in great spirits."

Ruth Quigley, R. A. Moffett Wed in South

Ceremony Performed in Palm Beach Home of Bride's Parents.

Housing Administration Chairman Serves as Best Man for Son.

A wedding of much interest to Capital society took place yesterday afternoon in Palm Beach, Fla., when Miss Ruth Marian Quigley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Thomas Quigley, became the bride of Mr. Robert Arkell Moffett, son of the chairman of the Federal Housing Administration, Mr. James A. Moffett and the late Mrs. Moffett. The wedding took place in El Sueno, the Quigley's winter home.

The rooms were artistically decorated with a profusion of white gladioli arranged against a background of dark feathery palms and southern ferns. Bishop Nathanial Seymore Thomas performed the ceremony.

Mr. Quigley escorted his daughter and gave her in marriage. She was wearing a Schiaparelli model of white satin, made on princess lines, the flaring skirt terminating in a long fan-shaped train. The long close-fitting sleeves were finished with widely flaring cuffs. Her tulle veil was simply arranged and held in place with clusters of real orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Bader Maid of Honor.

The maid of honor was Miss Constance Bader, who wore a garden frock of yellow mousseline de soie, fashioned with the fitted bodice trimmed in the front with a row of buttons and the full skirt trimmed with rare old lace. She wore a large picture hat of the same shade and carried a shower bouquet of talisman roses.

Mr. Moffett attended his son as best man and the ushers were Mr. Jay A. Carlisle and Mr. Jack Moffett. Immediately following the ceremony there was a reception.

Mrs. Quigley was attired in a gown of lilac blue tucked chiffon, made on simple lines and with a cape effect at the shoulders. Her corsage was of deep purple violets. Mrs. Moffett, wife of the bridegroom's father, had on a bright spring print and a corsage of orchids.

Will Live in Chicago.

Later Mr. Moffett and his bride left on their wedding trip, the latter wearing a blue checked ensemble with a small hat and accessories of the same shade of blue. They will make their home in Chicago.

Young Mrs. Moffett received her early education in Palm Beach and later finished at the Montmorency School in Paris, France. Mr. Moffett attended Hotchkiss School and was graduated from Princeton University.

Virginia Heard, Mr. MacKethan Wed in Georgia

Few Friends and Relatives Witness Ceremony in Savannah.

Within the ivy-covered walls of historic old Christ Church in Savannah, Ga., Miss Virginia Lord Heard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Willis Heard, became the bride of Mr. Edwin Robeson MacKethan, jr., of Washington, at high noon Saturday. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. David Cady Wright, D. D., rector of the church, in the presence of a few friends and relatives who gathered informally to witness the event.

In keeping with the simplicity and dignity of the marriage were the lovely decorations of white dogwood, spirea and wood lilies arranged along the altar.

The bride was escorted by her father, who gave her in marriage, and was unattended. She wore her traveling suit, which was a becoming frock of navy blue triple sheer crepe made in two-piece effect. The shawl collar edged in tiny pleats came to an inverted V at the waistline which was marked by a wide suede belt, and a small vestee of white crepe stitched with blue formed a high round neckline, which was closed by a bow of navy blue cords ending in triangular white ivory balls. The intricately cut three-quarter length sleeves were draped to form a full point at the elbow below which they fitted the arm closely and were finished by flaring cuffs of the stitched crepe. Her Breton sailor of matching straw hat, a jaunty white feather on one side and her other accessories were of blue, while her flowers were a corsage of white gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Mr. Crawford MacKethan, of Fayetteville, N. C., served his brother as best man.

Mrs. Heard, mother of the bride, was gowned in apple green printed silk and a white straw hat and accessories. Immediately following the ceremony, Mr. MacKethan and his bride left on a wedding trip to Sea Island Beach. Later they will come to Washington, where they will make their home at 1200 Sixteenth street.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I am a young girl and very much in love with a married man. His wife is ill with tuberculosis and spends some time in a sanitarium. When she is away, we frequently go out together, but when she is at home, I go out with other men, but I don't like any of them.

• • • •

I don't want my parents or anyone else to know I go with a married man, and he doesn't want anyone to know he goes with me. He is afraid it will ruin my reputation. Do you think he loves me? Should I try to forget him? He seems to be very much in love with me.

• • • •

I love him with all my heart and if I can only be with him once in a while it means all the world to me. Do you think he will ever leave his wife for me? Please give me your advice as soon as possible. Thank you. BROKEN HEARTED.

• • • •

Victim of Philanderer.

DEAR BROKEN HEARTED: I seriously doubt the honorable intent of a married man who furtively courts a young girl in the absence of his wife, especially when he excuses his slyness on the ground that he is afraid of ruining her reputation. Since this man must realize he is ruining your reputation, he quite evidently isn't letting that fear concern him over-much. What he's more afraid of, I imagine, is being found out in his own disloyalty, and of being accused of contributing to the delinquency of a young girl.

• • • •

Will he ever leave his sick wife for you? I doubt it. But he might. Even if he does, however, you won't be getting much of a prize. A man who casts off one obligation for another, in the matrimonial field, can scarcely be expected to maintain any greater loyalty to the second than he has shown the first.

• • • •

I believe the situation amounts to this: Denied satisfactory married companionship with his wife because of her illness, the man has become physically infatuated with you and isn't looking one step beyond the present moment's emotional expression. I don't believe he's thinking in terms of marriage at all.

• • • •

When a married man of high principle—whose conduct is governed by a sense of honor, great self-respect and a concomitant respect for society's immutabe laws; in other words, a man whose devotion is worth having and returning—feels himself attracted by another woman, he doesn't profess his feeling by soliciting clandestine rendezvous.

• • • •

He may reveal a preference for her society, yes; but he seeks it under circumstances so open and above-board that the weed of scandal has no soil in which to thrive.

• • • •

My advice to you, "Broken Hearted," is to fight your way out of the shadowy nightmare of a furtive love affair with a philandering married man. Forget him if you can. But, even if you can't, don't meet him any more in secret. Broken hearts heal, but soiled reputations can never be cleaned.

Poise and Conversational Adeptness Are Typical Of Eastern Women, Mrs. Alfons Landa Asserts Underwood & Underwood.

A stanch defender of formality in social life is Mrs. Alfons Landa, who believes that the Eastern tradition of restraint and poise contributes to feminine grace and attractiveness.

Prefer Men of the Wales Style With Raleigh Manners.

North, South, East and West all pour their personalities into the melting pot that is Washington. And what do we find? Are the women of different regions true to the social traditions that have grown up around them? This is the first of a series of articles on sectional personalities.

By Frances Mangum.

THE TYPICAL Eastern woman has poise and conversational adeptness. She likes her men with a dash of Wales style and a sprinkling of Raleigh manners. Life to her is simplified by formality, and her code is based on self-assurance and independence.

This was the picture as drawn by Mrs. Alfons Landa, daughter of former Representative Frank W. Mondell, of Wyoming.

Mrs. Landa, who was born and reared in Washington, speaks with the authority of one who typifies the Eastern woman. It seems to her that assembling a number of traits and calling them a type is somewhat like calling the rainbow pink, or the chamelon blue. Nevertheless she admitted that Eastern women considered in general do have outstanding characteristics.

Poise for instance. "It seems quite natural," she said, "that women brought up in the East should have poise. They have to. Poise and adaptability combined.

Meet Many Types of People.

From the time they are so big they are constantly meeting a continuous tide of people. These people differ widely. Some are old, others young; they have widely divided interests, and come from all parts of the world. The Eastern woman learns that she must listen to one, talk to another, and know a little bit about a lot of things.

"This constant contact with a variety of people is responsible for another trait," Mrs. Landa continued. "It is conversational adeptness. In some cases this amounts to diplomacy. The woman possessing it learns the fine art of repartee, to fill in awkward moments with small talk, and in other words to toss the conversational ball. She soon learns how satisfactory it is to be master of a situation and she makes every effort to prime herself for this advantage. Not that she always succeeds, but at any rate it's something to aspire to."

In comparing the women from the East with those from other sections of the country, Mrs. Landa touched upon another predominantly Eastern trait.

Reticent on Own Affairs.

"Women from some sections lack repose," she said. "Others lack grace. Whether or not the Eastern woman has these, she generally does have detachment."

This, Mrs. Landa believes, is proved by her ability to discuss subjects seriously, and yet seldom heatedly. It is further borne out by her reticence in discussing her own affairs.

"The Eastern woman does not care to make an open book of her life," she smiled. "She knows that she is far more interesting if she doesn't. If a woman tells all about herself the first time you talk to her—well, her stock depreciates!"

Mrs. Landa also believes that Eastern women as a rule make rather rigid demands on men.

"That is," she explained, "they expect them to be well dressed, and dressed properly for each and every occasion. They appreciate refinement and good manners in a man and expect these things of him. As a usual thing there is little of the hail-fellow-well-met in her manner with men."

This she attributes in a large part to her schooling.

So many girls in the East go to boarding school where men are rarities," she said. "Consequently they learn to put forth their best 'dressed up' manners when they do meet them. This, to some extent, becomes a habit.

Their Code Is Based on Self-Assurance and Independence.

"And then, too, it's all part and parcel of the formality to which most Eastern women attune their lives."

Mrs. Landa confesses herself a stanch upholder of formality.

"It makes life simpler," she said. "I believe that informality takes a lot out of a person. Formality after all is simply regulation. It takes the mob aspect from a large gathering and inevitably adds order and smoothness."

Is there a general type of Western woman? Find the answer in tomorrow's Post in the second article of this series.

Back to Home Trend in Europe Is Denied By Mme. Helen Leune, French Lecturer

Such Moves Are Described as Progressive, Not Backward.

WITH A LIFT of her eyebrows, a shrug of her shoulders and a sidewise wave of her hand, Mme. Helen V. Leune, French journalist, author and lecturer, yesterday discredited the idea there is a back-to-the-home movement for women in Europe.

"When women are forced out of the business world, it is a step forward, not back," she said. "Any movement that will take women to the home is a progressive one. It is a fordward-to-the-home trend, if anything."

She explained, however, that while she feels the home is the best province for women, she does not believe they should restrict their interests and activities to cooking, sewing and housekeeping.

"Women owe it to themselves, their husbands and their children to keep abreast of the world," she said. "They can not concern themselves exclusively with domestic duties and be intelligent wives and mothers."

As attractive and as chic as the proverbiad charming French woman Mme. Leune—who writes under the name of "Lene Caudilly"—is here to study conditions in the United States, to observe American women, and to gather material for a book (her fourth). Arriving in this country five months ago, she has lectured in Boston, New York and Philadelphia on literature and international affairs. Now in Washington, she plans later to travel across the United States.

In view of her observations thus far, what were some of her opinions about American women?

Finds Women in America Happy and Energetic, but Spoiled.

"My opinions now are only impressions," she said, her brown eyes twinkling. "But it seems to me most American women are happy and have a wide range of interests. They are full of energy, alert, and perhaps——"

She hesitated, smiled, then continued: "You American women are—how shall I say it? You are spoiled, all because your men apparently give you everything you want. You have things your way, probably more than any women in the world. I wonder if it is good for you."

What about women of her own country? Were they still working for the vote?

"I know nothing about the status of the suffrage movement," she said. "Nor do I greatly care whether women get the vote in France—now or ever."

Interested in Government.

Did this mean she was not interested in politics?

"Interested in politics? Indeed, I am," she said. "I am tremendously concerned with government, not only in my own country but in Europe and in America. But why should I worry about whether French women get the vote today, tomorrow, or many years from now? We will get it eventually. We are, as a people, rooted in tradition, but everything comes to France, in time."

She explained that she believed suffrage should be of less concern to women than well-managed homes. "If they look after their husbands and childrens and preside over happy homes, women will make a worthy contribution to their country and to the world."

As a journalist and a contributor of three periodicals—"Figaro," "Gaulois," and "L'Illustration," Mme. Leune has traveled widely throughout Europe, has spent much time in Greece, a year on the Island of Rhodes, and a year in Germany.

She speaks French, German, and English and understands Italian, and has interviewed Mussolini, Mustapha Kemal and Venizelos, as well as many other noted European figures. She is still keeping close in touch with developments in Europe and is keenly interested in the German situation.

What did she think of Chancellor Hitler? Was he the type of leader Germany needed?

"German people want a militaristic leader," she said. "They must have weapons and they must use them. It is not Hitler, therefore, who makes Germany, but Germany that makes Hitler."

Main Complaint Of Housemaids Is Long Hours

Lack of time off is one of the major grievances housemaids have against their mistresses. This was brought out recently when maids, speaking under assumed names, were given their inning at a forum held at the Women's City Club of New York.

Other complaints included inadequate rest periods, little or no privacy, and a general want of respect on the part of the children of the household.

The housemaids did not complain so much about wages, but insisted that they be paid weekly or every two weeks rather than by the month.

A maid's hours, one witness testified, were from 7 o'clock in the morning until 9 or 10 at night without any time for recreation and without any freedom.

"Every worker should be given at least one hour a day," said one speaker, "in which she can do the most unrighteous thing a maid can do—lie down."

What TODAY Means

"Aries."

IF March 26 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:15 a. m. to 12:15 p. m., from 3:15 to 5:15 p. m. and from 7:15 to 9:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 8:15 to 10:15 a. m., from 12:15 to 2:15 p. m. and from 9:15 to 11:15 p. m.

Married and engaged couples, as well as those hoping to become affianced, should be careful to display good taste, in the selection of anything they purchase on this date.

If a woman, and March 26 is your birthday, the thing that may be more helpful than anything else in furthering your social or business advancement is learning to exercise patience in small, as well as large matters. You should be very fortunate in money matters.

The child born on March 26, generally through adolescence, until maturity, may appear to be a dreamer, but when the occasion arises will show, very likely, a surprising amount of practical sense.

If a man, and March 26 is your natal day, you can issue orders, originate ideas, and run things with a high degree of efficiency, much easier than to receive or carry out someone else's. Architecture, painting, scientific research, as well as educational work, offer a wide scope of activity for a man of your intelligence.

Lipstick Needs Are as Varied As Costumes

Shades Should Be Chosen to Fit All Business and Social Occasions.

NO WOMAN is so lacking in vanity that she contents herself with one hat to wear with all her frocks. And yet numbers of women believe that one lipstick will suffice them for the season.

Maybe this is a lipstick that is just bright enough for late afternoon, but too brilliant for bright sunlight, and fades into nothingness under glaring electric lights.

Just as a woman chooses her different accessories to blend and harmonize with her costumes so should she choose her lipsticks for her spring wardrobe. There should be a safe, sound sensible shade for business, where she must pass the scrutiny of her boss, or for luncheon, where she must meet the candid eyes of her mother-in-law. There should be a brighter, more sophisticated color to wear when she fills her cocktail engagement or battles at bridge with her "group."

And of course there must be that lipstick, alluring and seductive, to add the finishing touch to her evening ensemble. This should be a shade which holds its own beneath dim lights, and yet is not too brilliant under the full glare of an overhead chandelier.

There is so much beauty in lips they are enhanced with the proper lipstick applied carefully.

New Mascara Of a Different Type Devised

Stout Women Can Remain in Style With Girdle Priced at $1.39.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

JUST ANY NEW cosmetic isn't news, for all too many are confusingly alike. But when we find one that is totally unlike all others and does things that no others do, then we call it news with a capital N.

Don't be dismayed when we tell you that this piece of good news concerns a mascara. You see, it's the most convenient and flattering little lash tinter you ever saw.

It's really a mascara stick, flat and tapering at the end. It comes in a trim little chromium case with sides that flip back and form a handle for the mascara itself. You moisten the ends of this and brush it across your lashes and presto, they look so long, and thick, and naturally glossy you'll think you've grown a new crop. Applying it in this fashion helps you to train the upper lashes to curl up and the lower ones to curl down until they seem to literally sweep your cheeks.

Doubtless at first you painstakingly moisten the tip end by dipping it in a glass of water. By and by, however, you'll find that moistening it with the tip of your tongue is ever so much easier and quicker, and quite safe. Why, you can take a bite out of this mascara as safely as you can from a carrot.

Another thing about it. You can apply it to your lashes in the morning, and you'll find that it's still there in the evening. In fact it won't come off unless you wash it off, or better yet, cream it off yourself.

Blessed be the little budget saver, it costs only 50 cents!

Girdles For $1.39.

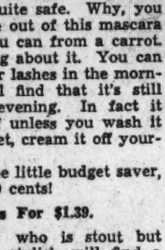
The woman who is stout but would still be stylish will find a comfortable, well-fitting girdle a big help toward her goal. And, there's no reason why she should unbalance her budget for a girdle if she can be fitted in some of those featured for $1.39 in a local store.

These are beautifully made little garments fashioned from two-way lastex with satin uplift bras. They're light, cool and easily washable and should fit the average overweight figure.

New Perfume "Stick."

"It's hard nowadays to tell when a lipstick is a lipstick or when it's something else. For instance, there are those adorable little perfume containers which look for all the world like very smart chromium lipsticks—until you open them. And then they look like cigarette lighters with their small wick. But this wick isn't for lighting. It's to convey the perfume from the inside out.

If you've never tried applying perfume by means of a wick you've missed out on the most effective means possible. The wick you see is damp and enables you to apply just so much without the risk of spilling a drop.



This new and utterly delightful gadget is by far the easiest, most convenient little perfume carrier that has yet been devised. It's absolutely leak and spill proof. It keeps your perfume intact so that it won't evaporate, thereby prolonging the life of the perfume by months. If you plan to invest in a dram of your favorite scent, then as an economy measure do buy a little container, too. It costs only 50 cents and will save you many times that amount.

Monogram Stationery.

Women are more discriminating than ever about their stationery. They feel that to sit down and scribble a note at random on any kind of note paper is equal to greeting a friend in a boudoir cap and bungalow apron. And it is. Psychologists tell us that slovenly habits all too frequently come to light through letters. So, keep this in mind and select your stationery with care.

You'll be overlooking a good thing if you fail to see the lovely stationery offered at such an amazingly low price in a downtown store. This comes in tiny, almost invisible, checks, in soft colors. Across the top is a cut-out monogram.

If you have a dye made for such a monogram it will cost you at least $12.50. But believe it or not here you can buy 24 sheets and 24 envelopes with this type of monogram for only $1.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 305, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

Three Prizes Are Offered For Recipes

HERE IS the week's last minute reminder—if you want your favorite hot bread recipe to win a prize enter it in The Post's contest immediately. All recipes should be received on or before Thursday. Only one recipe from each contestant will be considered.

The prizes are $3, $2 and $1. Send recipes to Dorothea Duncan, home economics editor of The Washington Post.

All should be typed if possible. If not write them neatly in ink. Check carefully for omissions. The name and address should appear on each sheet.

These Tailored Blouses Are Classic in Design

Pattern No. 889.

CLASSIC? Certainly the tailored blouse with its simple rever collar and patch pockets is a classic. And the drawstring neckline and big-sleeved blouse bids fair to rival that old Vionnet model that everyone used to wear. Really, if a woman has these two blouses, she has taken care of that part of her wardrobe. Here they are—both in one pattern envelope. Both are easy to make, for they have been kept just as simpe as classics should be. Linen, cotton or plain silk is suggested. The pattern is cut in sizes 14 to 20, 32 to 38.

Suffering From Stones Reduced By Diet Rich in Vitamin A

Formation of Mineral Deposits Found Far Less Common When Dairy Products Are Consumed; Prolonged Rest Is a Factor.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

MANY of us can recall the momentous day when grandfather was operated on for stone in the bladder; or perhaps the occasion when a neighbor returned from a sojourn in the great hospital in the city and proudly displayed a stone nearly as large as a hen's egg.

Stones in various parts of the body are not as common as they were, except in the case of gallstones. Occasionally, however, stones form in the bladder, the kidneys, the salivary glands or ducts, and the intestine.

Many of our most eminent characters suffered for years with stones in the bladder. Among these may be mentioned Chief Justice Marshall, Benjamin Franklin, and the great English physician Sydenham. Toward the close of his life Franklin said that he suffered from three incurable diseases—stones in the bladder, gout and old age.

In England in the eighteenth century there were so many cases of bladder stone that in 1739 Parliament was persuaded to purchase from Joanna Stevens a remedy which she claimed would dissolve calculi of all sorts. Parliament paid to Mrs. Stevens the sum of $25,000, and her recipe, which was published in the London Gazette in that year, was shown to consist of a mixture of eggshells, garden snails, swine's cresses, soap, burdock seeds, hips (fruit of the dogrose), and haws (fruit of the hawthorn). Remedies well nigh as ridiculous are probably available today.

Within recent years much attention has been given to the factors causing the formation of these deposits of mineral matter, and it has been found that if dairy products form a large part of the diet, stones are far less common than when the daily food intake is high in cereals, especially rice. From this observation and from studies on experimental animals the conclusion has been reached that a generous supply of vitamin A (found in greens, carrots and milk) will have a tendency a prevent the deposit of mineral matter.

These experiments apparently confirm the findings of physicians in many parts of India and Burma, where bladder stones of huge size are found even in very young children. In these localities the mothers live on a markedly deficient vitamin diet and their children are in consequence deprived of these needed food substances.

Many authorities believe that whenever there is a deficiency of vitamin A, changes in the lining cells of the urinary tract occur and upset the normal concentration of urine. They conclude that vitamin starvation acting primarily upon the thin cellular lining deranges the type of secretion and forces the urine to throw out of solution certain calcium salts.

It is well known also that stones may form as the result of prolonged rest in bed, as for example, in children suffering from tuberculosis of the spine and in individuals who are compelled to remain in a recumbent position because of the slow healing of fractures. Most of these stones are found in the kidney and are probably due to a change in the chemistry of the urine, resulting in a deposit of calcium salts. With the patient flat on his back the kidneys drain poorly.

Because of better understanding of the importance of vitamins the diet of most people contains a very much larger amount of vitamin A than formerly. We are eating more vegetables and drinking more milk. Prevention of stones rests with a proper diet or a diet reinforced with cod liver oil or viosterol.

Best Formula For Preparing Bacon Offered

Cook Slowly and Turn It Frequently; Temperature Should Be Moderate.

By Dorothea Duncan.

ALL THOSE who advocate bacon for breakfast should listen to the advice on bacon cookery propounded by the Bureau of Home Economics of the United States Department of Agriculture. It seems that contrary to the belief of most persons, there is a right and wrong way of cooking this breakfast delicacy. One reader has asked for the information, so here it is for everyone to read.

The bacon should be first laid in a cold or moderately warm frying pan, or if a broiler is being used, the heat should be moderate but never hot. The bacon should be cooked slowly and turned frequently during the cooking. When the bacon is nicely browned it should be removed to a sheet of absorbent paper to drain.

It is just as simple to cook bacon the right as the wrong way, and certainly the results are far more satisfactory. You know what a too high temperature will do to fat of any kind. The fat begins to smoke and to decompose also. This is just what happens to the fat in your bacon when it is cooked at too high a temperature. The result is a disagreeable flavor for your breakfast dish. Then, too, the dripping which should be saved for further cooking purposes will be spoiled for the burned flavor will penetrate anything it may contact.

Other Questions Follow.

Question—Somewhere I have tasted a sherbet that seemed to be made of several fruit flavors, probably orange, lemon and banana. If you have a recipe for this type of dessert, will you please print it?

Answer—This sherbet that you mention is sometimes called three of a kind or four fruit sherbet depending upon the number of fruits used in the mixture. The recipe for four fruit sherbet follows:

Four Fruit Sherbet.

4 cups sugar
4 cups water
1 2-3 cups orange juice
1 cup lemon juice
½ teaspoon salt
4 bananas, mashed
6 maraschino cherries, finely cut
1 egg white, slightly beaten.

Cook sugar and water together 5 minutes. Cool. Add fruit juices and salt, then bananas, mashed with a silver fork. Let stand 1 hour. Rub through coarse sieve. Add cherries and egg white. Freeze and pack by the following directions. Makes three quarts of sherbet.

Freeze, using 8 parts ice to 1 of salt. When hard to turn, clear away ice from top of freezer. Remove dasher. Pack sherbet solidly into can, cover with waxed paper, adjust lid and fit cork into hole at top to keep out brine. Repack freezer, using 4 parts ice to 1 part salt. Let stand until ready to serve, draining and repacking if necessary.

Question—What does the French term chapon mean?

Answer—Chapon is one of the many terms used in salad making. It is made by removing a small piece from the end of a French loaf and rubbing with a clove of garlic which has first been dipped in salt. The chapon is sometimes placed in the bottom of a salad bowl before arranging the salad. It is most frequently used in a vegetable salad because it gives an agreeable additional flavor.

Following is a recipe for French meringues which has been requested.

French Meringues.

2 cups sugar
5 egg whites
1 cup water
1 teaspoon vanilla

Boil sugar and water until mixture forms a firm ball when tried in cold water. Beat egg whites until stiff and add the hot sirup gradually, while beating constantly. Set pan containing mixture in pan of ice water, add flavoring and stir 5 minutes. Cover and let stand 15 minutes. Shape with spoon or pastry bag and tube on buttered cooky sheet, dredged with cornstarch. Bake 30 minutes in a slow oven (300 degrees F.).

CULBERTSON on BRIDGE

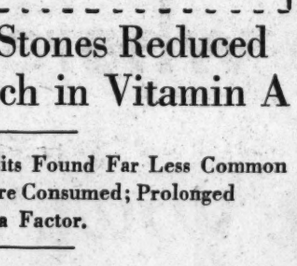
ALWAYS A WAY.

A very unusual forced lead play was made by South in today's deal. South brilliantly made this play as his only hope of fulfilling the contract as he knew from the bidding a simple play for a break in one of the suits was doomed to failure. Like all resourceful dummy players, South did not concede defeat, but looked about for another plan. He hit upon one and it worked out.

South, Dealer
North and South vulnerable



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♡	2♣	2♡(1)	2♠
2NT(2)	3♣	3♡	3♠
Dbl.	4♣	4♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

The Play.

West opened the club Queen which was won with the King in dummy. South could see one sure diamond loser and three possible spade losers unless that suit broke three and two. From the bidding he figured the spades were divided 5-0 or at best 4-1. Therefore, some plan to avoid the loss of three spades had to be found. There was one possibility and South played for it. He first took out the three outstanding trumps; then played the Ace of clubs and a low one. West topped the latter and declarer did not trump from dummy but threw off the low daimond. When East showed out of clubs, South felt better.

West was "on the spot" for a lead. Another round of clubs would certainly be trumped by South and a losing spade discarded from dummy. West, therefore, had to shift to diamonds. He did not know who held the king and might have underled the Ace hoping declarer with the King would trump in dummy. A low diamond lead would gain nothing as declarer would duck that trick as a safety play.

Actually, the Ace of diamonds was led and trumped in dummy. Declarer reentered his own hand with the spade Ace, cashed his diamond King and discarded a spade from dummy. Two spade tricks were conceded and declarer made the rest, thus fulfilling his contract.

THREE MEN AND DIANA

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

Diana Carmichael was desperately poor as a child, always conscious that she did not have the things other girls had. She found happiness in loving wealthy Bruce Palmer but he thought of her only as a friend and left her to go abroad to live. She married Neal Tressady, a moving picture actor, who later left her, eloping with Deidre Dean, screen star. Diana married Bruce secretly and continued living with her father. A newspaper carries a story about a minister who has been discovered to be an imposter; they think perhaps it was the same one who married them.

SUDDENLY, on an impulse, Bruce telephoned the rector at St. Jerome's. Dr. Graham? This was Mr. Palmer speaking. Could Dr. Graham give Mr. Palmer any information about the Rev. Robin Purcell?

A pause. A dignified yet embarassed shred of a cough. Hem! Dr. Graham would be glad to see Mr.—Mr. Palmer in reference to—to the gentleman he mentioned. A very unfortunate affair—hem! The gentleman had been at St. Jerome's for a very short while—hem! Could Mr. Palmer find it convenient to stop in—say tomorrow——

Bruce restored the telephone to its hook and faced Diana with a half - alarmed, half - mischievous smile.

"Well, what do you know about that?"

"Very little!" Diana said, her expression between laughter and tears.

"I'll see him in the morning. And if there's anything cuckoo I'll see Pete Reynolds—that's Dad's lawyer. We'll fix it all up."

Eager for News.

The next morning, as fresh and radiant as a fresh pink rose, she cooked his breakfast, and they shared the grapefruit, the coffee, the toast and the eggs.

"I'll telephone you what old Graham says," Bruce said.

"All right. Don't see your father's lawyer unless you have to. The more people who know the more danger we're in."

At noon Bruce came up for a moment, and they stood together, talking in the deserted office. This rarely happened now; since September the girls in the sporting goods department had had every reason to believe that young Mr. Palmer's fancy for Diana Tressady had cooled.

"Old Graham was awfully nice, Di. He said this fellow Purcell comes from a decent family and did well in college—only kind of excitable and hysterical. He had some letters from friends of the Grahams. Graham suggested that he go down and visit his family at Carmel, after he first got here, and they liked him. They all thought he was a young clergyman, and after they came back Graham suggested that he stay on at the clergy house and take some of the curate work. And then the whole thing blew up suddenly."

He Wasn't Ordained.

"You mean he's not a clergyman?"

"He only had one year at the seminary."

"Then, darling, we're not married?" It was a pale face she turned to him; her smile was strained.

"I don't know. It may be absolutely valid, Dr. Graham says. We had a license and we had a witness, you know. I'm going to see Pete Reynolds, anyway."

"How many persons do you suppose Purcell married?"

"Graham said only us, at St. Jerome's. He was surprised to hear that he'd married any one. They could jail him for it."

"That wouldn't do us any good."

The next day, Sunday, she dressed herself in her best and drove the 20 miles to the Burlingame polo field alone. She expected a look of pleasure in Bruce's eyes when he met her, and he did not disappoint her.

"Darling, you look simply stunning!"

"What did the lawyer—Reynolds, is it—what did he say yesterday?"

Stunned by News.

"Oh, it's a mix up. Of course," Bruce said, driving to a popular roadside restaurant now—"of course, being a lawyer, he had to haw and hem a lot."

"Was he surprised about our being married?"

"Stunned. He said it would crush my father."

"Oh-h-h," Di said dolefully.

"Did you happen to ask him—did you happen to—if he thought the marriage was all right?"

"Yep, I did. I asked if getting the license wasn't a sort of guarantee of good faith and all that. Here, Di, this is a swell place—Bandini's. We'll get spaghetti here. Yep, I asked him what he thought would happen, and he said that it was his impression that it wasn't a marriage. Here we are."

Boxes Were Crowded.

They went into the crowded place of sparkling windows, red-checked tables, smoke from grease and cigarettes. The food smelled suddenly welcome to Diana, and she fell upon it with a relish that was a secret delight to her.

But later, sitting alone in the grandstand and watching the polo in the crisp winter sunlight she did not feel so well. Her head ached faintly and her hands and feet felt cold. She began to be very much afraid that she would be sick.

In the boxes a few rows of seats below her were the Bayhead groups. The Newbegins and the Porters and the Stuarts and Bruce's sister, Diana, was not more than 10 feet from Joan, very pretty and dignified in lovely sports wear that still smacked of the trousseau.

Joan Cut Her.

Presently, Joan turned and looked searchingly along the rows of spectators seated immediately behind her. Did she see Diana? Diana thought she did and smiled as she said aloud "Hello, Joan!" but Joan did not smile in return. Her color rose a little and she raised her chin and turned back without any sign of recognition.

For a moment Diana was sure Joan had not seen her. Then there came a miserable suspicion that she had—that for some reason Joan was cutting her. Did the girl know that she and Bruce were spending a good deal of time in each other's company?"

No, of course not, why should they? But there was no question that Minna and Patsy and then Con, all managed to glance carelessly backward, during the next ten minutes, pretending to look for someone much higher up in the grandstand, bringing their eyes down carelessly, giving Diana an instant's glance.

Everything Was Wrong.

Her face burned. They knew. Or if they did not know that she and Bruce were actual lovers they knew something; knew that the reason that he so often had evening engagements "at the club" or had to "see a man on business tomorrow," was really because he wanted to be with Diana Tressady.

She would go home, she thought, right in the middle of the polo game, but for the hope that she might see Bruce for a moment afterward.

He had to dine with the Rowleys tonight; it was Mr. and Mrs. Rowley's silver wedding anniversary, a very important occasion, and there would be fifty dinner guests.

"I wanted to toast the third generation," Bruce had said to Diana, "but Joan got shy. She doesn't want anyone to know."

"Oh, are there expectations?" And once again the old pang of deep jealousy of Joan, who did everything with such dignity and beauty and was always so admired for it.

"I believe so. They say the McAdies are wild with joy. Patsy gave me a pretty strong hint of it, anyway. But Joan thinks it's too soon to talk."

Thinking of this, Diana studied Joan with especial interest today. She was not jealous of the coming of a baby; Diana had never thought of herself as noticeably fond of babies.

But she did long for some of the praise, the order, that seemed to be Joan's by divine right. The McAdies were wild with joy; Joan's whole circle would be waiting to welcome the newcomer, to make him presents of silver mugs and white coaches and delicately colored knitted baby wear.

Bruce Rode Well.

Whereas, if any one prospect could throw consternation into her life and Bruce's at this particular moment, it would be that same event.

After a while the sun went suddenly behind a black spring cloud and a cold wind blew across the grandstand, died away again. The polo sticks clicked; the riders shouted as the battle surged to and fro. Now they were down at the far goal, now swaying without change of position close to the side lines; now whirling madly up the field.

"Palmer's doing wonderfully today—he's riding Preston Harris's horses. He's a wonder. He played at Harvard," a voice said close behind her, and Diana felt proud.

Puritan Stock In U.S. Studied By Educator

Reports Larger Number of Descendants Would Cut Relief Demands 50%.

IF THERE were a larger number of Puritan descendants in the United States today the demands on public relief would be about 50 per cent less than they are now. Furthermore, there would be ten times as many distinguished persons and at least 30 per cent more farmers would be likely to own their own homes.

These are among the findings of Prof. Ellsworth Huntington, of Yale, who has made a detailed study of the characteristics of our population. He has done a large amount of research dealing with the Puritans and their descendants, assisted by Martha Ragsdale.

Prof. Huntington is convinced that the present-day descendants of the Puritans, preserving the general characteristics of their ancestors, are usually above the average in achievement.

If the bulk of the United States' population were made up of these Puritan descendants there would be a large number of blonde and blue-eyed persons in the Nation today, Prof Huntington reports. More persons would live an urban life, but their homes would be in the suburbs rather than in the cities themselves.

Doctors, writers, engineers and professors would be from five to nine times as numerous as they are today. Professional men in general would be four times as numerous and business executives would be doubled in number. There would be 50 per cent more clerks, but the number of skilled laborers would be about the same as now.

Farms would be larger and the work would be performed on a more intelligent scale.

On the Air Today

By Katherine Smith.

"WHAT do you think of the traffic situation?"

"Lousy!"

"What do you think is the matter?"

"Too many women drivers—and I'm 30 years too old to hop out of the way of speeding autos."

So it went yesterday morning on WJSV at 10:30 when Bill Bivens interviewed the Man in the Street. John Doe appeared, said his say; a girl taxi driver offered helpful suggestions, and Announcer Bivens got a pretty good cross section of perambulating Washington public.

Two more of these impromptu broadcasts are scheduled for Wednesday and Friday. Tune in on the Men in the Street. You might hear someone you know.

These traffic broadcasts fill in the time originally scheduled for "Blue Melody and Black Philosophy," which feature will start next week.

Change on the age limit of the amateur contestants for Art Godfrey's show. They must be at least 18 years old.

Here's a program WJSV doesn't want you to listen to. Next Wednesday at 12:45 they'll present a "Comedy of Errors" in which they'll attempt to squeeze all the mistakes of 1934 into one small 15 minute space. You'll hear lost lines, switches thrown at the wrong time, the program will probably start three minutes too late and run five minutes overtime.

Please don't listen in.

Harold Veo, conductor and producer, has been added to the collection of musicians under Sidney's management. He'll take part on Sidney's radio programs.

The Newspaper Women's Club take the air today on WRC 6:15, when, with the help of Radio Joe, they'll tell you about the glamourous features, of the ball they're planning for Saturday.

Compromise On Sales Tax To Be Pushed

Extra Session Talked as Houses Meet in Deadlock.

Gross Sale Levy Seen as Possible Way to Raise Funds.

By Francis O. White, Jr.
A Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Md., March 25.—With the tangle over a financial program for relief apparently as far from solution as ever, the Maryland General Assembly reconvened tonight for the last week of its 90-day session with such a jam of legislation demanding attention that talk of the possibility of an extra session was heard about legislation corridors.

On the relief issue Gov. Harry W. Nice made a final statement, wiping his hands of all responsibility for the Assembly's failure to adopt the general sales tax proposal, regarded by him as the logical means of solving the problem, and asserting that he may have no other alternative but to approve such measures as are enacted, even though they might be discriminatory and class legislation.

It was said in well informed circles that a majority of the senators stood ready to reconsider the vote by which the unfavorable committee report was adopted in the early hours of Sunday morning, and to review the question anew. Another report was that Democratic leaders in the Senate would present a compromise measure, designed to bring about general agreement in both houses of the Assembly.

At a late hour, however, no new angle had developed. In the meantime both the Senate and House received a number of committee reports on other bills, and also prepared to tackle measures on the third reading file.

Bills of Gov. Nice Held Up in Tangle

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., March 25.—The House has killed a 5 per cent domestic telephone, gas and electric light tax, with a 1 per cent rate on industrial power, part of the Senate's composite plan for raising relief revenue. It has before it bills passed by the Senate, placing a 10 per cent tax on patent medicines, cosmetics and toilet articles, and a 5 cent tax a gallon floor tax on distilled spirits, sold out of Maryland, all earmarked for relief. Another Senate relief measure, the 2 cent a gallon beer tax, is up for final Senate passage.

May Reconsider Sales Tax.

The Senate on its part has killed the 2 per cent general retail sales tax measure, earmarked for relief, and passed by the House. Neither the House or Senate put a legislative clincher on either the utility tax bill or the sales tax, even though the votes were available to do so. Such a clincher would have disposed of the bills definitely, as nothing with the same subject matter could have been brought up during the session.

Failure of the House and Senate leaders to dispose definitely of the bills gives an opportunity for compromise. It is considered likely that the first pressure will be brought to bear in the Senate to have that body reconsider its vote on the sales tax and pass that measure. If this fails some compromise will have to be worked out.

Among Gov. Nice's bills which are resting in committee are the following:

Creating a three-member parole commission.
Creating a three-member conservation commission.
Adding four members to the State Board of Education.
Creating a five-member State industrial accident commission.
Setting up unemployment insurance.
Establishing an old age pension system.
Creating a State engineering department.
Allowing the Governor to appoint a three-member commission to investigate the State government, departments and commissions.

A one and one-half cent gross sales tax may prove the vehicle to end the deadlock. During the debate in the Senate early yesterday, amendments to the House bill changing it into such a levy were prepared and ready for introduction. If the 2 per cent general sales tax proponents had been successful in their move to set aside the unfavorable report of the Senate Finance Committee, the amendments would have been offered from the floor.

The budget, carrying appropriations for increasing the commissioners and $50,000 for the "inquiry" into the State government will seriously affect the fate of these measures.

Although the Governor has the money for the "inquiry," he will lack authority to appoint the commission unless the Legislature passes the necessary law.

If a fight over relief develops, it is entirely probable that all or many of these measures, may be caught somewhere in the legislative mill, when the session adjourns.

Although 1,104 bills have been introduced in the Legislature only a few hundred have been passed and the majority of local measures are still in committee, or else are passing through the House and Senate machinery. Anything that blocks the smooth running of the from the motor vehicle commissioner; and giving tax relief to race tracks are up for final passage in the House.

The race track measure providing taxes on the basis of money earned and bet last season, will reduce the revenue of the State from $882,110.80 in 1934 to $781,082.95 this year, a loss of $101,027.85.

Panhandle's Power Rates Are Reduced

Lowered Schedule for Eastern Section of West Virginia.

Slash Ranges From 2 to 17 Pct. Under Revised Scale.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 25.—A schedule of new and reduced electric power rates for all of the territory in the Eastern Panhandle of West Virginia has been filed with the Public Service Commission in Charleston by the Potomac Light & Power Co. The rates will be applicable to bills for the current month.

The reductions range from approximately 17 per cent to consumers of kilowatt hours per month down to 2 per cent for those who consume the great amounts.

Members of the commission said the filing of the new rate schedule would have no effect on their investigation of the Potomac's affairs now in progress.

The new schedule affects all communities east of Piedmont, Mineral County.

All power companies operating in that territory were recently marged with the Potomac, with the single exception of the Northern Virginia Power Co., whose West Virginia properties are operated by the Potomac under an operating agreement.

Commission officials quoted a statement of the company estimating the saving to consumers over the entire system as about $70,000, and represent an average reduction of approximately 13½ per cent in the present income of the company.

The new rates are applicable in Martinsburg, Keyser, Charles Town, Piedmont, Ranson, Berkeley Springs, Shepherdstown, Romney, Moorefield, Ridgely and Petersburg and rural communities in the Eastern Panhandle.

In Martinsburg and Keyser the new rate fixes the top step at 6.5 per kilowatt hour, as against a present rate of 7.6 per kilowatt hour, and in some cases 8. In other and smaller cities and towns the top step under the new rate is 7 cents, as against present rates varying from 9.1 cents to 10 cents net. The new rates are to remain in effect pending the completion of the commission's investigation initiated some time ago on its own motion.

Writer Terms Peasants Half Of Virginia White Population

Dr. Garnett, of V. P. I., Estimates 550,000 of Caucasian Race and 325,000 Negroes in that Class on Basis of Income, Education, Living Conditions.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., March 25.—Approximately half of the white population of Virginia has the economic status of peasants and of these persons thousands may be classed as submarginal, according to Dr. W. E. Garnett, of Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

Writing in the current issue of The Virginia Journal of Education, Dr. Garnett declares the cultural level of the State is depressed by this marginal population, now estimated at 550,000 white persons and 325,000 Negroes.

He classes as marginal those persons whose gross annual income is less than $600 in normal times, who have less than a fifth grade education, who have poor housing and other living conditions and who pay little or no taxes.

Of the 550,000 white persons falling in this group, he says, 150,000 are poor mountain people, 118,000 white tenants, 164,000 white hired laborers, and 118,000 white marginal farm owners and marginal nonfarm rural people not included in the other groups. There are probably 250,000 children among these families, the writer says.

Dr. Garnett asserts that these people account for Virginia's ranking of thirty-sixth among the States in per capita wealth, thirty-ninth in per capita income, forty-fourth in "significant educational conditions," and thirty-second in gross income per $1,000 of farm property investment.

Public Hearing On Budget Set At Leesburg, Va.

10 Cent Increase in Rates of Tax Proposed to Wipe Out Deficit.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leesburg, Va., March 25.—A public hearing on the proposed budget for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1935, will be held Wednesday at 10 a. m. in the courthouse at Leesburg, when the Board of Supervisors will present the estimated expenditures for the year.

A 10-cent increase on the $100 assessed valuation of property has been proposed. This will bring the levy to 90 cents. This increase was deemed necessary after Clerk E. O. Russell read at the last meeting the estimated expenditures for the coming year. These, it was brought out, will include $53,000 for the general county fund; an appropriation of $82,500 for the schools, and an estimated deficit of $17,500 for this year, making a total of $150,000 needed to balance the budget. The estimated assessment for the year will amount to $14,500,000.

However, the school board in its budget asks an appropriation of $112,000, an increase of $29,500 over last year's appropriation. How the supervisors will meet this demand has not been ascertained. The largest portion of this increase would go toward restoration of 10 per cent of the teachers' salary reduction. It is understood that some of the supervisors are favorable to this increase in teachers' pay.

A 20-cent increase in the tax rate, bringing the levy to $1 on the $100 assessed valuation of property would meet the amount sought by the school board, it is said, and also wipe out the estimated deficit for this year.

Farmers Urge Federal Paying Of Grading Cost

Provision in Agricultural Appropriations Bill Is Suggested.

By the Associated Press.

J. H. Meek, director of Vrginia agricultural markets, asked yesterday that the Government pay the administrative cost of Federal-State grading.

Meek urged the agricultural subcommittee of the Senate Appropriations Committee to insert such a provision in the agricultural appropriations bill.

The grading law applies to fruits, vegetables, dairy and poultry products, tobacco and meats, and Meek estimated that assumption of administrative expenses would cost the Government $100,000 annually.

Producers and States would continue to bear the principal expense of grading, but would be relieved from paying the cost of the administrative force in Washington and supervision within the States.

Meek said he had indorsements of his proposal from the marketing bureaus of Connecticut, Delaware, Georgia, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Tennessee, Texas and Vermont.

Farm Hand Named In Shooting Case

Victim's Adopted Son Still Held in Jail.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chestertown, Md., March 25.—With the condition of Norman Wyatt still unchanged in Easton Hospital, and James Stewart, his adopted son, in jail here suspected of wounding him with a shotgun, Sheriff John N. Bennett said today following investigation at Massey and Millington: "We are pretty sure only one person is connected with the shooting."

The farm hand Stewart implicated has not been arrested. He stated in jail today that the man offered him $5 to get the gun from the hay loft and that the man fired the shot.

The latter has presented an alibi and said he attended a dance late Saturday night and knew nothing about the affair until his return to the Wyatt farm Sunday morning. Hospital physicians say Wyatt's condition is serious.

$1,800,000 Sought For New Armories

Public Works Funds Asked by Virginia.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Richmond, Va., March 25.—Virginia communities will receive approximately $1,800,000 in public works allotments for armory construction if proposals now before President Roosevelt and his advisers are approved, it was learned today from Brig. Gen. Samuel Gardner Waller, the adjutant general.

Allotments are proposed for those cities and towns with inadequate housing for their military units on the basis of $60,000 per unit.

Among the communities for which allotments may be recommended are Winchester, Roanoke, Harrisonburg, Berryville. Two of Five Suits In Crashes Settled

$3,000 Paid by Son of Bank President in Virginia.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Va., March 25.—Two of five suits totaling $40,000 against Oscar Elwood Cohron, 18, son of O. L. Cohron, Stuarts Draft Bank president, as the result of two automobile accidents in which one man was killed and ten persons injured, have been settled.

Suit for $10,000 brought by the Francis E. Campbell estate has been settled out of court for $1,000, it was learned today from William F. Coyner, jr., administrator. The litigation grew out of an accident on the Jefferson Highway 4 miles west of here October 20, 1934, when an automobile driven by Cohron struck and killed Campbell, an aged toll-gate keeper. Cohron was arrested and sent to the grand jury in a preliminary hearing before Trial Justice W. Terrell Sheehan, but that body refused to return an indictment.

The second settlement was made last week when an Augusta circuit court jury awarded $2,000 damages to Miss Frances Blakemore, Staunton, for injuries received while riding as a passenger in a machine driven by Cohron on the night of July 1, 1934. This accident, in which ten young people were injured, occurred just a few yards from where Campbell met his death.

State Urged To Retain Its Road Policies

2 Va. Assemblymen Urge Present Program Be Continued.

Allocations Based on Mileage Rather Than Money Proposed.

By the Associated Press.

Culpeper, Va., March 25.—Two members of the General Assembly today appeared before the legislative study commission on road policies advocating a "let alone" policy, while Victor Von Gemmigen, town manager of Culpeper, proposed a change basing the allocations on mileage rather than money.

Senator William A. Wright, of Tappahannock, told the commission he thought the highway department was getting along "very well" under present policies, and urged they be continued with no change in the gas tax. A similar suggestion was made by Delegate C. C. Louderback, of Page.

"Into the Mud."

Senator T. Russell Cather, of Clarke, told the commission something should be done about the 4½-mile stretch of road west of Winchester to the West Virginia line.

Under agreement with Virginia, he said, West Virginia has built its share of the road to the Virginia line, and tourists taking the round trip drop over the Virginia line "into the mud."

500 Attend Meeting.

A crowd of 500 attended the meeting, over which Chairman W. O. Rogers, of Waverly, presided. State Highway Commissioner Henry G. Shirley was at the meeting but made no comment.

The commission was appointed to consider whether changes in the highway department's policies were advisable, and whether more of the secondary system should be taken into the primary system.

The meeting was the second of a series of public hearings planned by the commission before drafting its report to the next General Assembly. Other meetings are to be held in Lynchburg and Wytheville. The first was held at Newport News. The Culpeper meeting was for the Culpeper and Fredericksburg construction districts.

Numerous construction projects were proposed, including a bridge across the Rappahannock at Grays Point, asked by Representative Seegar, of Saluda.

Burnett Miller, of Culpeper, asked for improvement of the route from Culpeper to Boston and from Boston to Slate Mills. He said the increase in traffic occasioned by the Shenandoah Park made this necessary. He asked further for maintenance of the road to the Hoover camp.

Residents of Madison, Greene, Albemarle, Orange and Louisa counties requested a hard-surfaced road from North Garden to Crozet through the fruit belt. The project would include a bridge over the Rapidan.

Tomorrow the commission will go on a tour of inspection over the roads in the two districts.

Catcher Redmond Is New Sensation of Nats' Training Camp

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich

Biloxi, Miss., March 25.

CLARK GRIFFITH, who happens to own the Washington Ball Club, took a seat in the grandstand at Mobile where the Nats were playing the Kansas City Club. It was during batting practice, a half-hour before game time and Griff represented a good tenth of the fans in the park. Presently a candy butcher, a seedy individual of at least 50, sauntered by, struck up a conversation with the silver-haired president of the Washington Club.

POVICH.

"See that fellow at bat now "He's a star," began the candy butcher by way of introducing himself.

Griffith arched his bushy brows and smothered a smile with his hands. "Izzatso?" he asked. "Who is that batting?"

"Why," came the reply. "That's Manush—Mac Manush. He's a great hitter. Been with the club for years. They got him from the White Sox in a trade for old Stanley Coveleskie."

"Who are those other fellows, the ones up there by the batting cage?" Griffith asked in an attempt to draw the fellow out.

His new-found friend was quick on the trigger. "See that fellah leaning on the bat? He don't play any more. That's Stanley Harris, one of the greatest shortstops of all time. He was with the club when Walter Johnson was winning pennants back in 1922 and 1923. Griffith made him manager this year."

"HOW about that fellow hitting now? He looks good to me," ventured Griffith.

"Naw, those fellows fool ya. Been following baseball all my life and can spot a ball player the minute he sets foot on the ground. That's Joe Bluejay. He can hit like a fool but can't field. There's plenty of guys like him in the minors. Can pound that old apple but couldn't catch a pop fly with a bushel basket.

"And see that big kid goin' up there now? That's Travis—Bill Travis. They're going to make him a regular. He didn't cost Griffith a penny, either. If he ever learns to hit he'll be a wow. I allus said it."

Griffith looked at his watch. He was already late for an engagement with Billy Smith, club secretary, but he hadn't had such fun since the day Tom Yawkey handed over that 250 grand for Joe Cronin. He encouraged the fellow.

"THAT looks like a good pitcher out there, who is he?" queried Griffith.

"I'll say he is. That's Whitehill—Frank Whitehill, one of the best in the league. They got him from the Baltimore Orioles when he was just a kid and made a star out of him. He won three games all by himself in the World Series against the Giants a coupla years ago, besides hitting a coupla home runs. I knew Frank when I worked in Baltimore."

"They got good pitchers, eh?"

"'S a funny thing. Washington always has good pitchers. Take last year when they finished fourth. Great pitching but the team couldn't hit a lick except for fellows like Manush and Bluejay and Luke Sewell. Luke's an Alabama boy, ya know. If it wasn't for him, Washington wouldn't have no catching staff."

"Izzatso?" was Griffith's snappy comeback.

"Yeah. When Eddie Ainsmith started to slip, Sewell went right in there and made good. Just out of college, too. Griffith was telling me last year that Luke was every bit as good a catcher as Ainsmith."

"HOW about this fellow Harris, the manager? Smart, I suppose?"

"Well, Griffith didn't think so when he let him go to Detroit a few years back. Then when he started winning pennants for the Tigers, Griff changed his mind, I guess. Anyway, he brought him back a couple of years ago in a three-cornered deal that sent Mickey Cochrane to Detroit and Jimmy Dykes to Philadelphia."

"They got any good looking rookies?" Griff wanted to know.

"Naw, nothing much outside of this Bluejay, except for a coupla pitchers. That Fred Stewart they say will be a comer with a little more experience, and, of course, they expect great things from Monte Weaver who they got in a trade with the Yankees, but you can't never tell about these young fellows."

The ball game was about to start and Griff rose to rejoin his party in a field box. But he couldn't resist one more question.

"By the way? Who owns this Washington club?"

"Man, didn't you ever hear of him? Clark Griffin. A great outfielder in his day. He had to quit the game because Rube Waddell beaned him. Badly hurt, too, but you'd never know it to talk to him."

Griff said, well, he guess he thought he'd be going along now.

Managers Training in Florida Pick Giants and Yanks to Win

By Jimmy Powers.

A Special Correspondent.

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., March 25.—The New York Giants—1935 world champions!

The New York Yankees—1935 world champions!

The flag maker can take this order immediately, for of all cities in the major leagues, New York rates the best chance of copping either one or both pennants, your traveling spy of the citrus belt discovered.

A poll of the majority of the baseball managers whose teams now are training in Florida—and this impressive list includes Rogers Hornsby, Mickey Cochrane, Bill Terry, Casey Stengel, Jimmy Wilson, Joe McCarthy, Bill McKechnie, Frank Frisch, Connie Mack and Charlie Dressen—gives the New York National and American League entries the majority of votes.

Hornsby, Cochrane, McKechnie, McCarthy, Stengel and Mack, for example, think the Giants will win. Bill Terry, of course, adds his vote to this.

Wilson, Dressen, Stengel, Frisch and McCarthy are chief among those who balloted for the Yanks to win. Joe McCarthy, of course, says this is jake with him.

The Giants lost out in the National League race by two games last year, but the Yankees trailed by a much wider margin and have much more ground to make up. The loss of Babe Ruth, according to McCarthy, will "make" the Yanks.

"I don't want to seem ungrateful. We all appreciate what Babe has done for baseball, but we feel that he did not fit into our machine," said McCarthy in a training camp session at St. Pete the other day. "George Selkirk, more than any other individual, will help our club climb in the percentage tables. He's fast, he's a right-handed thrower, although I prefer left-handers for right field because they can make throws to second or third base without a pivot. George has a fine arm, however, and he weighs 182, which means he can stand up under a hard campaign. He's a ball hawk and can charge in for low ones or race back and pull down the heavy shots.

"If you weaken an outfield in one position you weaken the defensive strength of your team almost 33 per cent. If a ball gets through your infield it is not so bad as the outer patrol backs up the play, but when a ball gets through your outfield it means a defeat."

McCarthy believes the Tigers can not have the same luck they had in 1934. He does not want to take anything away from Cochrane, he says, but he points out that everything broke just right for the Detroiters.

"They had no big slump. Their weak hitters came through in the pinches. They had no injuries to speak of, while every rival in the league had one or more major replacements to make. It is just not in the cards for this to happen again."

And now we switch to the National League.

Bill Terry talks in the same vein. "We were the best club in the league all summer," he declared today. "We were the worst in the last two weeks. How convenient that was for the Cards. I don't think the Deans can repeat. Only a miraculous performance on their part enabled the team to nose us out by a whisker. They have lost Tex Carleton and I think they are going to feel it. My staff is better balanced. My infield is stronger. I have a far better defensive club and I think that will tell in the stretch this summer. It will be the Deans' turn to wobble under the pressure.

"Winning a pennant often blinds a club to its faults. If I had won the pennant last year, I would have hesitated making changes that were necessary. Instead, I traded off Watkins, Vergez, Ryan, Bowman and put on strength. If I had won the pennant in 1934 and made no change, I would have probably slumped to fifth place in '35."

Harris Hails Confident Rookie

Likens Nats' Youngster to Mickey Cochrane, Peppy, Serious.

Told He Can Pound Ball Despite .212 Average Last Season.

By Shirley L. Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

BILOXI, Miss., March 25.—Solidly in the race for the No. 1 catching berth on the Washington club is a chap named Jack Redmond, who three weeks ago bulked no larger in Manager Bucky Harris' plans for the 1935 pennant race than did the British-French-Italian tripartite party, whatever that is.

Today, however, young Mr. Redmond is causing a general arching of eyebrows in the Nats' camp, to say nothing of gaping mouths as he conducts himself on the ball field with considerable dash, verve and what we call elan in our set. Mr. Harris is tumbling over himself in his enthusiasm for the kid from Birmingham whose .212 batting average of last year apparently is one of life's little mysteries.

Was Third at Start.

Redmond was running a distinct third to Cliff Bolton and Sammy Holbrook when Harris began to take inventory of his catching talent down here, but he is fast closing ground and by the time the Nats reach Washington, a week before the pennant race starts, who can tell?

The catching situation with the Nats in spring training has reached its third stage. At the outset, it appeared that Cliff Bolton's No. 1 rating was a foregone conclusion. That he could hit, there was no doubt, and his work last season stamped him as a steady catcher. With his new-found ability to snare pop fouls, Harris regarded him as having finally arrived.

Then Sammy Holbrook began to make his presence felt. The Chattanooga lad, described as the best catching prospect produced by the Southern Association in a decade, began to steal the show from Bolton. The huskiest of the trio, he hit the ball for the longest distances, maintained an inspiring chatter through his mask and manifested a polish rare in rookies. It was he who came to be regarded as a distinct threat to Bolton's status.

Sensation at Camp.

But at this writng, young Redmond is the camp's new sensation. In size, the perfect man between little Bolton and husky Holbrook, Redmond is the most rugged of the lot. Even Holbrook's pep and petulance pales beside the fierce application to purpose of Redmond, who has won recognition as the toughest, roughest hombre in camp.

There is something of the Mickey Cochrane ilk in young Redmond, the same kind of a bundle of fighting fury that the Tigers' catcher personifies. Squatted behind the bat on his haunches, the Birmingham graduate breathes confidence, defiance, balefulness and every other characteristic of the tough guy.

He's forever shaking up pitchers, kidding the hitters and following the ball with a seriousness of purpose that brooks no opposition. On the tricky pop fouls, the bane of every rookie catcher, he has proved himself the superior of both Bolton and Holbrook. He tried to batter down the backstop twice the other day in a game against Albany in an attempt to get at foul pops and, failing in that, he all but demolished the Nats' dugout to make a catch finally.

Troubled With Hands.

Harris eagerly listens when his former Southern Association players try to explain Redmond's anemic batting average for Birmingham last year. He was troubled all season with bad hands that hampered his batting stroke, they tell Harris, but, in condition, he can pound that rock, they say.

And there were indications of that in those two games against Kansas City at Mobile. The two longest wallops of the series were produced by Redmond, who met the ball solidly in both games. There is a general feeling among the Nats' bosses that he will hit and out of respect for his catching he's gonna get a chance to hit in the big leagues.

Wintry blasts from the Gulf that swept the Nats' training field today caused Manager Harris to curtail his workout when the pitchers showed signs of stiffening muscles. With no game scheduled for tomorrow, the Nats meet the Kansas City club here on Wednesday and Thursday before breaking camp for the barnstroming trip North which carries them into Birmingham on Friday.

His newest world record of 276.816 miles per hour, eclipsing his 1933 mark of 272.108 miles per hour, was established on the 11-mile ocean strand at Daytona on March 7.

Sir Malcolm will be singularly honored here tomorrow in that he is the first of 27 record holders in the 32 years history of speed at Daytona ever to receive such an award.

'Gate' Drawback To Virginia Meet

V. M. I. Coach Likes Idea but Cites Expense.

By the Associated Press.

Lexington, Va., March 25.—Although he agrees with those who advocate it that a State-wide track meet would be a "fine thing," Coach "Son" Read, of the Virginia Military Institute Harriers, doubts the feasibility of such a meet "until track can pay its way."

Commenting on the proposal of Frank Dobson, former University of Richmond director of athletics, that a meet, open to all Virginia colleges, be conducted annually in lieu of the "Big Four" show, Coach Read considers "the idea splendid from the theoretical standpoint."

However, he added, "until track can pay its way so that competing teams would not be put to considerable expense or forced to send only a handful of competitors, I do not see any immediate prospect of the open meet."

Trade Winds Link Cards and Braves

By the Associated Press.

Bradentown, Fla., March 25. Rumors of a trade between the St. Louis Cardinals and the Boston Braves were current today. Both Vice President Branch Rickey and Manager Frank Frisch were in St. Petersburg, training site of the Braves.

It was reported Outfielder Ernie Orsatti and Shortstop Charlie Gelbert will be traded for Outfielder Randy Moore and a pitcher.

Peggy Wattles Is Augusta Medalist

5 Birdie, 10 Pars Show on 80-Card in 5th Annual Tourney.

By the Associated Press.

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 25.—Clipping a stroke from standard figures with a fancy exhibition, Miss Peggy Wattles, of Buffalo, today captured medalist honors in the 18-hole qualifying round of the fifth annual Augusta woman's invitational golf tournament.

Miss Wattles' card of 80 for the round showed five birdies and ten pars. She went over regulation figures on only three holes.

Registering totals of 82, Miss Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky., and Mrs. B. A. Whittemore, of Boston, deadlocked for the runner-up position, trailed closely by Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, of Philadelphia, who turned in an 85. Miss Jean Bauer, of Providence, R. I., the defending champion, tied with Miss Maureen Orcutt, of Englewood, N. J., for sixth place, each carding an 86.

Miss Dean Van Landingham, of Charlotte, N. C., toured the course in 87 strokes to enter the match play, while Miss Lilly Harper, of Norfolk, Virginia State champion; Miss Jane Cothran, of Greenville, S. C., and Miss Bernice Wall, of Oshkosh, Wis., advanced through scores of 89.

Elkins, W. Va., March 25.—Headed by college students and high school pupils, Elkins today held a double celebration in honor of the basket ball teams of Davis and Elkins College and Elkins High School, which won championships this year.

The college won the intercollegiate contest at Fairmont Saturday night. The high school had previously won the State high school championship.

Delaware Sunday Games Now Legal

By the Associated Press.

Dover, Del., March 25.—Sunday football and baseball in Delaware are now legal, after about 200 years' existence of a colonial law that prohibited "gaming" on the Sabbath.

Gov. Buck today signed a bill to permit football and baseball on Sunday afternoons after 2 o'clock, except in municipalities that forbid such games by ordinance.

Legalized Boxing, Wrestling Yields $7,483.36 in Virginia

By the Associated Press.

RICHMOND, Va., March 25.—A check by the State auditor of public accounts today showed that though legalized boxing may not have proved a gold mine to promoters, the new Virginia boxing and wrestling act has yielded in revenue a total of $7,483.36 for the State and various localities.

Under provisions of the act, passed by the 1934 General Assembly, one-half of the money collected by the boxing commission is to be apportioned and distributed by the State treasurer to the localities in which contests are held and the licensees are resident. Of the $7,483.36 yielded from July 1 to February 28, $2,494.02 is due the localities.

Bulk of the receipts came from State taxes, which yielded $2,758.11; professional boxing, which yielded $1,290; wrestling, which accounted for $1,060, and club licenses, which brought in $1,525. Amateur boxing, a heavily patronized sport before the legalization of professional fisticuffing, yielded a mere $218.

License fees accounted for most of the balance of the income. Physicians' licenses yielded $50; matchmakers', $25; referees', $240; seconds', $90; managers', $210; timekeepers and judges', $17, and sale of regulations, 25 cents.

The sum of $2,577.93 was expended by the commission. The expenditure of $128.58 for office equipment is an expense that will not have to be borne again for some time. Salaries accounted for $1,069.20; special payments, $697.50; traveling expenses, $198.45; communications, $147.69; printing, $288.04; miscellaneous expenses, $8.02, and office supplies, $40.45.

For the purpose of administering the act, the law provides that a sum of $20,000 annually may be used and that the money remaining is to go into the State's general use. After the localities are paid their share, a balance of $4,989.34 will remain for the State commission.

Amounts due localities:

Town of Onley, $5; City of Richmond, $1,093.62; City of Norfolk, $571.02; town of Kilmarnock, $24.67; City of Roanoke, $237.96; Norfolk County, $60.95; town of Virginia Beach, $66.62; City of Newport News, $129.90; City of Bristol, $129.65; City of Danville, $75.41; City of Lynchburg, $17.05; City of Portsmouth, $40; City of Hampton, $5; City of Hopewell, $10; Northumberland County, $27.17.

Louis Certain He Will Beat Carnera

Says Foe Won't Last Five Rounds; 15,000 Due at Brown Fight.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, March 25.—Joe Louis, the sensational 20-year-old Negro fighter, isn't a bit worried about his first 15-round bout, tentatively set for June 19 in New York with Primo Carnera, former world's heavyweight champion.

"It isn't going to last more than five rounds," the "Brown Bomber" grinned today as he looked at the hands which have blasted him a place among the leading contenders for Max Baer's crown.

Joe has won 17 fights since turning professional, 14 of them by the knockout route. All were scheduled as 10-round bouts, but the fact that in meeting Carnera he faces the long, 15-round route, isn't causing Louis any concern as he works out for his match here Friday night against Natie Brown, of Washington.

Draws 15,000 Fans.

"I don't think those pictures were faked," said Joe, referring to the motion pictures of the bout in

Sarron Beats Rivers by Decision

Split Verdict Rendered After Bloody Battle; 2,500 Look On.

Davis Stops Sylvester; Ingram and Irving Are Winners.

By Bill McCormick.

PETE SARRON, the Birmingham buzzsaw, banged his way to a split-decision over Joe Rivers in a hectic, bloody, 10-round bout which headed a pleasing program of punch witnessed by 2,500 at the Auditorium last night.

At the end of 10 see-saw rounds, in which Sarron was floored for no count three times and Rivers himself kissed the canvas briefly, Sarron was declared the winner by virtue of the votes in his favor cast by Judge Carol Dunn and Referee Eddie La Fond. Judge Bob Eller awarded the fight to Rivers by a one-point margin. The Post score sheet showed Sarron a winner by 3½ points.

Roddy Davis won on a third-round knockout from Patsy Silvester, a New York lightweight, in a semifinal scheduled for six rounds. Silvester took the first round, in which he staggered the Washington lad three times with hard rights, but Davis battled back to take a big lead in the second by pounding Patsy to the floor twice for no count. Davis floored Silvester for the long count in the third with a hard right to the head, which paralyzed the New York battler's optic nerves, blinding him, and preventing his rising.

Landis, Bezenah Draw.

Mickey Landis, of Scranton, and Elmore Bezenah, a New York middleweight, huffed and puffed through six rounds to a draw in a boring preliminary. Bezenah could hit, but didn't, and Landis couldn't hit, but he outboxed Bezenah on The Post score sheet.

Ray (Kid) Ingram, Miami lightweight, punched his way into a unanimous decision over Al Raggone, New York, in a sizzling six-rounder. Raggone opened strong, but the Florida flogger pounded him down to way below par midway of the bout, then proceeded to sledge-hammer his way to victory.

Henry Irving scored a third-round knockout over George McCaron, a Scranton middleweight, in a curtain-raiser scheduled for four rounds. The Washington lad looped over a right to drop McCaron for the full count.

Prince Comixa, $11.10 Shot, Triumphs at Tropical by Length

Feudal Lord Is Second In Dash

All-Claiming Program Opens Final Week; 'Double' $239.

By the Associated Press.

TROPICAL PARK, Fla., March 25.—An all-claiming card ushered in the final full week of the Florida racing season here this afternoon. The fifth event, a six-furlong dash, brought out the best field. Prince Comixo, a consistent colt that has changed hands often, carried the silks of C. Murray to a hard-earned score. The son of Prince of Wales needed a whip lashing to get home by a length under apprentice Dupre.

J. E. Smallman's Feudal Lord, with Jockey Wright trying for his twentieth winner of the meeting, headed the Amalgamated Stable's Frederick, the favorite, for second money.

Prince Comixa paid $11.10 and ran the distance in 1:12 1-5. This was his second victory in a row. He was second in his other two outings this winter.

Breaks From Outside.

Breaking very fast from the outside, Prince Comixa shook off Idle Victory in the first quarter-mile. He then disposed of Frederick's challenge before entering the home lane well out in front. Feudal Lord, slow to begin, came with a belated rush in the short stretch and forced the pacemaker to the limit before conceding the purse.

Romola, a filly that has been showing dull form, shook off that languid feeling in the first race here today and won after the fashion of a 1-to-5 shot. With Jimmy Lynch in the saddle, the plater ran into a long lead and won by five lengths, unextended, to pay $39.20 for a $2 ticket. She ran the six furlongs in 1:12 1-5, a big improvement over her other Florida efforts. Seminole Queen, favorite in the field of 12, chased the winner from the start, and drove to the place, a half-length before the slow-starting Polly Rita.

Skotchy Is Winner.

Skotchy, an even-money choice with Wayne Wright up, obliged by scoring an easy victory in the second event, a dash for maiden juveniles of the male division. The son of Scotch Broom had the improved Jack Snipe as his chief opponent throughout the half-mile test. The favorite drew away in the final furlong, leaving Jack Snipe three lengths behind. Sighting Bar always held Surry safe for the short end of the purse, losing second money by a head.

The third race was just another case of "bet on Jockey Wright and go to sleep." Wayne broke Shuffle On in front and never was out of a daylight lead. The combination greeted the judges with three lengths to spare and returned $9.80. Standout made up a lot of ground in the last three furlongs, taking the place by a length from Boocap. The latter appeared short and is likely to be hard to beat with this race under her belt.

Romola and Shuffle On paid $239 for $2 in the daily double.

Nankin Victorious.

An ordinary lot of fillies performed in the fourth, a mile jaunt. Nankin overcame early difficulties to earn top honors under Eddie Litzenberger. Bye Bye Mary, the choice, was next in line, a length and a half back and four lengths in advance of Idle Flirt. Bye Bye Mary gained a lengthy lead in the first 6 furlongs. She faltered when challenged in the stretch by Nankin, which paid $8.40.

River Rose, an under-sized filly with plenty of heart, just lasted to nose out the heavily supported Sun Teatime in the one mile sixth contest. River Rose caught the favorite after rounding out of the back stretch. The filly's saddle slipped and Apprentice B. Cortelletty's feet slipped out of the stirrups, but he managed to keep his mount going just long enough to pay $8.70. Sun Teatime beat Merry Go Round by a length for the place award.

Salut d'Amour, $5.80, galloped to a four-length score over Dancing Boy in the nightcap. Walkalong was third.

Louis Confident Of Beating Primo which Carnera lost his title to Baer. "I think Baer was really trying to put Carnera away before the fight was stopped in the eleventh, and I know I could have stopped him before then."

Louis has put boxing "back on its feet" here. A crowd of more than 15,000—the biggest gathering to see a fight in Detroit for several years—saw him beat Patsy Perroni several weeks ago, and Friday night another crowd of 15,000 is expected.

The supporting card for the Louis-Brown match was announced today. Adolph Wiator, of Green Bay, Wis., one of those to last the limit with Louis, will meet Roy Larza, of Newark, N. J., in an eight-round match. Butch Weimer, of Phoenix, Ariz., meets John Vorce, of Detroit, in another eight-rounder, and in a six-round duel, Gene Stanley, of Detroit, will fight Al Diamond, of Newark, N. J.

Grand National Bets Activity on Increase

London, March 25 (AP).—With the Grand National Steeplechase only five days away, the betting call-over at the Victoria Club revealed more activity today.

Golden Miller, last year's winner, continued to rule the favorite at 7 to 2, with Thomond 2d, one of the American-owned horses, being quoted at 13 to 2.

Other odds were: Tapinois, 9-1; Delaneigie, 33-1; Castle Irwell, Reynoldstown, 20-1; Really True and Srienz, 25-1; Royal Ransom, 25-1.

At the Post . . .

Dear Al: Tropical Park, March 25.

I'm going to try to right tomorrow with Jockey Wayne Wright. The Idaho boy has six mounts, so I'm told, and I would not be surprised if he rode six winners. He had six mounts today and was in the money on each occasion. Every other rider, of any importance, is either on the banned list or has left this course. Wright hopes to ride at Bowie, but has been ordered to Kentucky to work some horses. If he finishes in time, he will be seen on the Maryland track the second week. Sixteen horses have been named for the $5,000 Derby Consolation here next Monday. Mantagna, Bloodroot and Brannon are among the leading entries. General Manager Frank Schuyler reports play of $2,513,230 for the first 12 days of this meeting—a $209,435 daily average—which ain't so bad. Clocker Mike is leaving here tomorrow for Bowie with instructions to pick up some good things at the Maryland course. I have supplied him with eating money, a pad and a pencil. It's up to him to make good.

First race—Dark Vive has been knocking at the door for some time and appears to have found a maiden field that suits. Wright is scheduled to ride. Be Shy is one of those Bradley things and may or may not be bearing down. Red Ensign to take care of the others.

Second race—Wright may make it two in a row with Dandy Jay. This fellow has a lot of speed and may do some real running for the Idaho saddle hustler. Fan just missed recently and will be in the thick of the going at the finish of this. Flight of Gold for the show.

Third race—The ancient Judge Schilling is another Wright mount and I can't pass by the old fellow. Carries 115 pounds, but is used to toting the heavy imposts. Happy Scot came back after a long rest to run a nice race. Squeeze Out for the show.

Fourth race—Playful Tour and Two Edged will battle it out in the day's juvenile jaunt. The first named is likely to draw Wright and I'm stringing along. Black Highbrow to take care of the others.

Fifth race—Fast Stride gets the call in the fifth. This is another Wright mount and he seems capable of nudging this one to the wire in front. Banish Fear is dangerous, but may be qualifying. Paradisical for the show end.

Sixth race—Chief A., breaking from the outside and in charge of Wright, seems the best suited of this field. Douglas F. is due to awake soon and could be a factor here on best races. Alkali is a possibility.

Seventh race—Kibitzer's recent races have been none too encouraging. However, this is a cheap field and I see no reason for mistakes. Morning Fair and Sleepy Joe to complete the money bracket.

Faber Assumes Charge of Team for Saturday.

Maryland's locrosse ten yesterday began polishing up its offense for the opening match of the season against an alumni team Saturday at College Park. Jack Faber, who has been concerned with football until now, has assumed command of the stickmen, assigning Roy Pollock to the grid squad.

The Alumni will present a formidable team, including four from the 1934 combination. The line-up will include Snyder, "South" Sothoron, Rufus Vincent, Bus Pfau, Morris Nicholson, Gordon Pugh, Ed Ronkin, Fred Steiber, Joe Beckman, Vic Wingate, Sam Crosthwait, Fred Invernizzi, Gabby Street and Gus Crowthers.

Maryland's first collegiate match is booked for the home bailiwick on April 4, with Harvard supplying the opposition.

Four From U.S. Seek British Golf Title

Lawson Little Will Lead Small Contingent in Amateur in May.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 25.—A small but promising delegation of American golfers will make the trip across the big water hole to England for the British amateur championship, starting May 20, at the Royal Lytham St. Anne's course.

While the United States Golf Association has not yet received his application for certification of his amateur standng in this country—a duty imposed on it by the British association—William Lawson Little, jr., of San Francisco, will be on hand to defend the honors he won so sensationally a year ago.

The British and amateur champion's fellow countrymen who will vie with him for the crown will include T. Suffern Tailer and Richard M. (Dick) Chapman, among the ablest of the Metropolitan district's players, and Robert W. Knolles, jr., of Boston.

First British Venture.

It will be the first British venture for this trio, although Tailer, winner of the Metropolitan amateur championship in 1932 and 1934, has had previous experiences of foreign fairways. Chapman's achievements last year included winning the Westchester match play championship and the Sweetser Victory Cup 54-hole medal play event. Knolles is a member of the Country Club at Brookline, Mass., where the 1934 amateur championship was played.

George Terry, Dunlop, jr., wintering in Pinehurst, sent word north today he will not play in the British championship this year. Dunlap made unsuccessful bids for the title in 1933 and 1934. In both championships the former amateur and intercollegiate titleholder was eliminated in the semi-final round—two years ago by Michael Scott and last year by James Wallace, who was subjected to a crushing defeat by Little in the final.

Faces Heavy Odds.

When Little begins defense of the British title the odds against his repeating will be at least 100 to 1 for no American has ever won the title two years in a row and that distinction can be claimed by only two Britons—H. G. Hutchinson in 1886 and 1887 and Harold Hilton in 1900 and 1901.

Little hasn't played any too impressively during the mid-winter season in tournaments in his native bailiwick on the Pacific Coast, but the husky Stanford University shotmaker expects to sharpen his game during the Masters' Tournament at Augusta next week, give it the finishing touches later in the vicinity of Pinehurst and then embark for England sometime during the end of April. He plans to pass up the American Open and remain abroad for the British Open.

SHUFFLE ON was sent to the front just after the start and, perfectly rated along, drew away easily in final furlong. STANDOUT moved up with a determined bid around turn, but never threatened the winner. BOOCAP ran up on inside, saved ground, and had no excuse. FLAG WAVE began to close ground around turn, but quit badly. GUIDING LIGHT stopped fast in last half-mile. YELLOW METAL came from far back.

NANKIN was forced to overcome early interference, went up on outside, caught BYE BYE MARY at furlong pole, and won going away. BYE BYE MARY was sent into lead going into first turn, showed good speed for seven furlongs, then tired. IDLE FLIRT finished gamely. OLD LADY, badly outrun in early part, closed very fast. MADDENING ran a fair race. MIRA ran her race.

PRINCE COMIXA, showing excellent speed, ran into lead early, saved ground all the way, and stood long drive gamely. FEUDAL LORD, badly outrun to the final quarter-mile, where he closed with a rush, was a fast-going second. FREDRICK broke fast, but could not hold his position and tired at end. HASTINIP came around field entering stretch and closed very fast. COL. GREENE was never the outside all the way. FIRE MASK showed a flash of early speed. IDLE VICTORY quit.

SIXTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $700. Claiming price, $1,200. For fillies and mares, 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:25½. Off at 5:29½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—RIVER ROSE, $8.70, $4.10, $3.00; SUN TEATIME, $3.50, $3.60; MERRY-GO-ROUND, $4.50.

RIVER ROSE, under light weight, followed pace to the middle of the turn, where she ran into lead and just lasted to win. SUN TEATIME had plenty of speed, dropped back on turn, but came again at end, and would have won in another stride. MERRY-GO-ROUND moved up with a rush and was a fast-going third. MARGE made her bid turning out of back stretch, but weakened. JAKOVIA had no mishap.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $700. Claiming price, $1,050. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 6:00. Off at 6:03½. Winner, M. E. SALUT D'AMOUR was sent to the front with a rush, and then rated along, drew away easily in stretch. DANCING BOY was shut off at the half-mile and taken to the outside and closed fast. WALKALONG was poorly ridden; should have been closer up. TRUE SENTIMENT had no excuse. SOUND MONEY lacked speed.

Company F, Olmsted Grill Advance to Tourney Semi-Finals

Fleetwings Victorious, 37 to 16

Boys Club Blues Defeat Northeast Boys to Gain Final.

TWO unlimited dark horses, Company F and Olmsted Grill, pranced into the semifinal round last night at Tech High School, where the annual District A. A. U. basket ball tournament is approaching a climax. Company F, although pressed all the way, outlasted Stewart's Pharmacy to annex a 39-33 victory, while Olmsted trampled Mount Vernon, 50-14.

In the 115-pound class the Boys Club Fleetwings defeated the Cavaliers, 37-16, to enter the final round, while the Boys Club Blues gained the final in the 100-pound class by nosing out the Northeast Boys Club, 47-41.

Wins in Last Minutes.

"Spider" Chase, Rufus Vincent and "Knocky" Thomas contrived to swing the pendulum of victory toward Company F in the waning minutes of play after the Pharmacists had rallied and tied the score at 27-all. They were deadlocked at half time, 15-15.

Bob McVean, who made most of his shots from corners, and Dick Fitzgerald and Dick Galiher were outstanding for the losers.

Olmsted Grill had absolutely no trouble with Mount Vernon after the first two minutes of play and was coasting along with a 22-11 advantage at the intermission. The inability of Bob Snyder, Mount Vernon ace, to hit his stride, hurt the Churchmen's cause.

Dantzic, Mitchell and Kemp led the winning attack and were well supported by their mates.

Lead, 12 to 1, at Half.

A foul shot in the first half made by Smith was the best the Northeast Boys Club 100-pounders could do against the Boys Club Blues. Charley Reynolds' charges boasted a 12-1 lead at half and literally ran away from their opponents in the final half, with Gannon and Poston showing the way.

After a rather close first half, which found the Fleetwings ahead, 13-7 at the intermission, the Cavaliers' defense collapsed and the Boys Club five went on to win as it pleased. Saffren, Schwaner and Much starred for the winners. Barry was best for the Cavaliers.

Murphy, G. U., Official Of Eastern Conference

Penn State Supplants Bucknell in College Sports Group.

H. GABRIEL MURPHY, director of athletics at Georgetown University, was elected vice president of the Eastern Intercollegiate Conference, at a reorganization meeting of the circuit in Morgantown, W. Va.

Murphy was honored together with Earl Yeomans, of Temple University, elected president, and Neil Fleming, Penn State, who was chosen secretary. They assume office immediately for the term of one year.

Penn State, where a renaissance in sports seems to be underway, was awarded the conference basket ball franchise vacated by Bucknell which was obliged to withdraw because its playing facilities were inadequate for league purposes. The conference does not function in other fields of sport.

Rumors that Bucknell had decided to surrender its franchise, heard early last autumn—which were not denied—led to innumerable others concerning the ultimate fate of the conference. Some had New York University, Syracuse and Colgate coming into the organization, others gave rise to the belief that the loop would disband.

Penn State's entry into the conference apparently means that the circuit will consist of six teams again next season, although expansion to eight teams, providing they are of the desired caliber, will be welcomed by conference members.

North Virginia League in Shape

Franchises Paid Schedule Committee Ready; Umpires Assigned.

THE Northern Virginia Baseball League completed arrangements last night for the coming season. Meeting with The Washington Post Sandlot Association at The Post Building, representatives of the teams sealed the two divisions of the league as organized by The Post Association a week ago with the exception that Falls Church was moved to the Red Section and Fairfax Station shifted from the Red Section to the White Section. This was done on the discovery that Falls Church finished ahead of Fairfax Station last year.

Franchise fees of $10 per team were paid to J. C. Buchanan, president and treasurer of the league by the following teams of the Red Section: Arlington, Ballston, Falls Church and Herndon, and of the White Section: Aldie, Fairfax Station, Marshall, Millwod and Purcellville. Middlezurg of the Red Section and McLean of the White Section sent enough satisfactory assurances that their franchises will be paid without delay to prevent themselves being voted out of the circuit.

A committee was appointed by President Buchanan to draw up a schedule for the league. W. Wheatley, secretary of the Ballston Club, and L. McCarthy, an accomplished schedule-maker, will join with President Buchanan as the schedule-making committee. The committee will meet Monday or Tuesday to form the schedule, copies of which will be sent the managers.

The league will open April 28. President James Green, of the District Association of Umpires was present at the meeting and the league made arrangement with him for the hiring of association umpires again this season.

Win in Six-Day Race.

Paris, March 25 (AP).—Paul Brocardo and Marcel Guimbretiere tonight won Paris' six-day bike race.

Norman Hill, of San Jose, Calif., and his Australian partner, George Dempsey, withdrew from the race two hours before the finish.

Millers Get 2 Pitchers.

Deland, Fla., March 25 (AP).—Manager Donie Bush of the Minneapolis Baseball Club today announced he had obtained two pitchers from Cleveland of the American League. They are Bill Perrin, southpaw and Steve Sundra, right-hander.

H. GABRIEL MURPHY.

Eastern Five Ready for Tourney

Capital Team to Leave Tomorrow; Glen Falls Play Draws Champs.

ONE more brisk workout today and Eastern High's championship basket ball crew embarks for the North country, where it will carry the colors of the Capital and the South Atlantic section into the sixteenth annual Eastern States interscholastic classic in the wealthy little city of Glens Falls, N. Y., Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

For over a decade and a half now, this thriving town on the upper Hudson and in the foothills of the Adirondacks has devoted a part of the amazing wealth of its 20,000 population to this high and prep school tournament. Sponsoring it with the same zest and reams of publicity that it does the famous Glens Falls Open Golf tournament, which usually attracts the finest of the world's linksmen to its velvety courses, Glens Falls has made it the biggest scholastic event of the year for the Eastern United States.

Only the foremost teams in the East are extended invitations and from those considered, eight are finally accepted. As a result of this careful caste-like discrimination, Eastern will face such powerful opposition as New Jersey's champions from Passaic High, the name interwoven with high school basket ball in the East as that of Dempsey is with the ring.

N. Y. Champions Entered.

New York State's perennial champions from Mount Pleasant High of Schenectady, the team which has lost but three games in 192 played in the last three years, is an entry. From Philadelphia will come Brown Preparatory School, Pennsylvania's prep school champ and winner of the recent Lafayette University interscholastic tournament, unbeaten in 25 games. Out of Massachusetts comes Wilbraham Academy, prep school champions of the Bay State, another undefeated team, while St. Francis Prep, Catholic champions of New York City, looms another decided threat on the horizon.

Coach Charlie Guyon has put his squad through an intensive series of practice sessions for over a week, convinced that its one defeat in 21 high school contests, that by three points to John Marshall High of Richmond, which it had already beaten, 34 to 24, was the one bad game in the team's system.

Last night, the team worked out against Tommy Nolan, Harry Bassin and Carroll Shore of the Georgetown Freshmen; Bernie Lieb, Catholic University's All-District center, and Charlie McVean, of C. U. The collegians have been highly impressed by the smooth offensive of the high school during the past week and if their predictions are worth anything it will be a victory-bent team which leaves for Glens Falls tomorrow afternoon.

Clash for State Title.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., March 25.—Philippi's Collegians and the Huntington Rosedales, winners of northern and southern State independent basket ball tournaments, respectively, will clash here March 31 in a playoff for the State title.

Colonials' Nine To Play 15 Contests

Pixlee Spikes Reports of 'No Team;' Only Two Regulars Back.

GEORGE WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY will have a baseball team this spring, Director of Athletics Jim Pixlee announced yesterday, thereby spiking rumors the Colonials had abandoned the sport. Ed Morris, who coached the first two teams, again will be at the helm.

Morris has only two regulars back from last season to carry through a stiff 15-game schedule, Capt. Cal Griffith, a pitcher, and Bill Albert, an outfielder. Clarence Berg, catcher and infielder, and Bill Tarver, who saw some action last season, probably will be of invaluable aid.

The squad, which has been working out informally for two weeks, will stage its first formal drill this afternoon on the Ellipse field. All home games will be played at Griffith Stadium.

April 1, Dartmouth, at home; 6, Long Island, at home; 8, Washington College, at home; 15, Washington Nationals, at Griffith Stadium, tentative; 16, Delaware, away; 22, Richmond, away, tentative; 24, Washington College, away; 27, West Virginia, at home.

Los Angeles, March 25 (AP).—The Chicago Cubs bowed today to the fast-traveling Seattle Indians of the Pacific Coast League in an exhibition game, 3 to 2.

Kowalik and Casey divided the pitching assignment for the National Leaguers and held Seattle to seven hits, but Pickrell and Vinci, of the Indians, were even more effective. Vinci won the game single-handed when he smashed a home run in the eighth, Casey was pitching at the time.

Wood to Test Speedboat Today

Miss America X Runs in Salt Water at Miami Beach.

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., March 25. For the first time tomorrow, Gar Wood's Miss America X, world's fastest boat, will taste the advantages of salt water and sea level in a race against time.

Wood announced he will put the big craft through a test run on Indian Creek, weather permitting, preparatory to an attempt to better its own speed mark of 124.86 miles an hour before the week is out.

Miss America is virtually the same boat which set the record in the Detroit River, Michigan, in September, 1932, shortly after she successfully staved off Kaye Don's challenge for the Harmsworth Trophy.

New superchargers which, in block tests, raised the combined horse-power of the four motors from 6,400 to approximately 7,500 are the important change.

Salt Water Seen Aid.

Wood hopes this new power margin, combined with the buoyancy of sea water and better carburetion in this low altitude, will enable him to better decisively his mark for the measured two-way mile.

Miss America was delivered here from Algonac, Mich., last week on a railway flat car and rolled to the edge of Biscayne Bay.

The superchargers were installed here under her master's direction. Today, still out of the water, the engines were turned over the first time. The propeller's will be attached in the morning.

Then, unless strong winds or other unfavorable conditions intervene, the boat will get her salt water baptism in a run in the sheltered stretches of Indian Creek.

Wood set the probable time at high tide, a few minutes after noon.

Odis Porter, veteran timer at the Indianapolis Speedway, was reported on his way here with the electrical apparatus which will catch official attempts. It appeared unlikely he would arrive in time to permit a try on the record tomorrow.

Millions Await Draw on Sweeps

$5,000,000 in Prizes Are Hinging on Results.

Dublin, March 25 (U.P.).—Under the direction of the chief of Irish Free State police and amid ceremony, the Irish Hospital Sweepstakes slips that mean fortune for their lucky holders, tomorrow will be drawn on the Grand National Steeplechase to be run over the hazardous Aintree course at Liverpool Friday.

A world-wide radio hook-up and fast cables will inform ticket holders if their luck in the draw for cash prizes approximating $5,000,000, with the chief stake running to $150,000.

Twenty-eight final acceptors were left in the Grand National field tonight and a ticket on any one of the group will be worth a small fortune, with the value ranging upward among the favorites, which include Miss Dorothy Paget's Golden Miller, last year's Grand National winner; Jock Whitney's Thomond II, F. E. Peek's Tavinois, Maj. Noel Furlong's Reynoldstown, and George H. Bostwick's Castle Irwell.

D. C. Golfer Shoots 83 With No. 3 Iron

Carmichael Wins Wager at Congressional.

Troy Carmichael, one of Congressional Country Club's better-known golfers, believes that one club actually can do the work of a bagful.

Those who will testify that Carmichael is a mighty man with a single golf stick are Harvey Cobb and Maj. Frank M. Davison. Over the week-end Carmichael wagered he could defeat Cobb and Davison with a No. 3 iron as against their entire set of woods and irons.

Carmichael shot a fine 83, as opposed to 85 and 87 for Davison and Cobb.

"It's all in concentrating on the shot," the silver-haired Carmichael, a real student of the game, said. "The No. 3 iron is a valuable club at times, and I had enough faith in it to drive, play run-up shots and putt rather well."

Dodgers Will Retain Brooklyn Boy Pitcher

Orlando, Fla., March 25 (AP).—A Brooklyn boy has made good with the Brooklyn Dodgers. Manager Casey Stengel certified this today when he announced that Harry Eisenstadt, who was serving them up only a couple of years ago for the James Madison High School team in Brooklyn, had won a berth on the Dodgers' pitching staff.

Eisenstadt's impressive hurling in two games against the Detroit Tigers clinched the place for him. Casey intimated he would be used tomorrow in an exhibition game with Montreal.

Amateur Grid Association Formed

Bulk of Receipts Will Go Toward Assisting Needy Students.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 25.—The country-wide popularity of football, attested by the crowds attending college and professional games, has led to the organization of the National Amateur Football Association.

The purpose of the organization was explained today by its creator, George W. Graves, of Detroit, president of the Michigan A. A. U.

The association will have teams in all important towns and cities of the country and, as member clubs of District Association of the Amateur Athletic Union of the United States, compete for State and national championships.

To Have Two Divisions.

There will be two divisions in each club. The junior division will have football teams of boys under 17, with all players certified as amateurs by the A. A. U.

Industrial firms will be permitted to enter teams, Graves said.

Receipts of the games will be shared by the State and National A. A. U., with the bulk to go into an educational fund to assist needy students through college. Athletic proficiency will not necessarily determine the selection of the students who benefit by the fund, Graves said. The fund will be administered by a board of trustees to which the following have been nominated: Fielding H. Yost, University of Michigan; Glenn S. Warner, Temple University; Alfred Masters, Stanford University, and Daniel E. McGugin, Vanderbilt University.

William M. Heston, of Detroit, former University of Michigan star, is tentatively named as president of the new association.

Among those nominated as State commissioners, to direct activities in their States, are such former stars as Johnny McGovern, Morley Drury, W. W. ("Pudge") Heffelfinger, Ralph Scott, Dr. Charles M. Wharton, A. A. Stagg, Maj. L. S. De Vore, C. W. ("Doc") Spears and Jack Corbett.

Graves will be chairman of the advisory board and delegate to the A. A. U.

Shorey Shoots 76, Ties With Mackenzie

Two Pros Divide Prize in Rainy Sweepstakes at Congressional.

EQUIPPED with umbrellas, golf slickers and other implements used to combat a pelting rain, Roland Mackenzie, host pro, and Mel Shorey, diminutive East Potomac tutor, shot creditable 76s yesterday at Congressional Country Club to split first prize in an informal professional sweepstakes. Both were four over par for the route.

Shorey put together a brace of 38s, while Mackenzie, after taking 40 on the first nine, played the outgoing side in 36, one over par.

Walter Cunningham, stocky Burning Tree pro, did a 38—40—78, and the rest of the contestants—Claggett Stevens, Congressional assistant; Frank Cunningham, Burning Tree assistant; Al Treder, of Manor; Leo Walper, of Bethesda, and George Diffenbaugh, of Indian Spring—scored 79s each.

Dates for tournaments and team matches to be held under the jurisdiction of the District Women's Golf Association were approved yesterday at a meeting of the executive committee at the home of Mrs. Donald Scott, treasurer.

The following schedule will be observed in the opening team matches scheduled next week:

April 1—Second teams, at Columbia Country Club; 9, Columbia vs. Indian Spring; 9:20, Woodmont vs. Beaver Dam; 9:40, Manor vs. Kenwood; 10, Army-Navy vs. Chevy Chase. Congressional, bye.

April 2, first teams at Indian Spring—9:00, first tee, Indian Spring vs. Beaver Dam; 10:00, tenth tee, Army-Navy vs. Washington; 9:20, first tee, Columbia vs. Woodmont; 9:20, tenth tee, Congressional vs. Kenwood; 9:40, first tee, Chevy Chase vs. Manor.

The committee also announced a reduction in the entrance fee of all tournaments, except the District championship from $1 to 50 cents. A $1.50 fee will be charged for the District.

Miss Susan Hacker, vice president, presided in the absence of Mrs. Charles K. Wing, president, who is ill in Walter Reed Hospital.

Gene Larkin, Woodmont Country Club pro, returned from a month's vacation at his home in Philadelphia, and settled down to the task of rearranging his golf shop and preparing for an active season. The freckle-faced pro admitted he hasn't played a round in five months, but doesn't regret it, inasmuch as a long layoff often helps one's game, he says.

Larkin stated he would retain Dick Barnsley as his assistant. The influx of new members at Woodmont and the heavy schedule for the club members are expected to keep Larkin busy.

Roger Peacock, Indian Spring manager and Middle Atlantic champion, is due back this week from a trip to Panama, where he has been golfing and sightseeing with his wife and father and mother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. George Shields.

Cliff Spencer announced that 65 new members resulted from the most recent membership of the Beaver Dam club from March 12 to 24.

Frostburg Team Signs 19 Baseball Players

Frostburg, Md., March 25.—The Frostburg Giants of the Cumberland and Georges Creek Baseball League have signed 19 players, according to an announcement made today by Ray Middleton, secretary and business manager.

Players under contract are William Weibrecht, George Kyle, Charles Walbert, Robert Weibrecht, Eddie Gaughan, Oliver Heagher, Billy Spates, Oliver Jackson and Frank Duncan, infielders; Francis Rouge, Bill Bevens, Clifford Bevens, Ray Middleton and "Tuffy" Sullivan, outfielders; Francis Dickle, John Crowe and "Darb" Winebrenner, pitchers; John Tippen and Francis Conlon, catchers. Andy Dunn will be manager. George Kennedy is president of the club and George "Lefty" Kyle, treasurer.

Basket Ball Rules Changes Urged by G. U., C. U. Coaches

TWO District college basket ball coaches yesterday spoke out against certain rules in the 1934 code of court ethics, while at the University of Alabama, Hank Crisp rules committee representative in the South Atlantic zone, began sorting replies from an annual questionnaire sent to the coaches.

At Catholic University "Fed" Cotton, whose team hung up the best record in town last season, had two important changes to suggest and logical arguments to support them. Fred Mesmer, Georgetown coach, voiced only one objection to the entire '34 rule book—the three-second time limit on handling the ball within the free-throw lane.

Cotton, in replying to a query regarding the tap-off, voted to retain this feature of the game which he compared to the kick-off in football. But, to insure an even break for all teams, he suggested that centers be limited in size to a maximum height, as for example, 6 feet.

The Cardinal tutor further suggested that with regard to fouls the offended team be given its choice of accepting or rejecting the penalty, as the rule is applied in football. This would be of value only when a player dribbling in to the basket continued after being fouled and made a successful shot.

Cotton pointed out that it is the smart thing to foul a dribbler before he actually shoots, for then the basket—if made—automatically is voided and the penalty is only one free throw, which is an important item in games decided by 1 or 2 points.

Although his teams do not employ the block play, Mesmer is of the opinion that it is an unjust handicap to a team that is attempting a pivot from within the foul zone, when the ball must be passed out of the circle within 3 seconds. His argument is that the rule does not give a team enough time to successfully run a play.

Stocks Droop With Railroads In Light Trade

Better Tone at Close Keeps Losses Within Slight Fractions.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 25.—Wall Street sang the railroad blues again today, as a sinking spell in the carrier shares at mid-day dragged the financial lists down substantially before pressure was lifted.

A better tone in late dealing, stimulated by recovery in staples, canceled much of the loss and in all but a few of the higher priced stocks, leaders confined their net losses to fractions. A few, especially in the nonferrous metal group, were able to register minor gains on the day.

The spectre of reorganizations in the offing for some of the financially weak rails, roads was again trotted out and dangled before the eyes of traders and the gloomy remarks of President W. W. Atterbury in the annual report of the Pennsylvania on the general rail picture, were fresh in Wall Street minds.

Pressure was concentrated for a time on some of the more vulnerable spots in the stock list, where some shares gave ground rather easily, but the turnover figure for the day, at 463,574 shares, gave no indication of any general disposition to press equities for sale. The Associated Press average for 60 stocks receded .2 of a point to 36.1. The 15 rails in the compilation were off .5 of a point, at 19.3.

Wheat Futures Rise on Damage

Cotton Advanced 19 to 20 Points by Short Covering and Buying.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 25.—New dust storms sweeping across Western plains and threatening increased damage to crops led late today to higher prices for wheat yet to be harvested.

On the other hand, wheat already in bins, was bearishly affected by weakness of the Liverpool market, and showed a disposition to recede to a lower level of values. Declines of Liverpool wheat prices were attributed to heavier offerings from France.

With most traders disinclined to move aggressively in either direction, wheat closed irregular, ⅝ off to ½ up, compared with Saturday's finish, May, 93¾@93⅞; corn, unchanged to ⅛ lower; May 77⅝@74; oats, unchanged to ⅜ off, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 10 cents.

Corn and oats prices developed independent weakness as a result of speculative selling pressure in the corn market, where buying power appeared limited. Provisions tardily responded to hog market upturns.

Further Devalution of the Dollar Is Predicted by Bankers, But No Action Is Expected Before Retirement of First Liberty Loan June 15.

By a Special Correspondent.

New York, March 25.—A growing conviction is developing among well-informed bankers here that some further devaluation of the dollar will take place, and that this is likely to be done by the fall of the year. The calling of the First Liberty Loan for payment June 15 will cause the Government to delay any such action at least until that time, however, it is generally believed.

This belief that further dollar devaluation impends is not based upon "a priori" reasoning. It does not reflect the view that the Administration is once again going to try to raise commodity prices and stimulate business recovery by the futile expedient of changing the gold content of the dollar. Rather, it is based chiefly upon reports received from foreign banking connections to the effect that Great Britain has sought recently to reach a private understanding with the United States on currency stabilization, and has found this country unwilling to join an agreement which would provide for a level of $4.50 for the pound sterling. This figure the British are understood to regard as the highest they can safely allow in returning to the gold standard.

Any higher quotation of the pound in terms of the dollar, the British fear, would leave their commodity price level, in terms of gold, too high as compared with that of the United States. A deflation of the British commodity price level, especially in view of the rigid labor costs imposed on Great Britain's industries by her strong labor unions, would endanger the business recovery she has recently enjoyed, the British fear, and might also undermine the nation's newly regained financial stability.

International Stability An Objective.

The conviction holds here that, sooner or later, the Roosevelt Administration will seek international currency stabilization as as a means of furthering the cause of domestic business recovery within this country. If the pound sterling should depreciate further, or if the gold bloc currencies should be depreciated because of internal pressure, the Administration is held likely to accede to the British insistence that the pound sterling can not be stabilized at its old parity with the dollar, or even at a small discount like 2 per cent which prevails in the foreign exchange market at the present time.

From the American point of view, it is difficult to see why the British are so insistent upon seeing the pound sterling depreciate by another 6 or 7 per cent in terms of the dollar before stabilizing. In our own case, depreciation by almost 41 per cent made relatively so little difference, that a financially literate nation like Great Britain might be expected to be tolerant and easy-going on the subject of an exact point for final stabilization. However, the British are not as strongly situated as the United States. Being much more dependent upon foreign trade than we are, their commodity price level is far more sensitive to changes in the external value of the pound than is the case in the United States, which is a self-contained nation by comparison. Also, the British are solicitous of the countries whose currencies are now tied closely to the pound sterling, several of which tend to have an unfavorable balance of payments.

Gold Reserve Act May Be Invoked.

When the Roosevelt Administration does decide to meet the British viewpoint half way and join a monetary stabilization agreement, it is felt that, as a means of placating popular and congressional inflationary sentiment at home, the gold content of the dollar will be reduced further through Presidential proclamation, in accordance with the terms of the gold reserve act of 1934. If the dollar were devalued down to 50 per cent of its old parity, the gold content would be cut 15.3 per cent from its existing level. Many believe that this final devaluation will be by a smaller amount, to bring the price of gold up from $35 to $40 per ounce.

Sterling would then be stabilized at $4.50 to $4.60 to the devalued dollar, according to the present expectation in these banking quarters. The present gold bloc currencies would be devalued, it is further expected, at one fell stroke and by varying amounts, in accordance with the desires of the various governments and the relative status of the commodity price levels in these countries.

Suicide Claims Drop 33% From $7,500,000 Peak

New York, March 25.—Although the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. paid nearly $5,000,000 in 1934, for death claims occasioned by suicide, this amount was almost $2,500,000 less than the total paid for such claims in the peak year of 1932; $300,000 less than in 1933, and nearly four times as great as the amount paid by the company to satisfy claims due to homicide last year.

Automobile fatalities accounted for the payment of $6,372,833, or 4.4 per cent of the total 1934 death claim disbursements. These are some of the highlights showing the health trend of a large cross-section of the American and Canadian populations—26,000,000 policyholders—that are reflected by an analysis of the insurance company's distribution of more than $153,000,000 in payment of death claims last year.

In breaking down the total to indicate the proportionate amounts for which various diseases were responsible, statisticians of the company also give a striking picture of the phenomenal improvement in tuberculosis mortality, describe a serious cancer situation, and show that heart diseases accounted for the greatest outlay of any disease classification.

Carbon Steel Down $3.

New York, March 25 (AP).—Prices filed with the American Iron & Steel Institute show that cold finished bars of carbon steel have been reduced $3 a ton at Cleveland. The new base price, effective April 1, is $2 per 100 pounds. The institute gave no explanation for the reduction, but it was said to be not indicative or any general lowering of steel price schedules for the second quarter.

Plan to Extend MortgageLoans Is Announced

Finance Companies With at Least $250,000 Capital Eligible.

By R. Karl von Lewinski.

A plan whereby any home financing corporation with capital funds of not less than $250,000 may, if qualified, make mortgage loans under the mutual insurance plan of the Federal housing act was announced here yesterday by Administrator James A. Moffett.

Couple with this another readjustment of the insured mortgage plan procedure now makes it possible for institutions having trust funds under their control, to invest them in insured mortgages. The new privileges, local bankers asserted yesterday, would materially aid the progress that was being made in the home loan field here.

Liberalization of the rules of the mutual mortgage insurance plan, Moffett explained, would admit an entire new field of institutions hitherto ineligible. Among them would be mortgage companies and bankers, trust companies and building and loan firms.

Qualification Requirements.

To qualify as lenders under this new arrangement, corporations will be required to submit information to the Housing Administration attesting their responsibility and ability to properly service mortgages.

Applicants must be chartered institutions having succession, must be subject to supervision of some governmental agency, or in lieu of this requirement, must submit applications with independent, detailed audits of their books made by certified public accountants and "reflecting a condition satisfactory to the administrator."

Capital funds of corporations filing application must not be less than $250,000.

Virtually all corporations now engaged in home financing, either through direct lending or by purchasing mortgages fulfilling such provisions, may now make application for approval as lenders.

It was further explained that correspondents or local representatives of the larger life insurance companies come under this classification. The new plan will thus permit the larger companies to invest in insured mortgages covering dwellings in all sections of the Nation.

Capital Transit Co. stock sold at a new low of 20¼ on the Washington Stock Exchange yesterday. Washington Gas 5s of 1958 sold at 105 for $500. National Bank of Washington sold at 105½, while Lanston Monotype sold at 50.

In a survey of the business done by 22 leading stock exchanges of the country during the first four months of registration, the Washington exchanges ranked 18, the Securities & Exchange Commission announced yesterday. Volume of business during the period on the local exchange was $625,648.

Housing Act Lifts Am. Radiator Out of Red First Time in 3 Years

U. S., Despite High Living Standard, "Woefully Behind Other Nations" in Recognising Housing Problem, Says Chairman C. M. Woolley.

New York, March 25.—The national housing act has brought long belated recognition of the fact that a housing problem exists in this country and as a result of the activity created under it, his company was able to show a profit last year for the first time in three years, Clarence M. Woolley, chairman of the board of the American Radiator and Standard Sanitary Corporation, declared yesterday in his annual report to stockholders.

The United States, despite its pride in the high standard of living that it has created "has been woefully behind other nations" in recognizing its housing problem, he said.

"The important thing," he added in speaking of the housing act, "is not so much the total volume of work it has created, as it is the awakening of national consciousness respecting housing."

Total Gain $8,327,787.

Net profit for his company last year was $1,455,237 compared with a loss of $881,575 for the year before and a loss of $5,990,985.94 for 1932, a total gain of $8,327,787. This was accomplished, Mr. Woolley explained, largely as a result of the work in home modernization or repairs created under the housing act and in spite of a continued decline in new residential construction, which was about 95 per cent below the average for the years from 1925 through 1929.

"To emerge from the realm of red into black figures is most gratifying," said Mr. Woolley. "Even more significant, however, for us and for the Nation is the fact that the national housing act represents recognition of the undoubted need for a housing program in this country.

"During the past five years the total number of homes erected has not been sufficient to meet the need created by the natural forces of marriage, fire and obsolescence. Figures for 257 cities show 296,000 home units built in the period, as compared with 1,992,000 for the previous five years.

One Home for 16 Marriages.

"There has been only one home erected for every 16 marriages, while from 1925 through 1929 there was a new home constructed for every three marriages. Fire loss has been estimated at 30,000 homes a year, and, on the basis of a 40-year obsolescence period for buildings, 511,000 homes have become obsolete every year since 1930.

"Last year the construction of new homes declined from 24,557 built in 1933 to 20,846, although total construction increased about 4 per cent, apparently due to the erection of large buildings under the Government public works program."

In England, Mr. Woolley said, where 2,200,000 homes have been built as part of a recovery program, employment last May was within 10,000 of what it was in the peak industrial period of 1929, according to a survey made then. He cited England, France, Germany and Scandinavia as countries where the entire industrial situation had been improved by working out a solution to the problem of housing people in the lower income brackets.

Mr. Woolley declared that the European affiliates of his company had all showed progress during the year just past and that the building programs under way in these countries promised consistent progress for the future. Charges for depreciation and depletion made by the company last year were $4,291,544 as compared with $4,151,153 for 1933 and the company's surplus as of December 31, 1934 was $31,568,627. The net asset or book value of the common stock of the company stands at $12.03 per share.

Unemployment Is 9,898,000, Down 2.4 Pct. in Month

New York, March 25.—The total number of unemployed workers in February, 1935, was 9,898,000, according to the regular monthly estimate of the National Industrial Conference Board, made public today. This is a decrease of 242,000, or 2.4 per cent from the preceding month, but an increase of 25,000, or 0.3 per cent over February, 1934.

From January to February, 1935, the decreases in unemployment, by industrial groups, were: Manufacturing and mechanical industries, 240,000; domestic and personal service, 36,000; mining, 5,000; miscellaneous industry, 8,000. Unemployment in trade showed an increase of 11,000, and transportation, 10,000.

Bar Silver 60 Cents, Highest Since 1928

New York, March 25 (AP). — Bar silver for industrial use was quoted today at 60 cents an ounce, an advance of 1 cent over the previous day and the highest recorded level since October 26, 1928.

The previous high for this year was 59¼ cents, established about a week ago.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London—Prices on the stock exchange started the week with a cheerful tone owing to the more favorable view in regard to continental politics. Business, however, was restrained pending the outcome of the Berlin talks. Gilt-edged securities, home rails, industrials and transatlantic issues improved, but closed below their best for the day. Rafflis, copper shares and foreign bonds declined in the afternoon. The market closed irregularly.

Paris—With trading slow, prices turned heavy on the bourse today awaiting the result of the Berlin conversation. The list dropped slightly, but recovered later. The closing was indecisive.

Berlin—After opening firm but with a small turnover, prices on the bourse closed at their highest levels for the session.

Bond Market Dragged Down By Rail Issues

Federal Obligations and Foreigns Hold Fairly Firm.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 25.—The corporate section of the bond market was pulled down by secondary rails today, but United States Governments held steady to firm and the foreign department was subjected to less pressure.

Specific news was lacking, but rumor mongers dressed up the old stories about receiverships and organizations for some of the carriers that are known to be in bad financial shape, and buyers remained in their hideouts, except when bonds were offered at substantial concessions.

The Government department again ignored developments in Washington. Closing prices were from 2/32ds higher in liberties and indirect obligations to as much as ¼ of a point in active Treasury issues.

Utility bonds failed to find the kind of support that enabled most of the utility shares to pull away from a generally lower trend in the stock market.

A notable soft spot in the railroad group were obligations of the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific, which were 1 to 3 or more points below Saturday's close.

Transfers aggregated $8,279,000, par value, compared with $10,246,000 last Friday.

River Freight Tonnage Shows Marked Gains

Cincinnati, March 25 (AP).—Marked increases in freight tonnage on the Ohio, Monongahela and Allegheny Rivers were recorded during January and February of this year, over the comparable period of 1934, Col. R. G. Powell, United States Division engineer, reported today.

Tonnage on the Ohio River increased from 901,495 to 1,428,293 tons; on the Monongahela, from 1,808,031 to 2,974,481, and on the Allegheny from 189,676 to 238,276.

Dairy Products Reach New Top

Drought Puts Industry in Its Best Position Since 1930.

New York, March 25.—The harassments which beset recovery in the dairy industry at the beginning of 1934, in the form of oversupply of milk, excessive stocks of butter and cheese, and declining demand for all products was eliminated almost completely before the year had been brought to a close, according to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc. The most severe drought of a century left benefits in its wake which have enabled the industry to make a fresh start from the strongest position attained since 1830, with all indications pointing to uninterrupted progress during 1935.

For the first time in four years, the oversupply condition has been removed, with little likelihood of its early return, as the number of cows had been reduced 3 to 5 per cent from the record high at the beginning of 1934, and the constant elimination of the nonprofitable and low-producing cows, together with the advanced feed costs, will prevent any early increase in the size of herds.

Because of the present close relationship of production and consumption, the outlook is particularly encouraging, but the maintenance of the relationship will depend largely on the moisture conditions from now on in the chief dairying States, in order to insure the necessary pasturage.

Surplus coal cars on February 28 totaled 78,337, an increase of 16,920 cars above the previous period, while surplus box cars totaled 191,613, a decrease of 2,744 cars compared with February 14.

DICK TRACY — Headed for the Sticks

Walt Mason, Himself

John Law.

Crime never was a winning game, and lately it's become a frost; for years the law seemed halt and lame and hardly worth its heavy cost. The sinners gave it many blows and left it ragged and forlorn, they put their fingers to the nose and laughed at law with joyous scorn. But recently a change is felt, and justice makes a daily hit; John Law has tightened up his belt, and rolled his sleeves up quite a bit. Napoleons of the realm of crime who once were lords in their domain, are now in prison doing time, and wishing they were loose again. And many another erstwhile lord who won a fierce and red renown, is planted now beneath the sward, with slugs of lead to hold him down. The Public Enemies now feel that life's a thing of dreads and fears, as to their hide-out haunts they reel, with bullets whizzing round their ears. And so I'd not advise the young to take up crime in these sad days; their withers surely will be wrung, the law will spoil their ablest plays. The law is eager and alert, where once it moved with laggard feet, and it will take the sinner's shirt and his suspenders, all complete. The law is full of vim and pep, where once it was as slow as fate; no odds how swift the sinner's step, the law will get him, soon or late. And there are penalties and pains which are so drastic and severe that they'll discourage sinful swains who once at punishments would jeer. So Clarence, seek some honest means, some plan employed by worthy guys, by which to earn your pork and beans, and you'll be voted sane and wise.

BUT TRACY, YOU HAD NOTHING TO DO WITH ARSON'S ESCAPE. IT WAS I WHO GAVE HIM THE POTATO FROM WHICH HE WHITTLED HIS GUN. I CAN'T LET YOU PAY FOR A MISTAKE I MADE.

Fish Confesses To Mutilation Of Four Others

Aged Killer Tells of Attacking Three More Children and Young Man.

By the Associated Press.

Ossining, N. Y., March 5.—Albert H. Fish, sentenced to die in the electric chair for the slaying of 10-year-old Grace Budd, confessed tonight to mutilation and probable murder of three other children and a young man.

He killed two of his victims, the 65-year-old man told Warden George A. Casey, of Westchester County Jail, but was uncertain whether the other two had died.

Fish told part of his story en route here from White Plains, where he was sentenced to die during the week of April 29, and completed it upon his arrival at Sing Sing Prison.

Admits Attacks on 100.

During the recent trial, defense attorneys, pleading for an insanity verdict, said Fish had admitted attacks on 100 children during his lifetime.

Fish said he attacked and mutilated Thomas Bedden, 24, whom he described as "witless," in 1910 at Wilmington, Del. He kept the helpless youth prisoner in his room for several days, Fish asserted, then fled from Wilmington without ascertaining whether his victim died.

While living in a houseboat along the Virginia side of the Potomac opposite Georgetown University, Washington, Fish continued, he enticed a Negro boy aboard. After keeping the lad prisoner for two weeks, he became frightened by the approach of another houseboat. Fearing the screams of the boy would arouse suspicion, Fish fled.

He wasn't sure today of the time, but thought it was 15 or 20 years ago. Who the boy was or whether he died, the old man did not know.

Choked Boy to Death.

In 1924, the confession continued, the perverted murderer attacked Francis McDonnell, 10, at Port Richmond, Staten Island, and choked him to death. He took the body to a swamp to dismember it but was frightened away by the approach of a milkman's cart.

Reviewing previous admission of the kidnaping and murder of Billy Gaffney, 4, at Astoria, Long Island, in 1927, Fish said he took the boy to an abandoned automobile, choked him to death, dumped the dismembered body into burlap bags and threw them into a swamp.

Sentenced in Supreme Court today for the Budd slaying, Fish faltered the words "thank you" and turned away. He was convicted Friday of murdering the child in a deserted East Irvington (N. Y.) cottage where he mutilated her body.

'New Owner' Takes $60 In Robbery at Cafe

"I'm the new owner," announced a stranger early yesterday as he walked into a restaurant in the 800 block of Thirteenth street northwest and calmly took $60 from a cash register.

A woman cashier smiled politely and the stranger walked out. But last night the "new owner" was sought by police. James Fliakas said he had not sold his cafe and was still sole owner, manager and boss.

The stranger, he told investigators, must have been a man with whom he discussed the restaurant's possible sale last week. The prospective buyer said he would return—and apparently did.

Edwards Loses Fight To Escape the Chair

Pittsburgh, March 24 (AP).—Robert Allen Edwards, whose tragic romance with Freda McKechnie ended in what the Nation came to know as the "American Tragedy" slaying, lost his fight today for a new trial.

The Pennsylvania Supreme Court affirmed his sentence to die in the electric chair, upholding the Commonwealth's contention that the dapper 22-year-old, self-styled "ladies' man" murdered the young woman "to rid himself of his entangling liason" so he might be free to marry his college sweetheart, Margaret Crain.
